One of the promising musical events of the week is the recital Friday night, when Miss Elsie Moe will present several of her pupils at the Epworth Methodist church.

A large number of tickets have already been sold for the excursion to Hood's canal on the steamer Verona next Saturday, given by the Westminster Presbyterian church, and it is expected that the steamer will carry a capacity load.

After spending several months in Tacoma, a guest at the Hotel Bonneville, Mrs. Hugh Campbell of Stillwater, Minn., left Saturday evening on her return home.

A concert will be given Thursday evening at the Swedish Lutheran church, South Eighth and I streets. The program will include choruses and solos from the Messiah and the "Gallia." Solists will be Mrs. Ernest Bloomquist, Miss Frances Anquist, Martin Carlson and Bert Norblad.

Mrs. M. L. Morrison of 414 South C street announces the engagement of her daughter, Pearl Hermine, to Raymond Cross of Los Angeles.

Mrs. James Brown of Hoquiam arrived in Tacoma last week, called by the sudden illness of her daughter, Mrs. H. G. Ferguson.

Mrs. J. Austin Wolbert has consented to appear in the Stadium high school alumni vaudeville show at the Tacoma theater June 5 and 6, and will be heard in several popular song hits, supported by the entire chorus.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Clara Danielson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Danielson of the Avalon apartments, to Dr. Arthur Wade of Lexington, Neb.

Miss Genevieve Wilson will entertain at bridge for about 30 girls of the younger set tomorrow afternoon at her home on North Fifth and I streets, honoring Miss Arline Biggs, a bride of June.

Mrs. E. F. Benson, 4225 North Mason avenue, will entertain the Woman's auxiliary of the Immanuel Presbyterian church Wednesday afternoon.

June, the month of brides and roses, is looked forward to by thousands of girls who just now are sewing into their trousseaus all the dreams of future happiness that come to the girl about to be married. The bridal robe this year is made of white crepe, taffeta or charmeuse, and about the hips, reaching to the knees, is a frill of princess lace. Over this is a turned-under ruffie of the silk material which is put on at the

The Confessions of a Wife

CHAPTER CLXII. (Copyright, 1914, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.) Human nature is a strange thing. One would naturally think that, after all the demonstrations Dick and I have had in the last six weeks of the awful consequences of philandering on the part of the husband and unfaithfulness on the part of the wife, that we would each have tried to dodge that rock upon which so many matrimonial barkers are wrecked, but this noon Dick telephoned me that he was very busy with some men from out of town and would not be home to dinner, and would probably stay and spend the evening down town. I made up my mind I would have a little visit with Mary at the hospital and then go down town and do some shopping. I was planning a very happy day when the telephone rang and a woman's voice came over the wires: "I wanted to know, Mrs. Waverly, if I should call and take you down to the hotel in my electric. I can leave it there until we come back in the Morris's motor."

me to go." "I'm so sorry," was the response as she rang off. I was sure that Dick had lied to me, and I felt myself grow rigid with anger. You know, little book, that I have not the sweetest temper in the world, and the thought that Dick was so cowardly that he felt he must lie to me was maddening. He knows I don't like the Morrisies and he knows I would not go out with that sporty, drinking crowd if I were asked, but what he doesn't seem to understand is that, much as I dislike them, I would not object very strenuously if he felt he would like to go occasionally. But to be lied to!—that's too much. I forgot all about "the unattached woman" and I simply made up my mind that I would not stand for it. I was so angry that I could not go over to the hospital, as I knew that Mary would know something was wrong, and as for shopping I was sure I could not tell green from blue. I could not get to sleep and he tried not to wake me. "This morning I said: "Did you have a good time with your men?" And he answered: "Yes." "You were not with them!" I blurted out. "What do you mean?" "I mean that you lied to me. You went with the Morrisies to dinner and a motor trip." "But I was with the men!" he explained. "I intended to be with them all the evening, but when the Morrisies invited me to go I told them I would have to be excused right after dinner. I did not telephone you, because I knew you would not want to go—and—" "So you lied to me," I interrupted. "Don't say that to me, Madge. I have told you the truth." "I don't believe you and I don't think I shall ever believe you again. I think all men in the world are bad and you are among the lot." "Oh, all right, if you want to be unreasonable." "I am not unreasonable. I have not slept all night." "I knew something was the matter—you are not well, or you would not talk this way." "Dick, please don't, when I am angry and hurt, always lay it to a physical condition. I tell you my heart is broken because I cannot believe my own husband." (To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

What They Ask Cynthia Grey.

