Commencement week will start Sunday at Whitworth with a baccalaureate sermon and will continue until Thursday.

Mrs. C. C. Warren entertained at two of the attractive affairs this week at her home on North Lawrence av., at bridge.

Mrs. B. W. Shaw of Ravensdale was the honored guest of Mrs. T. Granville yesterday at auction. The reception was given at the home of Mrs. T. E. Bryant on North 27th, Mrs. Granville's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Buckley, who have been residing at the Bonneville since their marriage, have leased a home on North 13th st., which they will occupy about June 1.

The senior ball at the Tacoma hotel this evening is an event of great interest to the 1914 graduates and their invited guests. It is expected that about 100 couple will attend.

Mrs. A. M. Ingersoll, who joined her daughter, Miss Janet Ingersoll, and her granddaughter, Miss Agatha Ingersoll, abroad this winter, is planning to return home within a month or so.

Mrs. John B. Stevens entertained yesterday afternoon at a tea for 25 friends.

Mr. and Mrs. P. E. McHugh are remodeling their country home at Spanaway lake.

Miss Clara Lawrence, who has made her home at the Bonneville for the last year, will leave next Monday for her former home in Pittsburg, Pa.

The Altar society of St. Leo's church will give a card party to-night at St. Leo's social hall.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Ochine Preparation.

This preparation for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength ochine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

In Defense of Man--Praise Him as a Hero and He'll Become a Hero

BY WINNIE LEE. Has modern woman set out to avenge Eve? Blaming each individual man for all of the evils of this old world, thus reverting Adam and the Bible story, seems to be orthodox feminist doctrine today.

They carefully assign to man the role of the all-around villain playing opposite to the virtuous heroine. Indeed, so much have the "wrong of woman" been discussed that we have practically deprived man of any "rights" he ever had.

Now why not permit man to retain a few of his ideals about himself? There are men capable of living up to the highest ideals, if only women would let them have any right to any ideals at all.

That's man's favorite role! But criticism never yet inspired a hero. It takes applause to push even an ambitious actor on to any great success.

WOMEN HAVE QUIETLY SNATCHED FROM MAN HIS REALLY HUMAN QUALITIES

The Confessions of a Wife

CHAPTER CLXVI. (Copyright, 1914, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

When I picked up the paper this morning, I saw that Mrs. Bill Tenney had applied for divorce from Bill, on the ground of "mental cruelty and non-support."

I was just about starting out to go over to Mother Waverly's, as I could not get it out of my head that it was Mollie I saw in the Tenney car last night, when I saw the notice.

On my way over, I passed Mrs. Tenney's home and saw her talking with a splendid looking man. "It is just as I thought," I said to myself; "as long as Mrs. Tenney was not interested in any other man, she was perfectly contented to do 'the dog in the manger act' and not see her husband free, but now that she sees some man who appeals to her, she is going to make it possible to let that other man pay attention to her and still retain the respect of the community."

Just before I got to the Waverly home I met Molly—she had seen me from the window and came running to meet me. Before I could say a word she said: "Don't tell mother that you saw me last night, and please tell Dick not to say anything to Mr. Tenney; he was not to blame, I need not have gone with him if I had wanted to do so."

I looked into her troubled, tearful face and said: "My dear Mollie, I was not sure it was you, so I did not mention my fears to anyone. I certainly did not intend to say a word to your mother."

I could see by Mollie's speaking face that she regretted her hasty words that she was very sorry she had not lied about it. "I am awfully glad you told me about it, Mollie, for I think the only unpardonable sin is that of lying to the friends who wish to help one."

Mollie's mouth grew a little rebellious and she said: "I don't think I need any help, Margie; I am nineteen years old and I ought to be old enough to take care of myself."

so things went from bad to worse until they had virtually lived apart for three years. "That during all that time he had been like a ship at sea without a rudder, and he probably had done a lot of things he should not have done, but he had come to his senses, and now when he had made up his mind to go back and see if he could not patch it up with his wife, she had served him with divorce papers—tough, wasn't it?"

"Then you will understand, Mr. Tenney took me away out in the country and he told me that I ought not be unhappy; that only those who do wrong should suffer; and in a few minutes he was telling all about himself and what a sad life he led. How when he was first married his wife did not understand him and neither did he understand her."

What They Ask Cynthia Grey

Dear Miss Grey: I have been reading your paper for a long time and always thought that love was nothing. Now, Miss Grey, I love a young man and I think he likes me. I have to take the paper to them every evening, for we take it together, always ask me in. Is it right to go in or not? I never used to go in, but now I do. I think his father likes me, for he comes over quite often and takes me auto and buggy riding. They have a buggy of their own, and he talks to me about the boy; how good he is and how fine, and that the boy is going to get married, but he is so bashful he won't have anything to do with any girl.

