Double Standard of Manners

Men's Conduct in Office Shock Young Lady—She Should Remember That Business Is Man's World, Says Miss Grey.

BY CYNTHIA GREY

The double moral standard is not more persistent than man's double standard of manners, one style for home and social life, and another for the working world. Wherefore, the well bred girl is confused upon entering business life and writes me letters like this:

"Dear Miss Grey: "I am a young lady who was raised in a home where all the rules of etiquette were strictly observed. Now I am at work and I find that young men do not live up to some of the most common conventions. "Some of them greet me by saying 'good morning' but do not take off their hats. "Do you think I am too sensitive?"

"DEVOTED READER."

The business world belonged to man centuries before woman intruded. And no code of etiquette has any chapter to cover conduct in a business office.

So it isn't for any formally inclined young lady to make over man's ancient customs to reconstruct his business habits to suit her own notions of a modern Chesterfield.

However, there's a tremendous lesson in the experience. By comparing man at work and man at play she arrives at a new wisdom.

And when she finally becomes as indispensable to man in the business world as she is now to his comfort in the home she will receive the same polite tokens of his chivalry.

"THE BUSINESS WORLD BELONGED TO MAN CENTURIES BEFORE WOMEN INTRUDED."

CYNTHIA GREY'S LETTERS

Q.—I am a girl 20 years of age, and engaged to a young man of 25, who objects very much to me calling on a young bachelor living alone and being alone with him in his house helping to cook and clean house. Will you kindly tell me if I am doing right.

A.—You are old enough to know right from wrong. Ask yourself the question and answer it according to your own conscience. Would you consider it quite the right thing if one of your fiancé's young women friends should call on him at his quarters and cook and clean house for him? It is no more right for you to do so either, unless it is your means of livelihood, then, of course, you are entitled to some consideration. At any event it will be well for you to respect the opinion of the man you are to marry.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

Q.—I am a young girl and wish to know if you will help me. I am unhappy over a foolish little thing, as mother calls it; but I am really miserable and cannot help it. Please tell me if you know of any remedy that will take away superfluous hairs on my arms, neck, etc. Please do not think I am foolish for they are terribly long and thick, and are growing longer each day. Goodness knows, by the time I am grown I will be able to represent a wild woman in the circus. I cannot even have short sleeves, nor even thin stockings for then they stick right through. Thanking you, I remain, PEGGY.

A.—You are in quite a plight, I should say. The first thing for you to do, instead of worrying and contemplating your fate when you are grown, is to think that anything superfluous, whether it be hair or anything else, is not in tune with nature and that you won't have it. Apply hydrogen of peroxide to the hairs one day, and spirits of ammonia the next; it will never both the same day. It will be several months before results are obtained.

Q.—Can you tell me of any way I can find out about a certain law in Oregon? Is there any place I could write for this information?

A.—Write to the secretary of state, Salem, Ore.

Q.—There are several young women employed at a certain place where I call twice daily, and there is one of them with whom I want to become acquainted. Will you please tell us how this can be done, as I do not know a soul who knows her? We have spoken on business matters only, and we pass as strangers when we meet.

A.—Many people who meet daily in the business world have become close friends in the social world; but the parties concerned must work out their own destinies. No outsider can assist in transforming a business relation to a social one, therefore, I cannot help you.

Personal and Social

German women will give a dance Saturday evening in Fraternity hall.

Aquinas academy will hold its annual musicale this evening.

The Settlement house children, directed by Miss Edwards, will give a May fete at the park, South 14th and Sheridan, May 8; dances in the afternoon and an Indian play in the evening by the Boy Scouts and Campfire girls will make up the entertainment. There will also be a minuet danced by six girls from Stadium high, directed by Miss Torgerson.

New officers of the Epworth League of the Epworth M. E. church: H. M. Freeman, president; Miss W. Shrader, first vice president; Miss Irma Tuell, second vice president; Miss Pearl Spranger, third vice president; H. Maddock, fourth vice president; Miss Alice Baker, secretary; T. Lynn, treasurer; Miss F. Campbell, pianist.

PHOTOPLAY HOUSES

SUBMARINE FILMS

The famous Williamson submarine motion pictures produced in the West Indian seas with grinning sharks, gaily colored parrot fish, moon fish, sergeant majors, angel fish, fool fish, sea horses, doctor fish, shark suckers and many other sea animals as the principal actors will come to the Tacoma theater next Sunday for an engagement of one week. These pictures made possible

THE NIGGER

One of the greatest films brought to Tacoma this season is Edward Sheldon's "The Nigger," a William Fox production coming to the Liberty Sunday for one week. It is declared to be a powerful drama, with a "punch" that appeals to every spectator.

