Tariff, The American Woman And The Clothes She Wears

IDA TARBELL SHOWS HOW THE PASSAGE OF THE UNDERWOOD BILL WILL BRING ABOUT THE MANUFACTURE OF GOODS THAT WILL BE REAL GOODS—NOT SHODDY STUCK WITH GLUE!

BY IDA M. TARBELL, Author of "The Tariff in Our Times," "The Life of Lincoln" and "History of Standard Oil." Written Exclusively for Readers of the Times. (Copyright, 1913, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

It was never so difficult in any country run by machinery, as our modern countries are, to get cheap and moderate-priced clothing which will wear well, as it is today in our own United States!

the high tariff which cuts our clothing off from competition with that of the old world, where people are trained to believe in quality and demand it, and where manufacturers are not only proud of the quality of what they make, but indeed could not keep their trade if they did not give it!

When the tariff was adopted in this country one of the principles everybody insisted on was it should never be so high as to release our manufacturers from the necessity of making things which would wear as well as they do anywhere in the world. In many things essential to comfort this has been forgotten. The duties have been so high that competition has been destroyed the American manufacturer, unmoored in his market, has come to care nothing for durability but EVERYTHING FOR LOOKS—and the American housewife has had to take what she could get for her price.

If the price increases the poor man cannot afford to go up with it. They must continue to buy a $2.50 pair of shoes, a $12.50 suit and a $2 hat. The merchant meets this demand by changing not the price, but the quality of the goods.

Not long ago I went through a factory with a shoe man where 10,000 or more pairs of $2.50 shoes are turned out every day. The profit on a pair is very small indeed. He told me of the increased cost of every material. Thread cost more, leather and lining are more. He could not make the shoe for $2.50, but people could only pay $2.50; therefore, it had been necessary to change the quality of the material. He showed me the leather and linings which he had used in 1900 and which he was using now. They were decidedly inferior.

That is, the man and woman who buys the $2.50 shoe is getting a poorer shoe and will have to buy more pairs or go without.

The muslin of which cheap clothing is now made is not as good for the price as 10 years ago. The material is more open—that is, you are not getting the same number of threads to the square inch as you used to. People complain that the laundry wears out their cottons and linens and they show their garments full of holes, which they charge to acids used in washing and to rough handling by maids. Nine cases out of ten—perhaps 99 out of 100—the fault is in the cloth. It was little better than cheese cloth when it came from the loom, but it had been so treated that the careless purchaser believed it good thick cotton—and so it was thick with stiffening, which disappeared when it was wet!

The most conspicuous deterioration in quality is in woolen goods. Here we have our worst failure in attempting to establish an industry by a high duty. We have been trying for years, by taxing wool and woolen goods, to supply our market and we are still unable to produce much over 40 per cent of what we use. We probably never could do more if we kept up our present duties, which have made us pay fully twice as much for woolen goods as we would pay if there were no duty.

Last year in Europe I bought for $1 a yard goods which would have cost me $2.50 in New York, and I found serge at 67 cents a yard which sells for $1.37 1/2 here; mohair for 47 cents which retails here for $1!

THESE PRICES MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE WOMAN ON SMALL MEANS TO BUY WOOLEN GOODS ANY LONGER. She must take all kinds of substitutes and if you analyze these substitutes, which of course are sold here for "ALL WOOL," you will find them practically ALL COTTON!

Cheap sweaters, babies' shirts, blankets, dress goods, scores of articles which the salesmen swear to you are "every stitch wool," if boiled in caustic alkali, come out as good as nothing. If they have been wool nothing would have remained!

Now cotton is a useful material; cotton underclothing, if well knit and finished, is durable and well-fitting; cotton blankets are useful for summer; cotton worsted makes a good looking suit at the start.

But none of these things are warm and none of them look well long.

Is there a woman alive who does not want real wool blankets to cover her children in winter; real wool stockings and coats to senate, and in case of the removal of the president from office or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of said office, shall take the presidential chair.

send them to school in? Still there are hundreds of thousands of women in this country today who cannot get them. They must take imitations which are mainly cotton. Now this result is almost entirely due to the duties of nearly 100 per cent which we have had to pay on wools. It is poor business for any country to take away a necessity of life from the masses of its people, though in doing so it may be able to keep alive a great industry.

Snow-white tells the seven good, little dwarfs all about how she happened to come to the small house in the woods.

the center of the floor was a little, low table set for a meal. There were seven little plates, seven knives and forks and seven drinking cups. Close to the wall there were seven little beds, each covered with a spotless quilt. These appealed to poor Snow-white, for she was so tired. So she decided to eat a little porridge and drink a little out of each small cup of wine and then go to bed. The first little bed was too long, the next was too short. Something was wrong about the next. It was not till she tried the seventh that she found one which was really comfortable. Then she cuddled down and went to dreamland.

Letters To Cynthia Grey

You Would Make a Great Wrong Greater? Dear Miss Grey: I am a young married woman and would be happy but for one thing. Shortly after we were married I did wrong, an awful wrong, and there is but one man who knows it, and he says if I do not do as he says he will tell my husband what happened two years ago. Miss Grey, do tell me what to do. I am so afraid he will tell my husband, and that would mean separation, and I am trying so hard to do right now. Can there be anything done so he won't tell? He is a low, mean man, but my husband thinks he is all right. Please don't tell me to tell my husband myself, for he would never forgive me. I am waiting anxiously for an answer. You have given others good advice, do the same by me and I will love you always for it. DELPHINE. A.—First of all, I am going to ask you some questions: You would be willing to make a great wrong greater, would you? You would rather heap one deceit upon another, would you; than to be brave and pay the price of the wrong, which is truthfulness? You would sit blind and tongue-tied and have this wrong reach your husband's ears through another, who would likely warp and twist the real truth and paint it still blacker, instead of calling

ATTRACTIVE HAIR

The Elements that Make Beautiful Hair Found in Parisian Sage.

If your hair is not as soft and beautiful, or as fresh and full as that of some friend whose hair you admire, don't give up and think you can't help it. Do what she does—take care of your hair. It needs daily attention just as much as your plants need watering.

If your hair is too thin, make it grow like any other plant. If it is too dry and brittle soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp and dandruff will go.

Parisian Sage is just what you need to make your scalp healthy and free from dandruff—your hair wavy, lustrous and abundant. Get a fifty cent bottle at the druggists or toilet counter. Just pour a little of the liquid on a cloth or sponge and rub lightly over the hair, taking a small strand at a time. Rub a little into the scalp.
