Here's Champion Giant-Baby of U. S.; Weighs 19 Pounds

HOW SAMMY TIPS THE SCALES.

BY HONOR FANNING. CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—This is to introduce you to the AMERICAN GIANT BABY OF AMERICA!

Take off your hat to Sammie Pucillo, new heavyweight champion in the cradle class, who, weighing in at 19 pounds, has run away with the American record for size in babies!

Sammie doesn't know a thing about it, but the eyes of all the medical world are on him today, and some of the physicians and some of the eugenic faddists hail him as the long heralded super-baby who is to father the super-man, and some of them say he is the forerunner of a race of American giants!

Any way, the "champion" is here, clothed chiefly in fame and glory, for when he arrived there wasn't a stitch of clothing in his baby basket that would fit him! Mamma Pucillo had expected a "good, big bambino," to be sure, but she had prepared no clothes for a baby giant; that's why Sammie is receiving visitors—and he has hundreds of them daily—and posing for pictures swathed in strips of flannel just as he's pictured here, and that's why his christening has been postponed until there's time and money to make new clothes for the cradle champion.

The American Text Book of Obstetrics has been consulted to see if Champion Pucillo is really entitled to rank as the biggest baby in America. The "text book" says: "New born babies weigh seven pounds, though boys usually weigh half a pound more than girls. Babies of 12 pounds HAVE been seen."

But there's not a word about a 19-pound baby. So Sammie's title is clear. His head, which is twice too big for the ordinary baby-bonnet, is 15 inches around; his hands are four times the size of the average new-born babe; his shoulders are sturdy and broad, his waist is 20 inches—his mother's is only 30—his spine is so strong that now, when five days old, he can sit up 1 1/2 hrs crib with back unsupported.

The heavyweight, isn't paying much attention to diet just now. "Mother's milk whenever he cries," is Mamma Pucillo's notion of feeding a champion baby. But when he's two weeks old she'll give him malted milk, just two ounces four times a day and four times at night. "I'll just let the bambino grow, same as my baby Danny grew," says mother of the "giant baby."

What normal baby should weigh and measure: At Birth—Height, 20 1/2 inches; weight, 7 1/2 pounds. One Year—Height, 30 inches; weight, 21 pounds. Two Years—Height, 32 1/2 inches; weight, 26 1/2 pounds. Three Years—Height, 35 inches; weight, 31 pounds. Four Years—Height, 38 inches; weight, 35 pounds. EXPERTS SAY: A baby gains six ounces a week until six months, when it has doubled its weight at birth; then it gains four ounces a month until a year old, when its weight since birth has trebled; and then it gains five pounds a year until nine.

IF Sammie Pucillo makes the same proportionate gains in weight as the normal baby he will be the size of the giants of fairy lore. some days he doesn't work. How can we eat steak when we have so little money? "I eat beans, oh, plenty beans baked in the oven; macaroni too, and plenty of potatoes; potatoes for dinner and potatoes for breakfast. Many times in the day I drink coffee. Sundays we have chicken. It's the only meat we eat. Italians like vegetables, we eat lots of them instead of meat."
