

VESSEL BEATS CREW TO PORT

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 6.—Picked up in an open dory after they had drifted about for 24 hours without food or drink, and after their vessel, the fishing schooner Annie M. Parker, had been found drifting in open sea with all sails set and her hold full of fish, nine members of the crew declared today that they had abandoned the vessel when she was pounding to pieces on the Rose and Crown shoals. Five others, including Capt. Vincent Nelson, are missing. The vessel, homeward bound, had run on the shoals, and begun to pound when the crew abandoned her. Evidently the boat later freed herself and drifted into deep water, for she was intact when picked up.

Impatience of Law's Technicality--Judge's Characteristics

This is the man who has brought the "hickory" shirt into the United States court, shattering the precedent of white collars on the federal bench.

BY JACK JUNGMEYER

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—Colleagues of U. S. District Judge Maurice T. Dooling, Pres. Wilson's first appointee to the California bench, were considerably shocked by his unprecedented appearance at court in a soft "hickory" shirt. They read in it a sort of mild contempt for all that stiff-necked punctiliousness with which high courts, and not a few lesser ones, have clothed themselves. But he has continued to wear that soft shirt, without ostentation, and his court hasn't suffered any lapse of real dignity either.

It is just this trait which his friends and associates like best in Judge Dooling. Changing fortunes do not alter the man. He demands and commands as much respectful dignity in his library or walking along the lanes of Hollister, his home town, as he does during court. He rarely smiles, talks almost in a whisper, and makes his rulings in a few words. And yet tolerance and benevolence are strong in his make-up.

Those lines of his face tell a story. One seldom spoken of, but known to his best friends. They bespeak in gruelling battle with a weakness that conquers most of its victims, but which he mastered after his neighbors had begun to shake their heads. Judge Maurice Dooling is known throughout the book world as a translator of note, especially of Spanish and Italian verse. His knowledge of the classics is said to be remarkable, and he has one of the finest libraries in the west.

With a marked impatience for mere technicalities, he has aligned himself with that small coterie of the judiciary which concedes that there should be less of the letter in applying the law and more of substantial justice. He wants a dissolution of those artificial barriers that have been reared between the people and the courts.

Physically he is slight, almost frail. His manner is retiring, almost bashful at times. Before his recent elevation to the federal judgeship, Judge Dooling presided with distinction over the superior court of San Benito county. He has always been a democrat.
