Paris Says Your Parasol Must Indicate Your Morals!

Tacoma Women Receive Advance Styles on the Most Unusual Fashion That Ever Came "Across"

Did you know, fair Miss Tacoma, that your every characteristic, your complexion, shape and even morals, are to be broadly advertised every nice day this summer that you pass down Pacific avenue?

MISS MYRTLE STONE.

Figure out for yourself what would be the most becoming! But the very latest are the parasols designed to illustrate morals. Every other kind of parasol has arrived in Tacoma, but the "moral" sun-shades have not come as yet. They are expected, for the girl who is on the square. A three-cornered one of black satin lined with lavender chiffon for the charmer who is one of the inevitable "triangle" love affair. There's an Empire model smothered in picot edged ruffles for the giddy butterfly lass and a bell shaped beauty in crepe sprinkled with tiny bouquets of flowers for the belle of the beach. Manager A. Pepper, of the parasol department in the Peoples Store, is responsible for much of this dissertation on "ombrellas."

MISS EVELYN BENOIT.

But this parasol expert has the goods to demonstrate with. He has every kind of late Parisian parasol, except the "moral" ones, as we said before. And the sun-shades for this season, despite the "language" that they speak, are beauties. The new dome shape is undoubtedly the prettiest creation ever seen in Tacoma. Yesterday a group of the prettiest girls in the Peoples Store posed for the Times photographer, each holding one of the latest filmy silk creations of the Parisian parasol maker's shop. As far as beauty in the picture is concerned, it is hard to tell which you will choose first—the pretty sales girls or the new parasols. The girls are not from Paris—but, well, judge for yourself.

Cynthia Grey's Answers

A Flirting Wife. Dear Miss Grey: I am a young man of 21 and would like your advice. Was married some seven months ago. I cannot say I am unhappy, but my wife is still younger than I am and a city girl, while I am a Wyoming puncher so you can readily see where the trouble is. She is the best little girl on the coast and treats me like a prince, other than she has her city ways of teasing me, such as flirting when she knows I am watching her. I have tried every means I know of to keep her from this little act, but she will tell me I should have married some girl who would let me tell her who to speak to, also says I knew her before we were married, which is true. Although I knew it, I thought she would quit it after marriage. I don't believe she would go out with another fellow under any circumstances, yet it keeps me worrying afraid she will turn from me. She does not ask for one dollar for clothes more than she really needs, as she dresses very much as she thinks we are able to afford. She also helps me in every way to save money, so you see she has only the one little fault. As to quarreling over the matter, I never did quarrel and never shall, as I love her too much for that. Now, Miss Grey, please tell me what you think the best plan to try and break her of this one habit. Yours for success, A COW PUNCHER.

A MOTHER. A.—If the marriage laws of California were the same 10 years ago as now, he would not be legally married, as one year must elapse between the entry of the suit and the final judgment "which restores them to the status of single persons and permits either to remarry." His children, however, are legitimate, and can place a claim on him for all the duties and responsibilities of a father.

Marriage Laws. Dear Miss Grey: I will greatly appreciate it if you will answer the following question: If a man gets a divorce in the east and the courts tell him not to re-marry for one year and a half, and he goes to California in two months and re-marries, would he be legally married? That has been ten years ago and he has two children now.
