Some Glad-Hander Is George Lee, Who Wants Lister's Job

This is the sixth article on gubernatorial candidates. The next will tell of John G. Lewis, of Aberdeen.

Geo. E. Lee

Taking into account the exigencies and necessities of the case at hand, we make bold to modernize one of the favorite quips of our co-literateur, W. Shakespeare.

Accordingly, we refer to the most pulchritudinous of our various and variegated gubernatorial aspirants, and thus we declare and set forth:

"Some are born hand shakers; others acquire the art, and still others have it thrust upon them." George E. Lee belongs to the first class.

He's a Handsome Man
George is comely—aye, handsome.

The blackness of his hair glistens like Poe's raven. You might say his was a ravenous beauty. His dark eyes beam bountifully and beautifully.

He talks glibly. And his hands are equipped with automatic springs.

They jump hither and thither—they fairly fly in a crowd—and there is no man in this great commonwealth, or as the orators say, there is no one in this great and glorious commonwealth who has any itch or the faintest desire to shake hands with a gubernatorial aspirant who will not be clasped to his heart's or hands' content if George ever meets him.

He Knows the Game
Lee, in short, can tie his hands behind his back and at that beat his rivals at the glad-hand art. He has mastered it to scientific precision.

He knows it from soup to nuts, as Brother Carlyle would say, speaking cafterentially. But, in all fairness, let it be said that the joyful mitten is not the only valuable possession of Lee's.

He is an able orator and has held several important public offices. He is a lawyer by profession.

Lived in Spokane
Lee is a graduate of the University of Nebraska. Shortly afterward he came to Washington locating in Spokane.

He lived in Spokane continuously until the past two years, except for the period of officialdom at Olympia.

Almost immediately after arriving in Spokane, Lee got into public work.

He became deputy prosecuting attorney, made speeches for Taft in 1908, and was appointed assistant attorney general serving in 1909 and 1910.

He was also counsel for the legislative investigating committee in 1909.

He's Partner of Murphy
In 1911 he was appointed by Gov. Hay as chairman of the state industrial insurance commission, which was then organized for the first time in the country. Shortly afterward he resigned to accept the position of chairman of the public service commission.

Many inquiries have come in to the Times office concerning the attitude of George F. Lee, candidate for governor on the republican ticket, toward the prohibition law.

His attitude toward that law was "wet."

He trained with and gave official aid to the booze crowd.

Dayton Pays Waite $12,500 a Year, It Seems Well Earned

HENRY M. WAITE, of Dayton, the ablest and most conspicuous of city managers at present, is the highest paid public official in Ohio—$12,500 a year.

But that is not his chief claim to distinction. He is showing that a city can be run as economically and efficiently as an up-to-date business.

When the first Dayton commissioners took office in 1914, they realized that the success of the new government depended largely upon the personality and equipment of the man whom they would select to fill the city managership.

No one in Dayton seemed to fill the bill in every particular. There were plenty of able men in the town, but most of them had been too closely identified with local affairs or were unavailable for some other reason.

The job was offered first to Colonel Goethals, the builder of the Panama canal, at $25,000 a year. He declined.

The commission then discovered H. M. Waite, the city engineer of Cincinnati, and right hand man of young Mayor Hunt, whose brilliant reform administration there was just closing.

Waite had had a long and important engineering experience in private corporations. He refused an offer of $15,000 a year from a private corporation and took the Dayton managership.

Space forbids a recital of more than a few of the changes that have been wrought since the new government started operation two and a half years ago.

A municipal garbage plant has been set up that is paying its own way. The first building code that Dayton ever had was enacted shortly after Mr. Waite came to town. The efficiency of the water works has increased about thirty per cent. The accounting and budget systems were completely overhauled.

Much that might be told is matter of a somewhat technical nature. The real capacity of the system and its head were revealed in a big way when in August, 1915, the budget commission, which is composed entirely of county officials, allowed the city from tax revenues $505,528, which was $164,746 less than the city had received in 1914. Immediately the entire administrative staff was called together and such economies were planned for the rest of the year as could be effected without seriously impairing the service. The year 1915 closed with a balance on hand of $48,500 with which to meet the demands of the future.

More recently the commission decided that the interests of the city required a bond issue involving more separate items. Only once before had Dayton had a bond issue—the law required a two-thirds majority to carry one. But so thoroughly was the commission-manager government in the people's confidence that they carried every item of the bond issue this year by a vote of three to one.

Novelty and Comedy Chief Elements for 'Bike' Stunt

Will Morris, a "nut" bicycle rider on the new Pantages bill.

Realizing that the day of the bicycle rider is over in vaudeville unless some novel feature can be made of it, Will Morris has conceived an act that scores one of the best bits of the week at the Pantages. Morris does not devote as much time to riding as he does to comedy, although he shows that he is a daredevil with his wheel. With a baggy suit and a disreputable looking bicycle Morris keeps his audiences howling with laughter and when they begin to believe that he is all comedy and no riding, he performs some startling new tricks.

"Pests," Says Funston

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 2.—Gen. Funston, in a telegram to the war department, has announced he will oust from the national guardsmen camps newspaper correspondents who send out false accounts of conditions in the camps. He calls them "pests," saying he has endured them as long as he is going to.

"The great mass of the guardsmen are standing the hardships of camp life well," he says, and have no cause for complaint. It is only mollycoddles and sissies who kick. These are the ones who tell tales of woe to special correspondents."

All Vote for Strike

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The count of ballots of one-fourth of the 100,000 members of four railway brotherhoods, who are voting on a general strike on 225 railroads of the country, showed today that the men are almost unanimous in favor of calling a strike.

The railroad men are not asking an increase in pay, but only for an eight-hour day. When the complete vote has been counted, probably Saturday, negotiations will be conducted in the hope of a satisfactory settlement. If they fail, a strike will be called.

Y. W. Secretary On Job

Miss M. Belle Jeffery, new general secretary of the Tacoma Y. W. C. A., is on the job today at the association rooms on Commerce street. She succeeds Miss Mary Wheeler.

Miss Jeffery knows her business thoroughly. She has held several important positions in Y. W. C. A. work. She says the Tacoma quarters have the making for a fine recreation center for girls and women of the city.

Weatherman Truthful

At last Weatherman Cover comes forth and tells nothing but the truth. He reports Tuesday, after consulting his meteorological summary, that more rain fell in July this year than in any previous July since the records have been kept in Tacoma.

Altogether 2.99 inches fell. There were six clear days, 17 cloudy and eight partly cloudy.
