BILLIE BURKE is now at Carlsbad, after her recent illness. Unlike her usual blithesome self, Billie has written an essay on the power of mind over bodily ills. It's on page five today. And there is more truth than fiction in Billie's article.

NEW YORKER SHOT DOWN BY GUNMEN

BABY'S JACKET BRINGS LUCK TO EVELYN

SPOUSE OF THAW GREETED BY ENTHUSIASTIC AUDIENCE AT HER FIRST APPEARANCE IN HAMMERSTEIN'S THEATRE IN NEW YORK — DANCER MAKES CURTAIN SPEECH.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—New Yorkers are today discussing the wonderful welcome given to Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who made her first appearance on the stage in this country since 1904 at Hammerstein's Victoria theater yesterday afternoon in her dancing act with Jack Clifford. She received a great welcome.

When the curtain was raised and she appeared the waiting audience received a surprise. Instead of the usual entry, Mrs. Thaw poked her head timidly through the curtains, as though making certain that the coast was clear, and, encouraged by the round of applause, she beckoned to her partner and the dance began.

One of the features of her act was a new glide, a sort of mixture of all dances now in vogue, with variations. At the end of her act the audience called the pair again and again. Mrs. Thaw was obliged to step before the curtain. She was obviously and sincerely overcome and could only say, "Thank you, thank you, very much!" When seen in her dressing room after her performance she was surrounded by an enthusiastic circle of admirers.

"Do you know what has brought me luck?" she asked as she fumbled with her bodice and drew out a tiny white jacket and held it up.

"It is this; it is my baby's first jacket, and I wear it as a talisman. This afternoon's reception proves again that it brings me luck."

Mrs. Thaw received an even more cordial reception at the evening performance than in the afternoon.

WILSON IS SURE OF PEACE SOON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(By United Press.)—Following the reelection of former Governor John Lind of Minnesota as the president's personal representative in the City of Mexico, the administration today is confident of peace as soon as he will reach there. Lind will endeavor to get influential Mexicans to force Huerta to restore peace. He will also investigate the question of raising the embargo on the importation of American arms and ammunition to help the situation.

POSES FROM LIFE BY THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN AMERICA

♦♦♦♦♦ Another surprise for the readers of our famous "Saturday Short Stories for Summer." ♦♦♦♦♦

Pauline Frederick, called America's most beautiful woman, as she looks in a street costume.

Did YOU think it possible to improve our presentation of these superlative tales of love by the great ROBERT W. CHAMBERS, the great O. HENRY and the great ROBERT MORRIS, illustrated, too, as they have been by JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG, R. M. CHOSY and DAN SAYRE GROESBECK?

Well, neither did we until— BUT LISTEN! Pauline Frederick, the reigning star of the big pageant-drama, "Joseph and His Brethren," and the actress whom Harrison Fisher, creator of "The American Girl," declares is THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN ALL AMERICA, has just finished a series of poses from life to illustrate some of these stories!

HERE YOU WILL SEE A WOMAN, WONDERFULLY BEAUTIFUL AS ANY GIBSON OR FLAGG HEROINE, BUT ALIVE, REALLY DOING WHAT THE AUTHOR'S DREAM-GIRL DID IN HIS VISION!

IT WILL BE JUST AS IF IT HAD ALL ACTUALLY HAPPENED WHEN THE MOVIE-MAN WAS PASSING BY!

The first story Miss Frederick will illustrate will be "HOLDING HANDS," GOVERNEUR MORRIS' charming tale of "Little Miss Blythe," who didn't know whether to marry rich, middle-aged "Bob" or poor, young Mister Masters.

The picture is as exquisite as a water color and twice as realistic. It is love's young dream caught forever by the "Pinkerton detective lens!"

YOU CAN SEE IT SATURDAY IN THE TIMES.

PT. DEFIANCE TUNNEL CAVES IN; MAN HURT

EARTH GIVES WAY AND SEVERAL WORKMEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPES FROM DEATH.

Forty men narrowly escaped being buried alive at 1:20 this morning when 200 feet of the Pt. Defiance tunnel caved in, smashing the huge timbers that held the earth, into kindling, and seriously injuring one workman. The accident happened 400 feet west of the Pt. Defiance car line. According to Foreman A. O. Stanley, who has charge of the night crew, the earth gave way as a result of a leakage in the water mains that run over the tunnel.

