Poorest Woman Is Guest of Mikado!

(Copyright, 1916, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.) TOKYO, Japan, Jan. 10.—THE FIRST OFFICIAL ACT OF THE MIKADO IN PERSON, SINCE HIS RECENT CORONATION, HAS JUST BEEN ANNOUNCED! It is the gift of an imperial sake cup to 500,000 of his subjects who have reached the age of 80 or over. The cup, which is used for the national beverage, rice wine, is inscribed with a greeting from the emperor in his own handwriting.

that little short of a miracle could make her going possible. But in a respectable neighborhood lived her landlord who, though rich, had no special claims upon the consideration of the imperial household department. Despite all contriving he had been unable to bring enough pressure to bear so that he could obtain a ticket for the procession. By chance he heard of the predicament of his aged tenant, with the result that he offered not only to buy her the proper clothing and provide her railway fare, but offered himself as her attendant. No happier pair watched the procession wind its way through the palace park than these two, divided by fortune but united by their patriotic love for their emperor, who to them is both their father and their god.

W. C. T. U. Objects The gift of a wine cup was made despite protests of the W. C. T. U. on the ground that it has been the custom for 18 centuries for the old people of Japan to cheer their declining days with a daily allowance of warm sake! On the day the emperor arrived at the palace in Kyoto, Nov. 7, provision had been made for the seating of several thousand of these old men and women. Each was allowed a younger attendant, as many were too feeble to go alone. From early in the morning until the arrival of the emperor at 3:30 in the afternoon they sat on their heels, Oriental fashion, awaiting the great event of their lives. Many were there who remembered the old days when it was regarded as a crime, punishable by death, to gaze upon the face of the emperor. When the emperor himself went by many were so over-awed that, bending low, they failed to catch even a glimpse of his imperial person setting well back in the closed carriage. After the procession had passed and the crowd dispersed the police and a special guard devoted themselves to the task of seeing that these frail old people were properly conveyed to rickshaws, the queer man-drawn buggies of Japan, and to street cars. A special honor was given to one very poor woman of Osaka. Nearly 100 years old,
