One of the new features for this year will be a display of home-grounds photographs. Prizes will be given for the best photographs of pretty Tacoma homes, and the awards will be made in such a manner as to cover both large and small homes. The prizes will be given to the persons who send in the photographs, whether they own the homes or not.

Prizes will again be awarded to the children bringing in the greatest number of roses for decorative purposes.

7,500 ON DRY LIST

The city committee appointed by the ministerial alliance to conduct the campaign for state-wide prohibition in Tacoma, met last night and reported about 7,500 signers to petitions in this city.

Chairman Alfred Lister reported that over 80,000 names had already been turned in in the state, with but a small percentage of the petitions sent out yet returned.

The Confessions of a Wife

CHAPTER CXXXIX. (Copyright, 1914, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.) It is no wonder that we have come to regard money as the absolute necessity of happiness.

Some people may tell you that it will not buy any of the REAL things of life. They say it cannot buy love nor health—that virtue, honesty and self-respect are not dependent on having dollars and cents.

This has always seemed to me to be a kind of sop that the rich man throws to the poor. Money, they tell you, cannot save the life of your loved ones when the thumb of fate is pointed down. Granted. But there is no grief that money will not soften.

Physical discomfort but sharpens the pangs of a breaking heart and adds another misery to the grief-stricken mind. I have never known a joy that could not be heightened by the use of money; a misery or physical ill that could not be ameliorated; a mistake that could not be easier rectified; a grief that could not be made less hard if one were possessed of money.

How could Harry Symone have kept from the world the tragedy his curiosity and lust brought about if he had not had unlimited money? Without money Eliene would have been unable to adopt those children who probably would have walked the road of neglect to crime and oblivion.

With money Aunt Mary will be able to help that poor little bride of Jack's to bear her pangs of childbirth and also give to herself an incentive for living after she had thought she had lost it forever.

But if it does all this good, its capacity for evil is just as great.

Perhaps without it Harry Symone would never have done wrong to the girl who died and the woman he married. There seems to be no vice, no sin, no folly in which money does not prove the biggest tempter.

When Dick came home last night he fortunately began talking about that five thousand dollars that Uncle John gave us.

"Have you said anything to Aunt Mary about it, Margie?" he asked.

"Yes, and she said it was ours to dispose of as we pleased."

"That's fine. I'll turn over twenty-five hundred dollars to Father tomorrow."

"Say, Dick," I began somewhat timidly, "don't you think it would be a good plan to give that money to Jack and let him put it in Father's business? It would give him a kind of independence and a right to some say in the firm. I am a great believer in youth, and so are you. Father Waverly is not only an old man, but a sick man; his judgment may be warped by ill health, and his business methods may be old-fashioned."

"I had not intended to GIVE the money to anyone, Margie. I was going to lead it to Dad at six per cent interest. I am afraid you would not make a very good business woman, after all."

I confess I was somewhat disappointed in Dick's ideas. The money was GIVEN to us and why should we not GIVE it to his father or brother when we did not really need it?

Dick seemed to take favorably to my idea of letting Jack have the money instead of his father, but he said: "I hope Jack won't get tied up with that little chorus girl."

I felt very guilty when I answered: "She is a lovely girl, Dick, and Jack might go farther and fare worse."

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

HOUSE SACQUES ARE MUCH WORN

Women are wearing dainty house dresses more than ever, as the new street gowns are so much more elaborate than they were last year that they get mussed and old looking much quicker.

The model shown is from Andres Dupre, Paris. The skirt is of accordion pleated chiffon, and over it is worn a short sacque of flowered taffeta. These sacques are very much worn over any kind of a skirt.

CYNTHIA GREY'S LETTERS

Dear Miss Grey: Everybody seems to come to you with their troubles, so I thought I might too. I am nineteen and was engaged to a young man until a couple of weeks ago, when we had a quarrel. He is very hot-tempered, but I seldom get angry, and when I do, I lose all control of myself. He apologized and said I had to, because I was as much to blame as he. But I wouldn't do it, so he wrote and asked me to meet him and we could talk it over. He answered, saying I didn't want to see him again. Miss Grey, I was so angry I didn't care what I did. I didn't see or hear from him again, but yesterday I received an invitation to his wedding with another girl. I know he doesn't even like her. He just did it to hurt me. He doesn't really think I will come to the wedding, but I am going if it kills me. Mother says I brought it all on myself, and that I shall not go to his wedding, but I will go. I know he loves me because he has told me so, and I can see it in his eyes. Miss Grey, tell me what I shall take for a wedding present—something that seems to say "I don't care."

A.—Child, I fear no one can help you as long as you remain in your present attitude. You are both exceedingly shortsighted and will reap just the kind of seed you are sowing. The young man is cutting off his nose to spite his face, and you are doing the same. If you still love him, don't do anything that will cause him further pain. Entertain a spirit of kindness and forgiveness toward him; and know his life is not going to be any easier than is yours. I cannot be a party to any spite work; therefore, it is impossible for me to name such a present.

Pluck out and cast aside the thorns, and the roses will bloom for you again.

Dear Miss Grey: I have just returned from California, where I spent the winter. Please tell me, since my return is it my place to call on my friends, or should they call on me? Our renter almost ruined my dining-room table by hot dishes; what can I use to remove the white spots, or can they be removed? I am very anxious to know, as it is a fumed oak and highly polished—a beautiful piece of furniture. Thanking you in advance.

MRS. J. S.

A.—Your friends should call on you, that is if they know you have returned.

