Yes, It Was Fine, Peaceful Ship, That Oscar II--NOT

(EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the second article with pictures received from Miss Moore, our own specially engaged peace pilgrim. Her first story, telling intimately of the reception of the argosy's members in Norway, was printed yesterday. Today's story, giving impressions of life on the Oscar II, was mailed when the ship touched England but was delayed by the censor. Miss Moore's other articles will be printed as they arrive.)

BY SARA MOORE. As the Oscar II drew into Kirkwall escorted by a British cruiser the only peaceful spot was in the steering. Wild-eyed newspapermen, sustained only by sausage and strong tea, sat up all night trying vainly to keep up to minute in recording disputes.

The Oscar's Guardian Angel.

At 10 o'clock S. S. McClure, who had bolted the delegation by refusing to sign a resolution condemning the president's policy, started a regular evening program of free-for-all and exclusively secretive fights.

McClure started to review the history of international disputes in Europe, but the discussion was shut off by the steam roller.

Dr. C. F. Aked at the close of the meeting characterized Mr. McClure's address as "ignorance and impertinence."

Mme. Schwimmer, to whom the remark was addressed, replied: "I should not have added impertinence."

A committee of three started out to treat with the harbor master in an effort to board the boat.

The tender nothings which the men of the press club said to each other penetrated above the sudden roar of typewriters—and the sob sisters aboard were just as mad.

The gloomy committee returned: "The harbor master says the harbor is closed for the night. They would turn a gun on him if he lowered a boat or showed a light. Nothing can be done."

Three Do Not Stop. Just then the donkey engine back of the boat blew off steam. The cloud of white, sudden rush of the crew, a wild clanging of bells and the possibility that the excitement would draw a shot made overwrought journalists, delegates and sleepy stenographers shriek as they ran to the decks.

In the flag-hung, dove-decorated news room three typewriters kept on clicking.

"If we are really going down, call me, will you?" asked an excitement-hardened reporter, without turning his head.

I do not know whether the man who got away carried any "scops" or not. Probably you in the United States do know—by the time this reaches you.

Note by Editor—We reckon he didn't. They haven't been printed, anyway.)

HEROIC RESCUE WORK

CLE ELUM, Jan. 22.—Hitching themselves in a harness like that used on dog sleds, and dragging their burden on an improvised sled made of two skis through snow 10 feet deep, four men saved the life of Robert Nelson of Seattle. Nelson cut an artery in his ankle Jan. 5, but no doctor was called until last Sunday. The four men, Rudolph and Adolph Elsner, M. Lutkins and an unknown woodsman, pulled the young man to Roslyn from where he was sent to the hospital here. They dragged their load 14 hours each of two days with practically no food. Nelson will live.

ONE-MAN CARS NOW

OLYMPIA, Jan. 22.—Stone & Webster has its feelers out here to try and find out what the public service commission thinks about the establishment of "one-man" street cars, such as were described recently by Manager Bean of the T. R. & P. to the Tacoma city council. The commission has a letter today from the Puget Sound Traction, Light & Power Co., saying the company intends to build the new type of car to provide for "safety, efficiency and comfort." The commission will probably make a thorough investigation.

BANDIT KILLS COP

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Police are searching the country today for the daring bandit who in broad daylight yesterday afternoon robbed the tourist agency of Thomas A. Cook & Son of $900, wounded the cashier and killed a policeman. The bandit was accompanied by a woman. Both escaped. The robbery is declared to be one of the most daring in years. It occurred on one of the busiest streets in the downtown district at a time when traffic was congested.

VILLA WEDS AGAIN

JUAREZ, Jan. 22.—With two women, one in Cuba and the other in Los Angeles, claiming him as their husband, Francisco Villa has married again, according to the statement of Ignacio Enriquez, civil governor of Chihuahua, who arrived here yesterday. While three Carranza columns were searching to bring Zim back dead or alive, Villa tarried long enough in Machineva, in the western Chihuahua mountains, to be married.

JAIL FOR "PIGGER"

Ten days in the county jail and a fine of $125 was the sentence which followed the first conviction by a jury in Pierce county under the dry law. The verdict was returned in Justice Graham's court against Gus Carlson of Wilkeson, who was arrested in a recent raid of former saloons at Wilkeson and Carbonado conducted by Sheriff Longmire. The case will be appealed. The prosecution was based on a sale of whisky.

WILSON MAKES PLANS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22.—Completed plans for President Wilson's trip through the middle west to speak on preparedness include stops at Pittsburg, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Chicago, Des Moines, Topeka and Kansas City. The president will leave on the trip Friday night, Jan. 28, and will return Feb. 4 in time for the judicial dinner in the White House.

RIGID U. S. INQUIRY

Five witnesses, two of whom were on the launch Victor II when the captain a week ago, testified yesterday at the inquiry conducted by U. S. Steamboat Inspectors Whitney and Lord. The inquiry was continued to next week, when the fate of E. I. Wood and Richard Wayson, who were in charge of the launch when she turned over, will be decided. The U. S. cutter Scout sailed yesterday in its search for the bodies of the two Bower children who lost their lives.

OPEN ANCIENT MINES

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Running short of coal to operate the railroad they are constructing in their campaign in Egypt, the Germans have reopened the old Turkish mines in Syria used by the Romans and abandoned by them more than 1,000 years ago. The capacity of these mines is limited to 500,000 tons annually.

THEATRICAL

Sarah Bernhardt's Famous Drama 'Madame X' at Empress Theater

The big climax of scene 1 in "Madame X" when the young wife and mother is turned from her home.

"Madame X" Alexandre Bisson's wonderful drama of "mother love" is announced by the Ernest Wilkes Stock company for the new week beginning with the matinee Sunday. That this greatest of all human motives is made the theme of a stirring drama, is probably the chief reason for the sensational record of the play. It was written by the distinguished French dramatist for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt.

MUSICAL BILL AND THRILLERS WILL COMPETE FOR HONORS

Peggy Bremen, who appears with her brother on the new Pantages bill in one of the most daring balancing acts ever brought to the Northwest.

Musical comedy will again be the feature of the bill at the Pantages theater beginning Monday matinee when Alf Goulding, the popular light opera comedian, and his company will headline the program. "In Mexico" is the title of the tuneful, sparkling production with its company of ten pretty girls.