VAUDETTE TODAY

Today's new two-day show for the Vaudette contains "A Night Out," second Essanay release of Charlie Chaplin; "The Trap Door," two part girl detective story; "The Fates and Ryan," Selig drama; and a George Ade fable, "Spongers are Found in the Drug Store."

COCONUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better. Most soaps and prepared shampoo contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mul-sified coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

THE COLONIAL

Not content with the heaping measure of entertainment he is providing the patrons of the Colonial theater with the great New York Hippodrome production, "America," Manager Moore is preparing to boost the standard with the new show Sunday, by bringing "C. O. D.," a Vitagraph comedy equal to "Tillie's Punctured Romance."

SHELL SATURDAY

A full Selig program will be shown at the Shell Saturday, headed by "Ma's Girls," a western play. With it will be the regular Jungle Zoo film, a comedy called "The Clam Shell Surfingettes," and a drama, "The Conversion of Smiling Tom." APOLLO TODAY

LYCERUM

"Fassions of Fate," a two-act Rex drama with Frank Lloyd; "I Love the Nurses," Pathé farce comedy; "Perils of Pauline," No. 14.

IDLE HOUR TODAY

"The Scorpion's Sting," starring King Kalem drama; "The Test," Selig drama with all-star cast; "The Siege of Lige," a comedy based on the experiences of an American war correspondent in Europe.

Confessions of a Wife

(Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Enterprise Association)

Mollie turned to me with a horror-stricken expression.

"Oh, Margie, Margie," she exclaimed, "what shall I do? What shall I do?"

I had just been telling her about Mr. Hatton having an insane wife.

"I had thought of every possible complication and problem, but that is one that never came to me!" she murmured. "Poor Chadwick! No wonder he was always sad— Then she hesitated a minute and said: "I don't think it would be wrong for a man to get a divorce from a woman who is hopelessly insane, do you?"

"Certainly I do not, my dear child," I answered pityingly, "but the law says he may not do so."

"Do you mean to tell me that Chadwick Hatton must be saddled with this insane woman all the rest of his life?"

"Yes, if she does not die before he does."

"How perfectly fiendish! Margie, Margie, I believe I love Chadwick Hatton—and I am almost sure he loves me. What are we going to do?"

"I don't know what he is going to do, but forgive me, Mollie, if I say that I do not quite yet believe that you truly love him. Naturally just now you think you love him because of his tragic plight. Every woman, dear, wants to mother someone or something and now I suppose you think if you could just put your arms about Chadwick Hatton and tell him how sorry you are for him you would think it bliss. But you must remember, my dear, that life is long, and as Dick would say 'the cards must be shuffled a good many times before the game is ended.'"

"Margie, I never knew you to be hard-hearted before," said Mollie through tears.

"I am not hard-hearted, Mollie; I am only trying to tell you, my dear, that I am quite yet believe that your little affair with Chadwick Hatton has gone no farther than it has. It will be very easy for you to break off now."

"Break off with Chadwick Hatton, Margie? You are crazy. I shall never break with Chadwick Hatton as long as he wants me to be his friend."

"All well and good, my dear, but had you keep your companionship on a purely friendly basis?"

"Would you think it very wicked—under the circumstances—if I didn't?"

"Oh, Mollie, Mollie, don't let your pity run away with your good sense. Wait, wait, dear, until the first surprise, the first hurt is over, then there will be time enough to decide such momentous questions."

"Besides," said Mollie, almost with a smile, "you see he hasn't asked me."

"That's right, dear. I must say Chadwick Hatton has been very decent in this matter. Most men would have taken your freshness, your innocent youth, your cleverness and beauty and left you to die of mortification and wounded pride, when you found out the truth."

"Yes, Margie, he has been dear. You don't know—I have not told you how I have tried to make him take me with him to places alone—without Pat as chaperon. I have given him all the chances a self-respecting girl might give to invite me to dine or the theater and he has never taken advantage of them, but the next day there would come to me a wonderful box of white violets or a half dozen books as though he would make up to me in other ways. And, Margie, he has never put his hand on my shoulder or arm—and sometimes I have tempted him to do that."

"Poor, honest little Mollie! I wonder how many girls will own up even to themselves that they have tempted a man. It does not take marriage to make a girl understand that a soft white shoulder gleaming through a peek-a-boo waist or the sculptured forearm in its shirt sleeve can be made as irresistible as moist red lips if used with inviting discretion as well as grace."
