Billie Burke Tells How to Say "Howde" in the Latest and Most Approved Style

BY BILLIE BURKE

A very clever young woman said to me the other day when I asked her why she was not going to marry a man who not only seemed able to give her everything she wanted, but eligible in every other way:

"Well, he simply harps on the words lady and gentleman. I am sure he speaks of me as his lady friend and talks of the gentleman barber in the same breath."

"This young man's morals were above reproach, but his manners of action and speech "grated" on this girl, whose taste had been educated to the best. She had learned that there was a fashion in manners, and today we like the splendid Saxon word woman and speak it where our grandfathers said lady."

A few years ago a man invariably offered his arm to a "lady" whom he accompanied on the street after dark, and many young men and women proclaimed their engagements by walking arm in arm in daytime.

Nowadays a woman seldom takes a man's arm unless there is special reason that she should rely on him for protection, however.

Even when going out to dinner, unless it is a very formal party, the guests do not walk arm in arm.

In a ballroom it is also bad form to hold to a man's arm after you have finished dancing, and usually on entering a room the girl precedes her escort by a step or two to be greeted by her hostess.

A gentleman raises his hat when meeting or taking leave of a woman; when he passes her on a public staircase; when he shows her any trifling courtesy, and he should always raise his hat when acknowledging her thanks.

A man also always raises his hat upon bowing to an acquaintance who has a lady with him, and he should raise his hat if the lady with him recognizes a friend.

A bow should always be returned. To give the cut direct is a discourtesy of which no person of breeding may be guilty. This salutation need not be effusive, however.

Nothing is worse than two women kissing each other in public. It has been held up to derision by the jokesmith for ages.

in places like the halls and elevators of hotels their hats should always be held in their hands.

LATEST FAD IS TURKISH VEIL

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The many changes in feminine attire are becoming bewildering. The Turkish veil, sometimes known as the "Yashmak," is to be the chic thing during the fall, and Paris beauties will hide one-half of their faces behind it. At Longchamps many fair attendants looked like overgrown lamp shades, costumed in floating draperies to the waist, while others resembled spiral staircases coiled around and around in dresses expanded at the hips and trailing off like a corkscrew at the feet.

Caroline Coe's Letter to a Young Housewife

DEAR SUNICE:

When you cook your rice do you boil it in plenty of water? A cup of rice in three quarts of boiling water should be boiled twenty minutes. Take up in colander. (Have you one?) Buy it because you will need one.) Let cold water run over it a couple of minutes to cool and plump it. Set colander back over hot water to keep warm. The cup of rice, uncooked, may serve rice for dessert with cream and sugar, and rice for steak and enough for two little individual rice puddings.

If you decide to make a pudding that needs a mold don't buy one, use those little brown Betty cups. They are just the right size.

If you plan a little and use your common sense there is no need of wasting one particle of food. Cook plenty, but use it all in one way or another. Here's a secret: A friend of mine whose husband was very fond of boiled onions with a cream dressing always used those left to make a soup the next day, adding a steak bone or any bits of meat she had and a stalk of celery, or, lacking these, she put in a little cream. The onions and cream dressing, boil all together for an hour. Strain and serve with toast strips and Parmesan cheese.

I am still harping on that long end of the steak; you can make it into Hamburg steak with rice. Use one cup of cold boiled rice and one and one-half cups of Hamburg steak, saltspoon of salt, teaspoon of minced pepper, or one stalk of celery chopped fine. Mix all together, add one egg. Put meat and rice mixture into small cabbage leaves that have been boiled so as to be pliable. Tie all together. Put into a baking pan with one cup of hot water. Bake twenty minutes and remove leaves and serve the meat rolls with lemon slice or celery.

This is delicious with French fried potatoes and mashed squash.

CAROLINE COE.

CYNTHIA GREY'S LETTERS

Anna B. C.: I am indeed sorry I cannot put you in touch with the girl at one of the Homes. I do not have her address, and do not know in which Home she is living.

CYNTHIA GREY.

Dear Miss Grey: I am in love with a young man of 20. I am 16. He drinks often, smokes cigarettes, and uses bad language around girls. I love him and want to bring him to the right.

I see him about once a week, and could often if I wanted to. I wish you would tell me how to reform him. I have heard of other girls doing so. I am anxious for an answer. HOPEFUL.

A.—My dear girl, you can't do it. The reformation of each person rests with himself. God himself can't reform a man who doesn't want to be reformed. All you can do is to keep your own mind so pure that it will be a fit channel through which good can flow from the Great Source.

YOU CAN NEVER REFORM A MAN BY LISTENING TO HIS LEWD REMARKS.

For him to stop drinking or smoking for your sake means little, but the first weak step in the right direction because he sees there is no good thing in a bad habit means much. If you appeal to him at all, let it be to the development of his own manhood—not for you. Above all, refuse to marry a reformed man until he has shown by several years' reformation that he is physically, mentally and morally clean enough for a good girl's husband, and the father of children.

Dear Miss Grey: I have been going with a girl for some time, and am very much in love with her. I should like very much to have her picture, but am at a loss to know whether it is proper to ask for one.

REX.

A.—You might offer to exchange pictures with her, or when speaking of the subject remark that when she has a good picture of herself you would appreciate one.

Dear Miss Grey: I have a friend who has used an assumed name over six years. Is there a penalty? If he buys land or anything can he hold it? If he marries is it legal?

He is a good man, and has a good position. If he tried to have the company where he works change his name back he will probably lose his place. What would you advise: to keep on as he is, or resign, and begin at the bottom of the ladder again? He has two depending on him, who would be deprived of all but bare necessities for awhile. Thanking you for awhile. ANXIOUS.