To remove heat stains from polished wood, fold a sheet of blotting paper a couple of times (making four thicknesses), cover the place with it, and put a hot smoothing iron thereon. Have ready at hand some bit of flannel, also folded, and made quite hot. As soon as the iron has made the surface of the wood quite warm, remove the paper, and go over the spot with a piece of paraffine, rubbing hard enough to leave a coating of the substance. Now with one of the hot pieces of flannel rub the injured surface. Continue the rubbing, using freshly warmed cloths, until the whiteness leaves the varnish or polish. The operation may have to be repeated.

Dear Miss Grey: Will you please inform me as to who was the author of "Paradise Lost" and did the same author write "Paradise Regained"? Also tell me who was the 18th president of the U. S.? "BOSCOH."

A.—John Milton was the author of both "Paradise Lost" and "Paradise Regained."

The eighteenth president of the United States was Ulysses Simpson Grant.

Dear Miss Grey: I am in trouble and need your advice. I am a married woman of 20 years. My husband doesn't support me. I love another man and he loves me and buys me clothes and my husband gets jealous. Dear Cynthia, what shall I do? Would you get a divorce? WORRIED.

A.—You are probably in the wrong more than your husband, only blind to your own faults. A woman should question her own heart very closely, who married to one man receives undue attentions from another. You had best be true to your marriage vows, or cancel them.

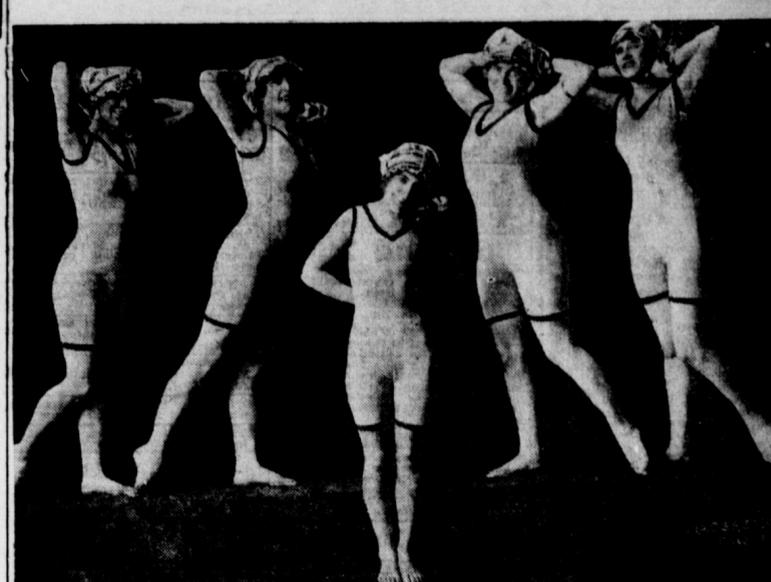

Dear Miss Grey: Will you please tell me if it is proper for a man, when walking with two girls, to walk between the two or on the outside? BLUE-EYES.

A.—A man should always walk on the outside.

LOTTIE MAYER'S DIVING GIRLS HEAD ALL-STAR PANTAGES BILL

Lottie Mayer and her diving nymphs at the Pantages. Miss Mayer announced today that she would leave soon for St. Louis, Mo., where she will take charge of the largest natatorium in the world, just completed there. It is called the "Lorelei," and Miss Mayer will teach fancy swimming and diving to the "smart set."

Alexander Pantages could hardly have chosen a more well balanced program for his "Road Show No. 5" than the bill features which opened yesterday at the Tacoma house of the big vaudeville circuit. Many of the acts have been seen here before, heading other bills, and each act on this week's program would be a feature act on an ordinary program.

Lottie Mayer and her diving girls have added a classic dance to their act, making it more interesting and pretty. Lasky's Six Hoboes, as comical and ridiculous as ever, have improved their act by a travesty tango dance. Musette, the dainty dancing violinist, dances better and plays better than ever before. Racket, Hoover and Markey have some exceptional good "nut talk" and their songs are all new to Tacoma. Cornalia and Wilbur open the bill in a comedy acrobatic act, costumed in Tommy Atkins' uniforms. The bill is the best seen at the Pantages theater in many months.

It's Difficult to Play Harp in this Puget Sound Country

MISS ESTELLE BLAKE AT HER HARP. Miss Estelle Blake, who is featured as a harpist in Miss Morrell's Parisian Harmony Girls at the Empress this week, is authority for the statement that the Pacific coast is one of the most difficult places in the world in which to play the harp. The humid atmosphere of the Sound country especially, she asserts, makes it all but impossible to keep the instrument in tune, an hour being spent before every performance adjusting the many strings of the instrument.

Popular Prices for the Concert of Musical Societies Tonight

Aside from the fact that tonight's joint concert of the St. Cecilia, Ladies' Musical and Orpheus clubs at the Tacoma theater, is the first concert in which Tacoma's prominent musical organizations have combined, the feature of the concert is that the popular "ten, twenty, thirty" prices will prevail. It has been the object of the musical choruses to give the concert for the benefit

Many Recoveries From Lung Trouble

Eckman's Alternative has restored to health many sufferers from lung trouble. Read what it did in this case:—Wilmington, Del. "Gentlemen:—In January, 1908, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs. My physician, a leading practitioner, said that it was lung trouble. I got very weak. C. A. Lippincott, of Lippincott's Department Store, Wilmington, Del., recommended Eckman's Alternative that had done great good. I began taking it at once. I continued faithfully, using no other remedy, and finally noticed the clearing of the lungs. I now have no trouble with my lungs. I firmly believe Eckman's Alternative saved my life." (Abbreviated.) (Attest.) JAS. SQUIRES. Eckman's Alternative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs.
