

Special Features of Interest To The Times' Women Readers

HOW ALERTNESS WON FINE JOB

Mrs. Harriet Moulton is private secretary of the chief of one of the largest companies in the steel and iron industry. She receives a salary of about $10,000 a year.

"Every woman can do exactly what I have done," said Mrs. Moulton when questioned about her success. "Those 'highest up' are contently seeking aides. The man or woman who shows a desire to be that aide, coupled with a positive preparation therefor, will naturally be selected.

"My husband used to study the many angles of the iron and steel industry when he came home nights. I loved to work with him. Then I found myself penniless, with an infant to support. What was I to do? Department store, law office, millinery—all of those things are open to a woman who has her own resources to consider.

"I decided that my knowledge of iron and steel ought to be of some value. In order to make use of it, I studied shorthand, and then secured a position as stenographer. After a while, I began to read the files of old correspondence. I learned the principles of the business. I became head stenographer.

"One day I noticed a letter from the head of a firm, declining a reasonable offer of a very large quantity of a certain type of steel rails on the ground that the demand for them was slight. In a journal I had noticed there was a project on foot for the erection of a railroad in South America. I called up the foreign company's United States agent. He confirmed the report.

"The rails that were offered us were the very kind that road would want. I went into the chief's office and told him. He leaned back in his chair and said: 'What are you doing in that office? You are coming in here to help me.' I became his secretary.

A New Face Without Surgical Skin Peeling

People do not approve of the surgical operation of face peeling. It's too radical, too often done. There's a better way of removing offensive complexion and one that is entirely safe in its results. Ordinary mercerized wax causes the devitalized scar skin to come off, but gradually and gently. Unlike the surgical process, the skin is not forcibly taken off in big pieces all at once, but almost invisible flaky particles are absorbed by the wax, and from ten days to two weeks are required to complete the transformation. There's no pain, no discomfort.

Nature renews complexion the same way by shedding its cutaneous scales day by day. But deficient circulation, or other abnormal conditions may interfere with the shedding—a "bad complexion" results. Then mercerized wax assists Nature by hastening the removal of the aged, faded or discolored top skin. Thus only the lively, young, healthy, new skin is in evidence, as in robust girlhood. This is why mercerized wax produces the indescribable beauty of ever-renewing youth. The wax is put on at night like cold cream, and washed off in the morning. You can procure it at any druggist's. FAMOUS ACTRESS TELLS WHY WOMEN LIKE DOGS

Some woman who evidently had been as unfortunate in her choice of men friends as she was fortunate in her choice of a dog made that oft-quoted speech: "The more I see of men the better I like dogs."

Like all smart epigrams, the intimation is hardly true, for there are splendid men, as well as fine dogs, in the world.

The normal woman likes men as well as they like her, and that is a good deal. The antagonism between the sexes which we hear so much about from the suffragets is all tommyrot.

If a woman looks for friendship, comradeship, respect and love in men, she'll get it, and if she is looking for trouble she'll be very apt to find it as well.

If, however, she is insatiable for unqualified and unquestioning loyalty she had better pin her faith to a dog.

I have never yet found a human being who sometimes will not question the opinion and judgment of the one best beloved, and I have never yet known a love that has always thought the loved one perfect.

Dogs seem to do this, but dogs, poor things, cannot talk, you know, and one can never tell just what they think when they caper about us all ready to go out with us and we send them back home disconsolate.

True, they go back with the most unhappy air and they welcome us with effusion when you return, but I'll wager they sometimes say a few things to themselves about us that we would not care to hear.

However, I am very fond of my dog, and I have seen an expression of unquestioning love and adoration in his eyes that I never expect to see in the eyes of any man. He is always about when I want him and I can send him away when I grow tired of him. You will all agree in these particulars: He has the advantage over one's men friends.

For a long time the Pekinese spaniel has been the pet of society. Pierpont Morgan had one for many years that was always with him and generally in his arms.

I find them, however, very hard to take care of when one is traveling as much as I. So I have pinned my faith and given my love to a Boston terrier.

Do you know that I sometimes think the reason we like dogs so well is because they are always flattering us.

Your dog tells you in dog language every day that you are the god who moves the world, that no one can compare with you and the sun will cease to shine when you cease to be.

It's silent adoration, but none the less it is always incense before our egotism.

I think women feel the need of this unquestioning love more than men, and that is why you see so many women making playthings and pets of dogs.

FINE TOP FOR PUDDING

After baking a bread pudding, cover the top with marshmallows and put back into the oven, until they melt and brown. This forms a delicious mock-meringue top that fills the place of the hard sauce usually served with bread pudding.