M. J.

A.—In all legal matters it is the person who makes the transaction, not the name. That is the way the court looks at it. But if under his old name he were to inherit property, he would have to prove that the man bearing that name and the present one is one and the same. He need not leave the company or have the present name made doubly sure by having it established by law. Any good lawyer will tell him how to make application for same.

There is no penalty for one bearing an assumed name unless it has been taken for fraud.

Dear Miss Grey: If a gentleman writes to a lady friend whose acquaintance he has had a short time, is it proper for him to enclose a stamp with every letter for an answer? Please advise, and oblige. JAP.

A.—It is not necessary (nor correct) to enclose a stamp for reply unless a letter is on business, or asking a favor. To enclose a stamp in social correspondence implies that the friend is not able to buy his, or her, own stamps.

Dear Miss Grey: When I was just 13 I thought I loved a young man, so married him, in a little while he grew tired and left me. I am now 20, and would get married again if I knew he had ever married or gotten a divorce. I do not know how to find out. Can you advise me what to do? W. T. V.

A.—If full seven years have elapsed since you have heard from your husband. And if you have proof that you have tried to locate him without result, and take such proof (returned letters for example) to the court you can have him declared legally dead, and be married again without a divorce.

Dear Miss Grey: I am a little girl of nine, and go to school and get good grades. But in a way I am not satisfied. I get to go lots of places, and have everything that one could want; but I can't get along with what I have. Will you please tell me what to do? With thanks.

M. J.

A.—Take, with your mother's, some of the things you love best, and go to the children's hospital, or one of the "Homes," and see how happy they will make the children there. Don't go alone. I am sure your mother will be glad to help you learn the lesson of thankfulness. A little girl, who has everything and can't be happy learns early that happiness is in the mind. By sacrificing a loved doll, or toy, she will enjoy it more than if she took money given her to buy a present. Tell me how it works.

The Confessions of a Wife

Her Diary

This diary, full of human experience—a dairy in which a woman tells the high and low, the bitter and sweet of life after marriage—will be printed by the Times just as it was written.

"THE CONFESSIONS OF A WIFE"

are REAL. We feel sure that women will instantly recognize this. "Margaret Hastings" confides to her diary the thoughts that most women think, but do not dare to speak out. She has written them courageously, sympathetically and sanely. She does not extol herself nor does she blame others for her heartaches.

WHAT THE DIARY SAYS

The writer of this diary has set down each day the different episodes that go to make up married life. She tells what she thinks of them and of the man she married. And incidentally she gives a picture of herself that no woman can fail to recognize as a truthful type of "the sex."

The every-day life of a wife is pictured—the joys, the sorrows, the humor and the tears, the big sacrifices and the little sins, the "common things of the common day," as well as the wonderful happenings which make life really worth living. EVERY ONE of these will be found in "The Confessions of a Wife"—a wife who is an AVERAGE WOMAN married to an AVERAGE MAN and whose existence is that of the AVERAGE HUMAN BEING!

THIS STORY STARTS NEXT MONDAY.

The first chapter of this remarkable diary will be printed in the Tacoma Times NEXT MONDAY NOVEMBER 17. The "confessions" will continue DAILY thereafter. Don't fail to read the FIRST CHAPTER NEXT MONDAY!

Strange that as soon as a woman loves a man there is no question about it -- she wants to belong to him She wants to be

UNCLE TED'S CIRCLE

My Dear Nieces and Nephews:

There are some more of me big bunch of letters that came in last week. I am sorry that I cannot print them all, but if I tried to publish each letter that comes in to me every week it would take a special edition of the Times to contain them. I read over each one carefully, and appreciate the way my nieces and nephews are striving to succeed in the contests.

Have you started on this week's essay yet? It's about Mexico. I want to see how many boys and girls really know what the trouble with Mexico is all about. Remember, briefly in your essay gives you a better chance for first prize than a long letter, because I haven't space to print the long ones.

Your friend,
UNCLE TED.

HONORABLE MENTION.

"Dear Uncle Ted:
"I am sending you the name of a new member for our Circle.
"Her name is Blanche Ward, she is 12 years of age and goes to Lowell school and lives at 1501 North Anderson, Tacoma.
"I have been in other places but I like Tacoma better than any. I like Tacoma because the climate is never too hot or too cold. And we have flowers pretty near all the year around.
"In the summer days when the sun is shining how nice it feels to go swimming in the cool salt water! We also have a beautiful park and I am sure everybody in the city ought to be proud of it with the birds and animals and lovely flowers.
"When I hear of the storms they have in the Eastern cities I think how thankful we ought to be. Among the amusements in Tacoma for children is the Uncle Ted's Circle and I think all the children ought to be in it.

children that belong to it like it the best of all.

"JANE BILLBORROW,

HONORABLE MENTION.

"Lakeview, Pierce Co., Wash.,
"Nov. 6, 1913.
"Dear Uncle Ted:
"I will write an essay on Tacoma."
"Tacoma is the best city on the coast. It has the nicest stadium in the west. Pt. Defiance is a very pretty park. Tacoma looks out on the pretty Commencement bay. Spokane's Mt. Baldy or Spokane is nothing compared with Tacoma's Mt. Rainier. I like it better here than in Spokane because Spokane has such dust storms. In Spokane the snow is one to two feet deep. Tacoma has a milder climate. In Minnesota they have such heavy thunder storms. I lived there when I was a little girl. I am very glad my home is near Tacoma. Ten miles is not far to go to a city.
"Tacoma has many children loving people in it. One good by the name of Uncle Ted.
"Your loving niece,
"LOIS FERRISS, 12-1/2."
"P. S.—You said you had run out of names for essays. Maybe you would like to have Winter or Winter's Herald, or maybe Xmas or Santa Claus."