Now, Miss Grey, he stands outside and says a few words. How can we get acquainted? I don't want to be too quick in speaking first, or is it my place to stop and talk to him? If he should walk home with me in the daytime would it be my place to say, "Won't you come in?" or not? What shall I do? The other day he walked clear out to the gate with me and then went back in the house. How can I tell if he cares for me? Is it my place to speak first?

Miss Grey, we grew up together, but have not seen each other for a long time and are kind of strangers. I am a girl of 19 and he is 23. I do not go many places and am bashful, I know he doesn't go with anybody and everybody teases me about him. I don't know who started it; but, anyway, it wouldn't have gotten out if he hadn't said something to some boys that he likes me. Don't throw this letter in the basket for I am waiting an answer. I am no school girl. PUZZLE! GIRL.

A.—Don't allow your head to be turned by a little attention. You do not speak of the boy's mother, or of your own. Cannot you consult your mother?

I wouldn't advise you to visit, nor make advances to the boy under the circumstances. Don't let other people do your match-making. Be good friends with the boys, but leave out all foolishness until you have a few opinions of your own, and don't fall in love with the first boy you think—people make you think—is in love with you. God gave you a mind. Look to Him to learn how to use it, and do nothing hastily.

Dear Miss Grey: Is it necessary for persons who are of age to have a witness who knows you to obtain marriage licenses in the state of Washington? Thanking you, SUBSCRIBER.

A.—To obtain a marriage license two people must have two witnesses, one of which knows each; or one witness who knows both.

Dear Miss Grey: I am a young man 21 years old and am keeping company with a girl 18. We love each other and I don't know what I would do if we were separated, but I saw her last night and she said she would not go out with me unless I got a fellow to go out with her and we would all four go together. What shall I do? Hoping to see an answer in the paper soon. BLUES.

A.—Well, well, that is a tragedy, isn't it? Sit down quietly and think the matter over, and see whether you wish to be dictated to by the girl. If not, stay away from her.

Dear Miss Grey: Will you please advise me in a matter meaning much to me? I am a married girl of seventeen.

I have been married for one year and think the world and all of my husband. I have also an admirer. I think well of my husband, who is at present in Alaska and will not return until the latter part of September. During his absence for the last month I have been keeping company with the admirer. We have had some words and ceased friendship.

Now, Miss Grey, do you think it wise for me to try and regain his friendship, knowing, to that I will have to give him up when my husband returns? Please give me your advice as soon as convenient. DISCOURAGED.

A.—If all young married people of both sexes would be manly and womanly enough not to encourage "admirers," it would greatly lessen the grain for the divorce mill, the expense of the state, and finally taxation of citizens. To say the very least, it doesn't show proper respect for oneself or the home to entertain anything beyond the feeling of an acquaintance for any man or woman other than the husband or wife. You are young, but not too young to respect yourself and the man you married. If you "think well" of your husband, do not encourage other men.

Dear Miss Grey: Would you be so kind as to print how to keep flowers fresh, as I have to carry them on the train about fifty miles to the cemetery? R. F. D.

A.—If not too many flowers, fill a bottle or glass fruit jar with a solution of salt water, cut the stems and place in them. If you are going to carry flowers in large quantity, place cotton in the bottom of a box, or basket, sprinkle with salt water, lay newspaper on top of it, sprinkle the paper, place flowers, and cover with dampened newspaper.

Paris Brides Wear Blindfolds One of the most popular of French designers sent out last week, with an evening frock of blue crepe, a bit of blue tulle, which, she said, was to be tied over the forehead and eyes the way children are blinded in blind-man's buff. This tulle is tied at the back of the head in a huge bow, and all the evening its wearer will "see things."

"AMATEUR NIGHT" TONIGHT

New faces in seven amateur acts will be seen at the Empress theater tonight, when one of the biggest amateur bills of the season will be staged. Manager Bert C. Donnellan has taken special care to have an entire new program of amateurs for tonight's offering, no repeaters being allowed upon this bill unless some of those booked fail to appear and it is necessary to get some of the regular upon short notice.

A feature of the amateur offering will be Baby Adeline in a clever song and dance offering. At the Tacoma theater this week is being offered the six part film sensation, "The Drug Terror," which is at present the talk of New York and other large Eastern cities. "The Drug Terror" is the first of a series of pictures made by the "Sociological Research Film company, showing the great evils that are threatening the social fiber of the entire nation. The prevalence of the drug habit is little known to the average person. It was only a short time ago that the fact became known that this country is the most drugged nation in the world, 4.45 percent of the population being addicted to the drug habit. This percentage is far greater than that of the opium fiends in China.
