

MORAN BEATS COFFEY; IS CHAMP CONTENDER

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Weakened by the eighth and ninth rounds last night after stopping hundreds of terrific punches to the head and body, Jim Coffey, the Dublin giant, hit the mat four times in the ninth and his seconds threw up the sponge.

Frank Moran, by his devious victory, is now in line to face Jess Willard, world's heavy-weight champion. It was Moran's second victory over Coffey in three months. The first fight ended in three rounds.

Coffey showed marked improvement last night. During the early part of the ten round match he and Moran put up a terrific battle, and the great crowd that filled the Madison Square Garden was given a thrill after thrill. Coffey showed even more skill than Moran during the first seven rounds, and would have won on points had he been able to keep up his stride.

Moran's superior strength began to tell, however, and in the following two rounds the Irishman went completely to pieces under the Pittsburgher's onslaught. Moran weighed 196½ and Coffey 205½.

He's the logical man to meet Jess Willard for the heavyweight championship of the world. Moran's decisive victory over Coffey puts him at the top of the list of championship contenders.

C. P. S. IS BEATEN BADLY

The first big basketball game of the season in Tacoma resulted last night in a 40 to 17 victory for the first team of the University of Washington over the College of Puget Sound first team, at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

Although C. P. S. was wholly outclassed from the first whistle the large crowd of college rooters kept up a continuous blare of music, cheers and yells throughout the entire game.

The Washington team was something of a disappointment. Davidson, forward, was the only player who received individual applause for sensational playing.

Marathon Winner Takes Honors In Race Thru Rain

George Wyckoff, marathon winner.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—Taking the lead in a field of 55 runners, George Wyckoff, Olympic club entry, captured the honors in the New Year's day marathon here in a hard race through a chilling rain. The course led from the Ferry building through Golden Gate park to the beach—a distance of about eight miles. The time was 42:32, a good record considering the cold day and slippery streets. Wyckoff's final spurt along the beach was cheered by a large crowd of race fans gathered to see the finish. H. Ludwig, Caledonian club entrant, was second and for a time gave the winner a good race.

Tom Shevlin, Star of Clean Athletics, Gave His Life to Save Yale

The death of Tom Shevlin at Minneapolis, Minn., his home, closes one of the finest careers of a college athlete ever led. From the time Shevlin entered Yale in 1902 he was a credit to clean amateur sports and from the time he left college in 1905 was a credit to the business world.

Shevlin did not confine his activities to any one sport. He was best at football, but also won a "Y" on the college crew and another as a member of the track team. Besides, he played baseball in his freshman year.

Shevlin was one of few football players ever named All-American under four consecutive years. While he was on the varsity team in 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, Yale defeated Harvard each season and defeated Princeton in three of the four seasons.

In 1905 the great end was captain of the team and turned out the best aggregation that ever represented the school.

In 1910 Yale was trimmed 21 to 0 by Brown. Shevlin was sent for. He accomplished so much for. He put the team in shape to whip Princeton, which had been going like a cyclone, but in the Harvard game his team was snowed under.

Shevlin gave his life to make Yale a winner. He contracted a cold while coaching the team and instead of turning the work over to another and seeking treatment he stayed on the job.

After the season closed he sought to regain health in California, but pneumonia developed and specialists were unable to save his life.

Shevlin was as much a success in business as in athletics. He was rated a millionaire and left insurance of more than $1,000,000.

PETER'S PIFFLE

Strong coffee is reported by doctors to be highly dangerous. Frank Moran found that his Coffey last night was "well ground" but was only a cheap imitation of the real thing.

Sam Howard, he of the diamond teeth, chipped one of his teeth on an oyster shell the other day. They must eat oysters in Oshkosh like we eat corn in Tacoma.

Fans are wondering today what excuse Jess Willard will make to avoid a fight with Frank Moran. They're also kinda wondering how long this phenom, would last in the ring with a regular guy like Frank.

A New York club charges Ad Wolgast violated a contract by fighting in Atlanta before filling his New York date. Atlanta fans can testify he didn't fight.

Seattle Hockey Player Has Had 50 Stitches In Face; Nice 'Soft' Game

This stitch-map of Cully Wilson's face indicates some of the hazards to which hockey players expose themselves. Wilson is one of the Seattle Metropolitan stars, leading the P. C. H. A. He has been cut so often by wild swings of opponents' clubs that the doctors have put 50 stitches in his face to keep him looking respectable. On the back of his head, in addition, Wilson has had so many wounds sewed up that it's too lopsided to wear a hat.

If he gets many more cuts his mother won't be able to recognize him when he returns to his east Canadian home, Toronto, after the season in the west.

The circles indicate the location and number of stitches, and the name of the player and club responsible.

"IF TY COBB WOULD ONLY HUNT WITH ME," SIGHS OSCAR VITT

BY TOM LAIRD.

NAPA, Cal., Jan. 8.—With all the pleasures of his mountain home, Oscar Vitt is not quite satisfied. He will be completely happy, he says, when he induces Ty Cobb to visit him in his paradise in the clouds.

"The Peach," as Vitt calls Tyrus Raymond, "is always boasting about his hunting trips in Georgia," complained Oscar. "I don't know a great deal about his southern state, but I'm willing to bet my hunting grounds have his beaten a mile. I want to show him some real hunting, but he won't come up here. One visit would convince him that I have the real place for sport."

Vitt has a pair of boots which Cobb gave him and he wouldn't part with them for love or money. He can use the boots, all right. There's scarcely a level foot of ground within five miles of his cabin. Vitt also wears heavy boots when he goes hiking over the rocks.

New Year's day brought sorrow to Vitt. The quail season closed on that date. He has enjoyed many a quail breakfast and gotten a lot of sport out of the hunting, but he says he won't break the law to furnish more quail and toast for his table.

"As much as I like the hunting, I won't kill a quail out of season," he avowed. "They could wander into my cabin and I wouldn't harm them, unless we happened to be starving, and there's no chance of that happening."

Real winter will soon settle down around the Vitt cabin. The snow will whiten the hills, but as the fall is light, the Vitts are fairly safe from being snow-bound.

"When winter comes in earnest we just keep the fire going and sit around and read," said Mrs. Vitt.

"It's the only life," said Oscar. "I wouldn't care if we never left here."
