Watch Out When Warring Nations Issue Treasury Notes, Says Babson

BY ROGER BABSON Second Copyrighted Article for The Times on How the Great War is Being Financed.

The longest battle front in our Civil war was three miles. Today, in the great European war, the western battle front extends nearly 400 miles, and the eastern about 700 miles.

England fired more shots during a single day, in a certain battle last fall, than she used during the entire Boer war, while one of her many guns weighs more in tons than Nelson's great flag ship at the battle of Trafalgar.

Concerning men involved, estimates vary. The numbers are so stupendous that a million one way or the other seems to make no difference. At the beginning of the war, it was possible for these countries to sell bonds here in the United States and this gave them new money.

Interest Rate Now Double What It Was Moreover, when one considers that for every man in the field there must be another one at home manufacturing ammunition, and that none of these figures include the vast numbers directly or indirectly engaged in naval warfare, the tremendous cost becomes apparent.

Why, this war is costing nearly 100 times as much per day as did our Civil war, and has already cost as much as all the wars of the past century combined.

As I showed in the last article, the governments are now borrowing money by selling government bonds, just as you would borrow money on your note to buy a piece of land. With this money they are paying cash to the manufacturers of guns and ammunition and to the producers of food supplies.

Each bond issue, however, has been sold with greater difficulty. For instance, the powerful British empire, in order to sell its last issue of bonds about which you hear so much, has been obliged to pay an equivalent of 5 1/2 per cent interest, or nearly

MANY GOING TO FAIR Details are being completed by the young men's commercial organization, under the leadership of Wedell Foss, for a special train next Thursday which will carry a large delegation of Tacoma people to the Southwestern fair near Centralia and Chehalis.

TO BE SOME PARADE Labor leaders today completed an estimate of the number of men expected to take part in the Labor Day parade, and decided that, walking four and six abreast, and with the floats and bands that will accompany the marchers, the length of the procession will exceed five miles.

GEN. DEL. A MENACE OLYMPIA, Aug. 21.—C. J. Backus, assistant postmaster at Tacoma, late yesterday told the Presidential Postmasters' association that the general delivery window is at once a highly useful institution and a menace to morality.

GREAT DOCTORS DIE NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Word was received here today of the death of two of the most widely known physicians in the world, Dr. Charles E. Finley, discoverer of the mosquito origin of yellow fever, at Havana, and Dr. Paul Ehrlich, winner of half the Nobel prize in 1908, expert on cancer, and discoverer of salvarsan, at Bad Homburg, near Berlin.

BUY IT IN TACOMA Whether it be a package of pins or an aeroplane, buy it in Tacoma. Today is "Made-in-Washington" day, and everyone is expected to buy Washington-made articles and stimulate the buy-in-Tacoma movement.

GREAT DAHLIA SHOW Hundreds of people visited the annual Dahlia show at Rhodes Brothers' roof garden yesterday, seeing what officials say was a display nearly four times as large as any other ever on display before in Tacoma.

TOURISTS COMING Word was received yesterday by local railroad offices that two large tourist parties starting from the east soon would be in Tacoma. The first to arrive will be a body of 25 delegates on their way to the Royal Arch Mason council at San Francisco. Thesecond, a party of 75 from Chicago, will arrive Aug. 30.

double what they have heretofore paid? At the beginning of the war, it was possible for these countries to sell bonds here in the United States and this gave them new money. Today, however, wise investors, seeing no end to the conflict, are refusing to buy any more of these bonds.

Our financiers know that there is no way to collect the interest on the bonds, if the European governments should decide not to pay them, and consequently we prefer to invest our money here at home.

As soon as a nation is obliged to sell its bonds to its own people, this results simply in changing money from one pocket to another, but really producing no new money for the nation. When a country is obliged to do as England did last month, and appeal to the working people to take their money out of the government banks and buy bonds with it, it is nearly at the last extremity in bond selling.

As the government already has the use of this money when in the postal savings banks, at a rate of only 2 per cent, what little advantage is it to have the working people pull this out for the purchase of bonds upon which the government is obliged to pay 4 1/2 per cent? And yet the credit of the English government is far superior to that of any other government in Europe.

Treasury Notes Soon Will Appear But what will happen when government bonds can be no longer sold? Will the war end then? No!

You will soon see in the papers that the European governments are beginning to issue "treasury notes." They have a dignified name. When a government can no longer sell bonds to pay for its guns, ammunition and other supplies in cash it starts the printing presses making paper money and pays the people in this paper money.

Therefore, don't be fooled by Lloyd-George's statement that victory will go to the nation that will raise the last billion pounds. Before the days of printing

Every business man in Tacoma is particularly interested in the arrangements and desirous of a large crowd because of the friendly business relations that exist between Tacoma and that section of the state. The fair in the last years has always proved an interesting one.

A band will accompany the excursionists, who will each wear a badge designating his home. Dates have been made by the railroad company.

Labor leaders today completed an estimate of the number of men expected to take part in the Labor Day parade, and decided that, walking four and six abreast, and with the floats and bands that will accompany the marchers, the length of the procession will exceed five miles.

The first sections will have disbanded at Ninth and Broadway before the last section will have started at Seventh and Pacific av. Many outside cities will be represented.

OLYMPIA, Aug. 21.—C. J. Backus, assistant postmaster at Tacoma, late yesterday told the Presidential Postmasters' association that the general delivery window is at once a highly useful institution and a menace to morality.

The saloon hanger-on, the girl roomer, young boys and girls and married men and women all use the general delivery window for illegitimate purposes, he said.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Word was received here today of the death of two of the most widely known physicians in the world, Dr. Charles E. GALVESTON, Aug. 21.—Following the subsiding of the worst storm ever seen by this city, communication with the outside has been restored and the fear of a food shortage dispensed. The city is taking on its normal aspect again. The Evening Tribune issued its first edition on full sized paper last night on presses operated by motor buses.

presses this might have been so. When a nation can sell no more bonds it will begin to issue paper money. Then watch out! What will be the result of this? It will immediately put up prices. As the government begins to put out more money, the people will naturally begin to feel that each individual dollar is worth less.

This is simply a question of arithmetic. If the real assets of a country are $100,000,000 and the nation has 100,000,000 one dollar bills outstanding, each of these bills is worth one dollar; but if the nation with the same amount of assets puts out 100,000,000 additional one dollar bills, making 200,000,000 together, each one will be worth only 50 cents.

Greatest Burden Falls On Working Millions This means that just as soon as the governments begin to put out paper money, prices of commodities on supply and demand, begin to climb as the value of the dollar decreases.

The wages of the soldiers, however, are fixed by law and of the other working people are fixed by custom. Hence, these remain the same. Under such conditions the working people get no more wages than they got before, while their wages are able to purchase only half as much in food, clothing and shelter.

The ultimate burden of all wars falls on the working people. If government bonds are issued the working people must ultimately pay them through increased rents and interest rates; while if paper money is issued the masses must likewise foot the bill through increased prices.

It is too bad that the laws of economics work out in this way, but they do; and it is useless to try to fool ourselves into the belief that they don't. The least benefit and the greatest burden of war fall on the working people.

Moreover, this burden falls not only on the working people of the countries of the war; but, as I shall show in my next article, it falls also on the working people of the countries at peace.
