"EASY MONEY" DIDN'T PAY

The wild bunch found it out at last—From "Hole-in-the-Wall" they rode to rob and slay, getting $500,000 in seven years, but they died with their boots on or lay in prison cells.

"HANDS UP!"

BY FRANK PARKER STOCK-BRIDGE CRIME DOESN'T PAY! You don't have to try it to prove that!

Ask any old-time detective, who has seen criminals rise, flourish for a time, then spend the rest of their lives in prison or in exile. Ask the four surviving members of the "Wild Bunch" who are hiding in Chile or were a year or two ago—what they have to show for their career of crime.

Fifteen years ago there was a more daring band of criminals in the world than this "Wild Bunch," as they called themselves. You've heard of them—the famous "Hole-in-the-wall" bandits. From 1895 to 1902 they terrorized the West and Southwest, from Wyoming to Texas.

After each crime they sought refuge in the "Hole-in-the-wall" country in Wyoming until the hue and cry subsided, when they would return to Texas. "Black Jack" Ketcham was their leader, with "Bill" Carver as chief lieutenant. Then there was Sam Ketcham, Elza Lay, Lonny and Harvey Logan, also known as the Curry Brothers.

Easy money. Not at the price they paid. Listen—

"Black Jack" Ketcham was hanged at Clayton, N. M., for killing Sheriff Edward Farr, who was trying to arrest him for a train hold-up.

"Bill" Carver was killed in Texas while resisting arrest for a murder committed in Sonora.

Sam Ketcham died in the New Mexico penitentiary of wounds received in a fight with a sheriff's posse.

Elza Lay is serving a life term in New Mexico for his share in the Cimarron train robbery.

Lonny Logan was killed in Missouri while resisting arrest. "Flat Nose" George" Curry was killed in Utah while resisting arrest.

Bob Lee has just finished ten years in the Wyoming penitentiary for his part in the Wilcox train robbery.

"Deaf Charlie" Hanks was killed in San Antonio while resisting arrest. Ben Kilpatrick, "The Tall Texan," is finishing a fifteen-year sentence at Atlanta for the Great Northern robbery, and Laura Bullion did two years and a half at Jefferson City for her share in this crime.

Harvey Logan got a twenty-year sentence for the Great Northern robbery, but on November 29, 1902, broke away from his guards at Knoxville, Tenn., stole a horse and fled to the mountains.

Three of the "Wild Bunch" escaped paying the immediate penalty of their crimes only by fleeing the country. "Butch" Cassidy, Harry Longbaugh, the "Sundance Kid," and Etta Place, who also posed as Longbaugh's wife, went to Argentina. All of them were experts with horse and rifle. Etta Place is a markswoman equalled by few men, and with what they had left of their share of the loot they bought a ranch in the interior. Here they were joined later by Harvey Logan.

For two years they raided country banks, held up wagon-trains and terrorized a large section of interior Argentina. From their refuge on the mesa they could see any posse that might approach from any direction in time to make a clean getaway, should suspicion point toward them. But not until a letter written to a pal in the states fell into the hands of American officers, who advised the Argentina authorities of the presence in South America of this dangerous remnant of a dangerous gang, were they molested. Preparations were made to capture them, but they got wind of the coming of the officers and fled again—this time across the border into Chile. There they are, yet, or were when last heard from—three men and a woman who dare not come home and who dare not stay long where they are—condemned through their own past record of crime to a life of constant "moving on."

EASTER ISLAND IS THE RIDDLE OF SOUTH SEAS

Edward W. Gifford, assistant curator at the Museum of Anthropology, University of California, an authority on Easter Island; and one of the images carved out by the natives; also a portion of one of the ruined plat forms.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 2.—Easter island, the riddle of the Pacific! Situated 2000 miles from the nearest continent, rock-bound and storm-swept, this small, desolate island, the farthest outpost of the Polynesian group, has earned the title of "The Mystery of the Pacific."

This splinx of the oceans and its nearly extinct inhabitants have proven a baffling problem to scientists and explorers of modern times. It is said by some to be the remnant of a submerged continent and declared by others only to have been inhabited by an advanced race of natives.

The Easter Islanders were the only natives of the Pacific islands who had developed the art of writing. Their inscriptions are on wooden tablets and bear a remarkable resemblance to ancient Babylonian. These hieroglyphics have never been deciphered.

This mysterious people was a race of idol worshippers and had mastered to some degree the art of sculpture and masonry.

On the island, which is about 60 square miles in extent, are immense platforms facing the sea, formed of large stones fitted together, some of which weigh five tons, and in places the sea side of the walls are 30 feet high and over 200 feet long. On these platforms stand colossal figures carved out of lava from an extinct crater, eight miles away. On some of these bases were a

Woman of 60 Wins Footrace With Fleet-footed Opponent

The Puget Sound country is the only place on earth where women of 60 can go out and win foot races.

At the big Fox island residents' picnic Monday one of the events was a women's foot race. Twelve lined up at the tape and went away at the word go. But Mrs. George Beck, 60, and a young woman who has a reputation for fleetness pulled right away from the bunch. At the 50-yard mark they were neck and neck and all the way they ran it abreast, ending in a tie.

One hundred yards is a pretty good run for the best of them, but Mrs. Beck was not daunted. "Let's run it again—I didn't do my best," she said, and her young antagonist consented.

Without a bit of rest they started again. The young woman forged to the front, and in 50 yards was six yards ahead. Then the venerable racer started. In 20 yards she had cut the distance to a foot, in another moment she swept past and at the finish she jumped to the tape 10 good feet ahead.

GREATEST BOTANIST PRAISES MT. TACOMA

Prof. Adolph Hager, Berlin, regarded as the greatest living botanist, after his trip over Mt. Tacoma declared the vegetation there was wonderful and very fine. He said some European mountains had more varied vegetation but none finer.

A telegram from Mayor Seymour from Bellingham today announced he would be home this evening to be ready for the council meeting tomorrow.
