Cynthia Grey's Answers

Dear Miss Grey: I am the girl who wrote the other day about reform schools. You said you would like to hear my side of "Why Girls Go Wrong?" so I will try to give it.

There is room for improvement, and plenty of it, but it is getting better all the time. One of the schools you mentioned by a name (which I withheld) is not a regular state or city reform school.

It is true that the law fines a man less for stealing a girl than it does for stealing a horse, and that in the eyes of the world the girl suffers the greater part of the blame, but even that is changing.

In respect to the low wage, you might have added that in many places of business white shirt waists are required and that the minimum price for the laundering on one is 25 cents.

Dear Miss Grey: I have been reading your letters and think they are fine. Miss Grey, you are all right. I wish all the girls were as sensible as you.

A YOUNG GIRL. P. S.—It seems I always had bad luck anyway. A.—Yes, and you always will if you believe such rot as that.

If she is a gentleman friend kind enough to give her money to help her, people say she is doing wrong. What woman is there would give her room and board for nothing? None. I am safe in saying that a girl does not want anyone to give her money all the time for nothing.

She becomes a mother, and people say, "She is no good because she is not married. They say it isn't the man's fault, that the girl is to blame. Even if he marries her, they throw it up that "she had to marry."

Now, we will say she wasn't 18, and the juvenile court gets her. They send her to a reform school where she is worked hard, abused and half-fed. But what does the law do to him? Nothing. They don't even arrest him, nine times out of ten.

I will tell you about Mary and the young man, next time, which will be within a few days.

A WANDERER. A.—I am glad to have your side of the question, and know many things you say are true today; but have you looked into the way the juvenile court handles these things at the present time? I know personally many of the local juvenile officers, and they are anxious to improve conditions.

The play instinct is uppermost in a child," Miss Sheehan explained, "but it can be guided. Experience has shown that by training the play instinct into proper channels, education can be given to the tiniest child. This is the basis of all the modern child-educational systems: the Montessori, Secratie, Mrs. Hart's and all the others.

Dear Miss Grey: Can you tell me where I can get a copy of the U. S. A. constitution, and the laws pertaining to naturalization. Sincerely, L. W.

A.—Write to the Naturalization Bureau, Federal Building, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Miss Grey: I was married when I was 16, too young to know what married life ought to be. We did not get along well. He said he would go away for a year, and then come back for me. My folks were very put out with him, and when he came for me, would not let him know where I was, and told him untruths, and he went east.

I am now 26 and haven't gone with anyone, and do not care for anyone but him. I have looked in all directions, but cannot find the town he is in. He has a brother in Sioux City, but he will not let me know where his brother is. Can you think of anything I can do to find his whereabouts? Thanking you, L. E. B.

A.—There's a ghost of a chance that you may find his name in some of the city directories. If you will go to Dunn & Co. or to Bradstreet, you can consult the directories of eastern and other cities, or you might employ the services of a private detective, but be very sure it is a reliable company before you pay them.

You must make up your mind that he may be married again, which he could do by getting a divorce, or if he had not heard from you for seven years and had tried to find you.

UNCLE TED'S CIRCLE

My Dear Club Members: Have you received your certificates yet? I mailed a big bunch this morning to the new members, and other boys and girls are asking for membership every day.

After today Uncle Ted is going to print some dandy little stories for you. They will appear almost every night, and be about fairies, and adventures, and travels in other countries.

APPLICATION Uncle Ted's Circle Please enroll me as a member of Uncle Ted's Circle. I am ... years old, and go to ... school. I pledge myself to be kind to dumb animals, to honor my mother and my father, and to treat all persons as my brothers.

PEACH DESSERTS

Recipes of desserts from peaches tested by Caroline Coe, the Daily Times' cooking expert. Paste them in your Caroline Coe Cook Book.

Fruit desserts are far more wholesome and enjoyable at this season than are the heavy pastries and puddings of the winter bill of fare.

PEACH CUSTARD Fill sundae glasses about a quarter full of chopped peach, and then nearly to the top with soft custard.

PEACH BLANC MANGE Make a peach jelly by thickening a cupful of peach pulp with one and three-fourths tablespoonfuls of gelatine dissolved in a little water and adding sugar and lemon juice to taste.

PEACH SNOW Dissolve one-fourth box of gelatine in half a cup of boiling water, after soaking until soft in a very little cold water.

PEACHES Pick and weigh your fruit. Clingstone peaches are best. To every five pounds of fruit allow two and one-half pounds of light brown sugar, one pint of vinegar, ten cloves, three sticks of cinnamon and a blade or two of mace.

CALIFORNIA'S PLAYSCHOOL WHERE BABIES ARE TAUGHT

BERKELEY, Cal., Sept. 2.—Ever hear of an out-of-doors play school where children are taught to think?

One located at the University of California has just closed a six weeks' session. Here 260 children ranging from four years up to thirteen played three hours each day and were educated while they played.

The purpose of the play-school was to give the child an unstrained chance to learn; not by rule and regulation, but by allowing him to develop his own method of study and application.

"In the beginning," said Miss Rose Sheehan, superintendent of the Sacramento kindergarten, who had charge of the kindergarten class in the play-school, "the object was to develop the big muscles first and teach the child to play with some purpose, whereby laying a firm foundation for study in the grammar grades later on.

Through music the child is taught rhythm. Standing in a great circle, they sway their little bodies in perfect time to the tune played by "Miss Rose."

As the children grow older, the play becomes more advanced. Tots of 5 and 6 learn tone by color. For instance, every note in the scale is represented by a different color and by memorizing the colors the child learns the scale.
