

LITTLE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM

"Looking down through a vista of white limestone crosses one sees a part of the little town of Bethlehem and the great steel mills, with tall smokestacks belching forth fire for forging death-dealers—for there an army of men are making guns and munitions that the war in Europe may go on."

Mankind, instead of congratulating himself over the success of the year, thinks of the interests of his fellowmen.

It was said that the present outstanding credits were being upheld by the business men, but that no new credits had been asked. TOWN IS DEATH'S CAPITAL

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Sept. 22.—This "little town of Bethlehem" has become the birthplace of death!

Founded in 1741 by a group of evangelists seeking to spread the teachings of Christ in the New World it has become a town boomed by death. For here the great Bethlehem steel mills, owned by Charles Schwab, are busy, day and night, turning out millions of shells and guns for the allies.

It is really South Bethlehem that has had success thus upon it by shrapnel, for the Lehigh river divides the town, which for its size, is the most cosmopolitan in the United States.

Its voice is of 20 tongues. But now South Bethlehem does not talk much of war. Of its 35,000 people 10,000 and more are Austrians—the men Ambassador Dumba is charged with trying to induce to strike. They do not care to talk much of war; nor does the steel company want them to!

"These are prosperous days. Off work the men rush for the saloons. Worn out they want their beer. Big brutish fellows most of them, their animal natures call for boisterous, furious fun before they sleep.

Rents are up, too! "Hunkies," as the English speaking say here, are paying $16 and $18 a month where before the war they paid $12 and $14. But they are making $1.60 a day and can work seven days a week if they wish. And they are eating meat twice a day whereas in the old country they were lucky to taste it once a week—so they are satisfied.

The "works" are more than three miles long—and growing fast.

Already Schwab has bought a row of five houses near the company's main gate. A year and a half ago you could buy the property for $5,000 and $6,000. Schwab paid the owners $25,000 and $27,000 apiece.
