BAT THINKS CUPID IS REAL "COME BACK" KID

(By United Press Leased Wire.) DENVER, March 17.—According to Batting Nelson, there is hopes of his effecting a reconciliation with his bride of a few weeks, Fay King Nelson, a Denver cartoonist.

of the women of my home town thought they wouldn't live up to their Christian duty if they didn't reveal what they said to be my dark and shady past to Mrs. Nelson. "With this seed planted, the insidious aspersions continued after my wife came back to Denver and have not stopped yet. It is entirely possible that there will be no divorce after all, and that we will be reconciled."

Real Painless Dentistry

It is Painless Dentistry you want, come to me—I guarantee it. I have my own anesthetic; I do not have to rely on some anesthetic manufactured in some eastern laboratory.

DO NOT WAIT Because you are doing yourself a great injustice, and because I know what my own anesthetic will do. Remember, I do not put you to sleep.

ONE ROUND FOR SAM LANGFORD (By United Press Leased Wire.) BRISBANE, March 17.—Jim Barry of Chicago was knocked out in the first round by Sam Langford, the Boston negro heavyweight, here today. Barry had absolutely no chance against the clever Langford. It is expected that Langford will soon call for America.

BARBERS ANNOUNCE SCHEDULE

Barbers' A. C. baseball team have announced the following schedule for the coming season. They have a number of open dates that they desire to fill with local or outside teams. Managers wanting games on the Barbers' open dates phone to E. W. Woodworth, Main 575.

MORNING BLOSSOMS

The Sperry All-Stars are going to be one of the fastest teams in the city, and the mill officials are sparing no expense to outfit the club properly.

Guess Blossom Marquard, nee Seeley, did not lose any time after marrying the "Rube" in telling him to put his fist to a baseball contract. She knows all about his acting ability. The benedict is on his way to join McGraw.

Curtis Coleman, former Tiger, has left his Oregon ranch for Rochester, where he will hold down second this year.

OUR QUESTION BOX Dear Sir: How can I get a good idea of the dimensions of the Seattle ball park?—Uplifted Brow.

Bill Baird, a youngster trying out with Seattle, seems to be a "reg'lar phenom." He is as fast as a streak.

Brooks, the attenuated southpaw who played first for Victoria last season, will again struggle over the pebbles this year.

Sharpe and Sullivan, two former Pirate players, will cover short and second, respectively, for the Sperry All-Stars this year.

UNBROKEN FINGERS OF BASE BALL ARE READY FOR THE GONG

WORK IN TRAINING CAMPS HAS LIMBERED VALUABLE HANDS FOR FLAG RACES—HANDLING OF BASEBALL A MARVELOUS SIGHT TO STRANGERS.

WEST BADEN, Ind., March 17.—Unbroken fingers in baseball are as far apart as Chance and Murphy.

A "baseball finger" is no longer the hall mark of the professional player. Viewing the game for the first time, seeing the ball hurled about by a smoothly working infield; watching the players hurl themselves in front of a hard-hit ball, grasp it with gloved hand and with scarcely perceptible hesitation "shoot" it to another infielder, the novice spectator wonders how many fingers each player breaks in a season.

As a matter of fact, the number of men who suffer from broken digital bones in the course of a season is remarkably small. It is the exception to the rule when an infielder's hands suffer; the catcher's, yes! Chiefly because of foul tips, but the infielders are too expert to get their fingers in the path of the ball.

Boys who learn the game before they are out on short breeches aren't apt to catch a ball "girl fashion"; if they did their pals would ridicule them out of the game, or broken fingers would force them out. It is a sure road to broken bones to try and catch a thrown or batted ball with fingers extended like grappling hooks toward the ball.

There are a few cardinal principles for catching a ball that must be adhered to if the player hopes to become recognized as a tamer of unruly pianos.

Watch the shortstop grab a red hot ground ball. It comes to him on the hop and the chances are he takes it on the second bound for he must play the ball, not let it play him. He gets the ball between his feet, or at one side, stopping it with gloved hand and throwing quickly. The stopping and throwing is one sweeping motion of arms and body.

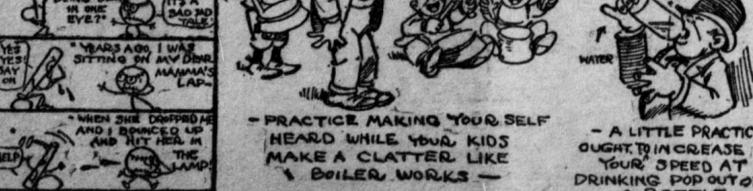

Watch the player catch a ball breast high. Note his hands; fingers straight up, palms outward. See him take the ball near his knees, fingers pointing earthward, palms open toward the ball.

Or take note of a hard hit line drive that the fielder spears with one hand if the ball is over his head he leaps, so the ball strikes in the palm of his glove; if it is at one side, he may take it running, with hand extended.

The outfielder with "baseball sense" is usually so placed when catching a fly that he gets the ball in front, breast high, in which case his palms are turned upward, the fingers pointing toward his shoulder, or waist high, his palms being upward, fingers up and outward.

Sometimes a ball is hit so fast the fielders haven't time to get set and must take the ball over his shoulder while running. In this case both hands go up in front of his shoulder, fingers pointing up and outward, palms backward.

If you want to get a sharp line between the proper and improper

ANDERSON AND BROWN FIGHT A DRAW

(By United Press Leased Wire.) VERNON, Cal., March 15.—

Bud Anderson and K. O. Brown battled twenty rounds to a draw here Saturday afternoon. For the first nineteen rounds it looked like Anderson would win, either by a knockout or a decision, but the New York product came back in the twentieth round and had the Medford, Oregon, boy all but out. The referee called the bout a draw, which decision was well received by the crowd.

Anderson led for practically the greater part of the twenty rounds, and aside from the poor showing he made in the last round was entitled to a decision.

A large crowd of rooters from Medford and Portland, Ore., were present at the ringside, and even before the contest had started had managed to acquaint the rest of the audience with the fact that they were backing Anderson to win.

The promoters are anxious to hook the boys up for a return match, and it is probable that they will meet in another twenty round contest next month.

Short Sport

Leo Zelinsky, matchmaker of the Woodmen's A. C., is counting on pulling off bi-weekly smokers.

George Chip, a middleweight boxer in the East, claims to have invented a new blow. He calls his speciality a "delayed punch" and seems to believe that it is really something new.

Pat Hunt, who is billed to meet "Foxy" Miller, is a sensation in local boxing circles. Pat is a lightweight and has a punch that is really marvelous for his weight.

Smokers every Friday night at Dreamland rink in Seattle. The Washington A. C. and Dan Salt alternate in pulling them off.

Joe Bayley appears in the main event next Friday. Bayley is the lightweight champion of Canada.

The naval militia are planning on holding a smoker early next month. There are many good athletes numbered among the navy boys and a good smoker is assured if their plans formulate.

Had Bud Anderson had a little more experience he would have won from K. O. Brown by a K. O. in the eleventh round of their fight last Saturday.

Sam Langford won from Jim Barry in one round. We should worry.

Dick Forey has joined the naval militia and will appear at their smoker, if it is held, next month.

Frank Dabroe is billed to meet Frank Farmer at Sellick next Saturday night. The winner of this match will get a chance in Tacoma, with Joe Bonds, soon.

TODAY IS ST. PATRICKS DAY!

And it will be celebrated by countless thousands who do honor to Ireland's Patron Saint. May the many who celebrate, think deeply and reverence the great good St. Patrick has done in this world, and remember, that to the good all things are possible.