When the men started to work on the night shift a slight change in the position of the timbers was noticed of from three to four inches, but no thought was given to the matter. At 1:20, without warning, a big pile of loose sand and gravel plunged in upon them. The big timbers overhead protected them in their escape to the mouth. A man named "Frenchy" was caught in the debris and suffered a broken leg. He was rushed to the Tacoma Private Sanitarium, where his injuries are being attended to. The others escaped with slight bruises.

The extent of the damage is said to be slight and work will be resumed with an extra crew to guard against delay.

CARS TO STOP ON NEAR SIDE

After the 15th of this month when you wish to board a car in this city be sure to stand on the near side of the street. If you don't you will miss your car for beginning on the 15th of this month the T. R. & P. will put into effect a new rule respecting the stopping points of all street cars.

This rule will affect all corners in Tacoma with few exceptions. Signs prominently displayed will indicate where the street cars will stop on the far side of the street.

PRIMA DONNA RESTING HERE

Yvonne de Treville, famous European prima donna, now essaying the role of manager-actress, is in Tacoma, considering a costume recital for next winter and incidentally enjoying the scenery.

DIGGS-CAMINETTI WHITE SLAVE CASES START IN SAN FRANCISCO COURT

Marsha Warrington, Sacramento, Cal., girl who eloped with Maury I. Diggs, former state architect, who deserted his wife and child. He is now facing prosecution on a charge of white slavery. Diggs' defense will attack the reputation of Miss Warrington, and tenderloin characters of San Francisco and Sacramento have been summoned to testify during the trial.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 5.—The Diggs-Caminetti white slave case, which recently created a sensational scandal in national politics, came up for trial here in Federal Judge Van Fleet's court today.

Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore Reche, special prosecutors, will conduct the case. This is the case that resulted in the resignation of John L. McNab, who claimed that interference by Attorney General McReynolds prevented him prosecuting rich and powerful defendants—the Diggs-Caminetti case in particular. The appointment of Thos. Hayden, who later resigned, as a special prosecutor, brought down another shower of criticism on McReynolds, because Hayden was said to be a personal friend of Caminetti.

Maury I. Diggs, former state architect, is the son of a wealthy Sacramento, Cal., family. Diggs senior at one time was state senator. Drew Caminetti is the son of Anthony Caminetti, commissioner of immigration. Both are married, with families. Caminetti has two children and Diggs has one child.

They eloped to Reno, Nev., January 15, 1913, with two high school girls, Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris. After eluding the police for a week they were finally captured while living together in a cottage under assumed names. Until the Reno escapade both girls had borne good reputations.

Marsha Warrington is the daughter of the Western Pacific ticket agent of Sacramento, Cal., and Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man, also of the state capital.

Six indictments were returned against Caminetti and Diggs—four against Caminetti and two against Diggs. They were charged with white slavery, conspiracy to violate the white slave traffic act and with transporting women for immoral purposes.

Diggs and Caminetti were recently arraigned before Federal Judge Morrow on the violation of the Mann act indictment. They have already pleaded not guilty to the conspiracy charge and will go to trial on that indictment August 6.

Diggs has had subpoenas issued for 10 habitues of the beach and Barbary Coast resorts to testify as to the character of Marsha Warrington, whom he is accused of transporting to Reno for immoral purposes. A few days ago he caused the summoning of 30 witnesses in Sacramento, all habitues of the night life, for the same purpose.

FOUR GUNMEN OPEN FIRE ON SUPPOSED SPY

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Expected to have been furnishing the authorities with information against the gangsters, William Lustig, whose brother is an attorney in District Attorney Whitman's office, was shot down early today in much the same manner as Herman Rosenthal was murdered. He entered "Humpty" Jackson's restaurant with a woman. Shortly afterward the woman left. Later a black automobile stopped at the curb, and four men emerged, all firing at Lustig, who sat on the steps of the back door of the restaurant. Three bullets took effect. The four men dropped their revolvers, jumped into the automobile, and disappeared. It is said that Lustig will recover, although his wounds are serious.

Walters in the restaurant were unable to furnish the police with a description of the girl or the four gunmen. It is believed the shooting had been planned for some time. The police suspect that members of "Dopy" Benny's gang had something to do with the affair.

CHICAGO TO LEAD CITIES IN ABOLISHING THE UNSPEAKABLE TANGO DANCE

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Chicago has come to the front as the very first city in the United States to abolish the dancing tango in public restaurants. The city aldermen have just fastened the final clamp on the offensive dance—and all because of a little French poster printed on a summer park menu cover!