Dear Miss Grey: I am taking advantage of your willingness to advise. Aside from the old superstition that small boys wish to be left alone, it has always been my fortune to make friends with them. I am a young married woman. And although the only boy in my home, "and the best I know," is twenty-three, he always takes a large interest in my small friends. Shortly after our arrival here, a small boy friend, of a former acquaintance, called on me, bringing with him a boy of his own age. Other times he brought other boys until I knew five or six. They came quite often. I never extended an invitation for them to call again; but they most aldid, until the interruption. A mother, thinking there must be some wrong in these visits, called to investigate. With only a slight rap she opened my door with a bang, demanding to know why I allowed her boy to come there. Declaring that no good could derive from such friendship. Her boy was not in the house at the time, nor had he been but once. I can easily understand why a mother should wish to know the sort of friends her boy has, but should she have acted as she did? Or am I wrong about allowing these boys (all between fourteen and sixteen) to call, and would it tend to make them bad? Since this happened I have not allowed any of them to come. My husband thinks this is wrong, and says I should pay no attention to her. I would like your opinion. YOUNG BOYS' FRIEND. A.—It doesn't seem fair to the other boys to exclude them because one mother was suspicious. A good woman can help wonderfully, and they would much better be in her company, enjoying innocent amusement, than roaming the streets. I believe this woman's attitude is the exception, and due to ignorance. After she knows you better she will no doubt be sorry. I do not believe I would allow ignorance to dictate as to my guests. Dear Miss Grey: Please tell me what will rid my pantry of small ants. Thanking you for an early reply, I am, A. READER. A.—To kill ants feed them on borax and sugar, or yeast cake and sugar. To drive them from the room use camphor, ground mustard or oil of cedar. Dear Miss Grey: Will you please tell me what to do to darken a hair switch? Mine has faded. Thanking you in advance. A READER. A.—You would better take it to a hair store, as it is sometimes difficult to dye a switch to match the natural hair. They will do it while you wait. Dear Miss Grey: I am a girl of 16 years of age. I just got through reading your letters. I read the girl's letter whose name was signed "Everybody's friend," and I see that she is in the same trouble I used to be in. I have a lot of girl friends too, but if any of the women of the neighborhood see me talk with a boy they talk about it and make a little thing larger. I used to sit down and cry over what these old hens said about me. I used to feel awful bad to think they'd say such awful things about me, but after I saw that would not end it, I simply paid no attention to their gossip, and now speak friendly whenever I meet them. A.—You learned a nice little lesson, Helen, and met it in a beautiful way. If all girls would pay no attention to idle gossip about themselves and others; just remember that ignorance prompts it, and forgive and treat at least politely those who seem unkind, before long there would be no gossips. So many readers have asked whether, or not, "The Confessions of a Wife" can be had in book form that I am taking this opportunity to say it cannot. It may appear later as a book; but I cannot say positively. CYNTHIA GRAY. Dear Miss Grey: I would like to ask you the headquarters of the Thanouser Film company. Thanking you for the same. MOVIE LOVER. A.—The addresses of film companies can be found in the motion picture magazines, or at the reference room of the public library. Dear Miss Grey: Will you please answer these questions for me? Did President Lincoln ever own a saloon and where was he born? We had an argument at a party and left it to you. THE BUNCH. A.—That was kind of you. Why didn't one of the bunch take the trouble to look it up? Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin, on the big south fork of Nolin Creek, three miles from Hodginsville, La Rue county, Ky. I think he never owned a saloon. ELECTRO DENTAL PARLORS 13 Years of Remarkable Success in Tacoma Is it possible to produce dentistry that will give entire satisfaction in ten years? Is it practical to give the patient a ten-year guarantee with all dental work? The answer to these important questions is here, with conclusive proof. This year marks the 13th consecutive year of the career of Electro Dental Parlors. Drs. Austin and Burns and associates have perfected the strongest organization of progressive dentists in the Northwest. Our office is the largest on the coast where guarantee dentistry has been successfully demonstrated. Hundreds of our first written guarantees have expired and their crows, bridges, plates and fillings are still preserving the teeth and facing satisfactory service for the patients.