Cynthia Grey's Answers

Why Shouldn't You?
Dear Miss Grey: My husband has been gone three months, and is making good money. He couldn't get work here, so he went to another city.

He hasn't send me any money. Don't you think he should send me some? There is work here now for him. Don't you think he should come home?

I am living with my folks or I would have to make my own living. All my people and friends live here, and I think he should come home. He writes to me every week, but never sends me any money. I will be pleased to hear from you.

A DEVOTED WIFE.
A.—There are perhaps very few who view your situation as I do; but I always say exactly what I think.

If you have no children, and if by staying with your parents you inconvenience them, why not get out and make your own living? No, I can see no reason on earth why your husband should send you money when you fail to make his home your home, and take the household duties of a wife on your shoulders.

Neither do I see why he should return to where you are if he has a good position where he is. When a woman marries, she is supposed to place home and husband above friends and relatives. Why don't you go where he is?

Not Proper.
Dear Miss Grey: We are two young ladies who have been entertaining a young man of evenings. We do not care about his company. Now do you think it proper for us to allow him to call?

Please answer as soon as possible as we are anxious to know what to do.

T. B. A.—I see no reason why I should encourage his visits, if you do not care for his company.

A Girl of Thirteen.
Dear Miss Grey: I am almost thirteen years old, and wear my dress half way to my shoe-tops, and the girls at school make fun of me because I wear my dresses so long. Please tell me what you think.

L. M. W. A.—A girl of 13 should wear her dresses at least to her shoe-tops.

Illegal in Either Case.
Dear Miss Grey: Supposing a man was married and had been parted from his wife for several years, but had no divorce, and the lady married again, would her marriage be legal? And after she married, if the man married would this marriage be legal?

CURLEY. A.—Neither marriage would be legal.

To Remove Inkstains.
Dear Miss Grey: What will take ink spots out of new Indian ink? I have got some of it on an embroidery collar that I have done some hard work on. Thanking you in advance,

MRS. A. C. B. A.—Salts of lemon, which may be purchased at a drug store, will remove the ink stain.

First of all this composition is poisonous and care must be exercised about cuts, burns or scratches on the hands.

Wet the stain with pure cold water, then rub the salts well into the stained portion. Continue to rub and wash until all the stain has been removed. Wash all trace of the salts from the goods as it tends to weaken the fibers.

Contracts With Minors.
Dear Miss Grey: I am 18; bought a lot on contract a year ago; leased it for one year to a party who has promised that he will build according to restrictions.

What can the party I bought of do if said party does not build accordingly? As I am not twenty-one, can he take the lot back with what I have paid?

Please answer through your columns at once and oblige.

A SUBSCRIBER.

A.—A contract made with a minor is not legal. If the terms of the contract are not adhered to, the land may be forfeited or redeemed with payments.

A Market for Jokes.
Dear Miss Grey: I have a large number of jokes and anecdotes which I think have sufficient merit to make them marketable.

Will you please give me through the columns of your department the name and address of some newspaper syndicates or companies with whom I might market my material? Very truly, causes for such appeal to the court. This seems to be the kind of thing that nearly always drives a wife desperate. Therefore, the husband who wishes to infuriate her uses worse than abusive language. No fellow does use such terrible words, however, unless he has a bad conscience or is a make a man call his wife names his wife. Plain anger does not hard drinker or thinks he ate she can never forget. That such talk has a disastrous bodily effect upon a woman is too evident by the flushed and hollow cheeks and feverish eyes she wears to the lawyer's office when about to apply for divorce.

LITERATURE.

A.—I advise you to get the addresses of "Life," "Judge," "Puck" and other comic publications from a book store and write them regarding your material.

Once past, never refer to an explosion or its cause. Re-establish a silent bond of sympathy, without which all else is useless. Strive for such self-control that after a slight gust your good

STAY AND SOOTHE HIM, YOU OUGHT TO KNOW THE WAY TO DO THAT.

MY DEAR ELEANOR—

You write me that if I knew the talk you had to hear from your husband I would be amazed. Not at all! Given certain conditions, any man uses words much like other men's language. That is, unless he is over-civilized and, therefore, almost too fastidious to live with. Yet nothing is so wearing on a wife as coarse and brutal language, and I say what I do, supposing that Richard would not go so far. I do not believe that man wants to talk badly.

Nip his language in the bud that the habit need not grow. Begin by running away, not farther than the next room, perhaps, but out of your husband's sight. The object of his wrath gone, his rage will cool. If convinced that you are not the object of his anger stay and soothe him. You ought to know the way to do that.

Do you realize what can happen if you feed a man's rage? I do. Bad language is a way of saying, "I hate you." Numberless bills of complaint for divorce on file would show you how often "mental anguish" is one of the