A sub-committee, quite a while back, had been chosen by the city council to consider the restaurant "dancing teas" and the suggestive cabaret. But no radical action was taken, despite evidence introduced by Maj. M. L. C. Furkhauser, second deputy of police, which alleged that the tango, the bunny huge, the turkey trot were decidedly out of place in a public dining place.

Then, one evening, the menu-cover was introduced as "Exhibit A." It was emblazoned in greens, reds and blues, and depicted a young couple in the embrace of the tango.

"Is the dance as bad as that?" gasped all the city fathers in unison. "It's far worse," testified the mayor. That picture is mild compared to the real thing, as it's done right across the streets from this city hall!

Active work on the drafting of an ordinance against mingling tango courses with meals was begun. The measure now only awaits the signature of the mayor, and that this formality will be accomplished in real tango time is foreseen by all the restaurant managers, who are busy putting eating tables back on the restaurant floors!

The new measure against dancing in restaurants also prohibits cabaret-entertainers from mingling with diners in "alate stunts." They must perform on the stage and wear ample clothing!

Judge Advises Woman to Kill Her Husband

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 5.—"I advise you to buy a shotgun, load it with buckshot, then shoot your husband dead if he makes any more threats on your life," was the advice Judge R. B. Tappan gave to Mrs. Minnie A. Rowe, when she had her husband in court for threatening her life. "If more women would kill brutal husbands this country would be better off," the judge continued.

OREGON STATE PRINTER DEAD

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 5.—Willis Scott Dunlavy, aged 50, state printer for this state, died after an illness of two years today. He was prominently mentioned for governor on the republican ticket two years ago, but ill health prevented him from entering the race. He was the son of Abigail Scott Dunlavy, famous Oregon suffragist.

HOTEL GUESTS FLEE FROM FIRE

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5.—More than 200 guests lost their clothing and jewelry when the Blue Mountain house, the summer hotel of Penmar, burned early today. The loss of the hotel will exceed $200,000. Two persons were injured and several had narrow escapes.

THE MYSTERY OF WILLIAM HENRY LEE!

Who Can Solve Secret of Rich Man Who Tried to Speak On His Deathbed.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—When William Henry Lee, millionaire publisher, died here this week following a sudden stroke of paralysis, one of the most mysterious cases in the history of this city was opened. With Lee's demise went a secret which the authorities are trying to find. In his death bed the man was helpless. He tried to speak but not a sound came forth. His eyes looked beseechingly at the nurse and the friend who stood beside the bed. There was a word of meaning in those eyes but eyes do not speak words. So speechless and motionless William Henry Lee died.

It is a great mystery! Who was William Henry Lee, the great and rich publisher of Chicago—the man whose books are known wherever men read the English language?

He was the most lonely man in the world. He had money. He had intelligence and culture. BUT HE HAD NO CHICK. CHILD NOR RELATIVE. NOBODY TO LOBE HIM. Nobody to drop a tear. Nobody to take up the great future and the great business he left behind.

And so you find the public administration running the big publishing house of Laird & Lee and the state of Illinois preparing to take over the estate of a quarter of a million or so.

Bishop, the court's administrator since Lee's death on June 30, has searched every corner of Laird & Lee's establishment and every nook and crevice in Lee's home for even a scrap of paper that would reveal Lee's identity—that might open up the strange secret. He has met with nothing but failure.

Lee came here 35 years ago and entered the publishing house that now bears his name, as a clerk.

He was quiet, pleasant, but unapproachable man. He put his whole soul into his work. He had an ambition to compile a perfect dictionary of the English language. He was regarded as one of the greatest authorities on English in the country. His life was spent in carrying out his ambitious plans. He worked himself into a partnership and then a few years ago became the sole proprietor of the establishment. All the time he worked on his dictionary. It is estimated he spent over a million dollars in collecting material, in litigation over rights.

The few friends Lee had, men and women, who held him in the highest esteem, knew nothing about him. He was not a recluse, although he kept very much to himself. He was not a hater of his kind, for his relations with those he chose for friends were very cordial. He lived alone. He was a plain man who had simple tastes and who simply told nothing about himself. Once he wrote in a memory book that he was born in Pennsylvania. But he did not give the date. He was about 55 or 60 years of age.

His employees speak highly of him as an employer. At the "house" the men say that it was always Lee's intention to divide the business among the men who worked for him. Is that what he wanted to say on his death bed? Or did he want to reveal his identity and perhaps bequeath his fortune to loved ones of his youth?