Uncle and Niece in the Same Play

When Ethel Barrymore appeared with John Drew in New York in the Sardou play, "Scrap of Paper," it will be the first time that she and her uncle have ever spoken lines on the same stage in twenty years or since the night that the strapping, Ethel Barrymore, merely by chance, got her first stage part at the Empire theater to play "Kate Fennell" in "The Bauble Shop." John Drew was at the head of that company; Maude Adams was the leading lady. It was the third year of Mr. Drew's appearance under Charles Frohman's management. When Miss Barrymore and Mr. Drew hear each other's voices in "A Scrap of Paper" it will be on the very same stage where they first heard each other speak as actor and actress twenty years ago.

Merchants Respond to Publicity Given By "Country Store" Stunt

With a score or more of useful presents to be given away from the stage tonight, Bert C. Donnellan's "Country Store" will again be the feature at the Empress. The "Country Store" will be held immediately after the first performance, and presents ranging from a 12-piece manicure set offered by the Crown Drug company to small articles of household use will be given away. "Local merchants are finding that the 'Country Store' is one of the best ways possible to advertise their goods," Manager Bert C. Donnellan said last night. "As a result we are getting better and more presents every week to dispose of, and the Tacoma business men are glad to have a chance to have their goods displayed upon the stage." The various gifts to be given away tonight are useful, and the

Dance Connoisseur Has Her Experience With Tango Parties

Miss Mabel Wilber, who as "The Merry Widow" has waited several circles around the United States, had a brand new experience the other day in adjoining. As a member of the exclusive Gamut club of New York, Miss Wilber attended a soiree. Her partner was a solemn-visaged gentleman. Of course, tea and tango were features. "We shall first try No. 2," said the solemn-faced partner to the clever dancer. "I don't know what No. 2 is," said Miss Wilber, "but I'll try it." "Unless you are familiar with No. 2 we'd better begin with No. 3. It's simple," replied the man. Miss Wilber looked dazed and the droll "tinman" in the same play, then, laughing, said: "I think we'd better have an understanding about this tango before we go any further." Then it developed that the solemn-faced individual had learned ten ways to tango by correspondence. Numbers instead of names were used. They sat out the dance.

Opera Singer Will Marry the "Tinman"

NEW YORK, May 25.—Anna Fitzhugh, grand opera star, was a chorus girl in "The Wizard of Oz" when David Montgomery made his starring debut as the droll "tinman" in the same play. Miss Fitzhugh is now a grand opera singer with a European reputation and she'll return from Paris soon to become the "tinman's" bride. This is her second matrimonial venture, but Montgomery has been looked upon by the theatrical profession as a confirmed bachelor. DRUG TERROR SHOWN TRULY IN A REMARKABLE SET OF FILMS

Telling in stronger and more poignant manner than any of the writings of Dr. Charles B. Towns, the terrible ravages of the drug habit upon the human race, and the insistent fight being made to end the craze, a six-reel film—"The Drug Terror"—opened an educational campaign at the Tacoma theater last night. The pictures will run all week, except Thursday, with matinees daily. Probably never before have such remarkably interesting, yet revolting, pictures come to Tacoma. Unlike the "white slave" pictures, the drug films teach a lesson that reaches into every city and town of the United States. The "slave" traffic is a myth in many cities, but the drug craze is everywhere. The films were produced under the auspices of the sociological fund of the Medical Review of Reviews, and were acted by capable players. A fire scene in the last reel, where father and son, both fiends, overturn a lamp in their wild orgy and both die together, is the most realistic picture ever shown in Tacoma.
