It'll be a Big Time

The largest Labor day celebration ever held in Tacoma appears on the horizon as the result of the Thursday night report of the committees in charge.

A monstrous parade, punctuated by seven bands, is one of the features of the day. Charles Perry Taylor, secretary of the State Federation of Labor, will be the speaker of the day, while W. H. Ittner also will speak.

A program of sports will be held on Yakima avenue, featured by a tug of war match between Seattle and Tacoma longshorem.

To the Merchant!

They're waiting, thousands of house-wives throughout the suburbs and the country-side—waiting for the telephone calls that will tell them whose goods are best and prices are lowest.

What of yours? Are your orders coming from the same old restricted line of customers, or are you branching out into the country and neighboring towns, building up your business by Bell telephone.

NOW IS THE TIME!

Consult the list of toll rates to cities hereabout; it's in the front of your Bell directory.

Baker Praises Wilson

WATERVILLE, Me., Aug. 25.—"Large problems lie before us in the next four years. No unfamiliar hand should be put in to guide the course of our nation during that period. No uncertain voice should be permitted to speak our spirit at the council table that reorganizes the universe."

Such was the statement of Secretary of War Baker, praising the administration's European policies in an address here last night.

"President Wilson's administration is inspired by a philosophy which is an expression of the longing of mankind in this day and generation. It has refused to allow itself to be turned aside by foreign violence in the accomplishment of its great program."

Soldiers Must Shave

PARIS, Aug. 25.—The general military order commanding all French troops at the front to shave their beards has caused an epidemic of irony and wit to sweep over France.

Henri Bataille mourns the beard as a "nest of souvenirs, dear and tender, somewhat timid and a little shivery."

Gen. Pierre Cherfils, reasoning technically, excuses the measure because "the beard of a trooper weighs on an average of 60 grammes. With 2,000,000 men at the front this brings the aggregate weight to 120 tons. It was natural that the staff should think of relieving the army of this considerable and useless weight."

Opened to Paradise

The automobile road from the Inn is now open through to Paradise Valley, and the first machines were allowed to go over it this morning.

"While new, the road is in fine shape and will stand a lot of traffic," said Supervisor Reburn. "This will permit tourists to enter the very heart of the mountain's park. We expect that the coming week-end will see all records for visitors broken."

Sale Put Up to People

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 25.—The lower house of parliament in committee has accepted a resolution that if the sale of the Danish West Indies cannot be postponed until after the war the question shall be settled by general elections.

The resolution was formally submitted today.

Bridges Talks to Dems

Robert Bridges of Seattle, democratic candidate for congress, in addressing the Pierce county democratic luncheon said that the railroad magnates have found their master now that President Wilson has taken a hand in the pending railroad strike.

Bridges discussed the measures of the administration and said no fault could be found.

Car Goes Off Bridge

MORTON, Aug. 25.—When their automobile went off a bridge between Lewis and Randle last night, James A. Urquhart, Chehalis banker, was killed, and his mother suffered probably fatal injuries. Other occupants of the car were badly injured. The car went off the bridge and toppled into a mountain stream.

'Tis a Tough Old Job

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Republican leaders in charge of trying to win back the progressive party in the west in the election of Hughes began desperate work Thursday. Within a week every progressive leader between Ohio and the Pacific coast will be asked to make a report on local conditions.

Salmon Pack Is Small

SEATTLE, Aug. 25.—The first annual figures to be announced for the 1916 pack of Alaska salmon shows a shortage of at least 1,000,000 cases of pinks, while the other varieties show a corresponding shrinkage.

BUCKLEY DRAGGED ASHORE AT END OF DESPERATE JOURNEY

PAUL BUCKLEY AND "SPOT."

By Jack Jungmeyer

CHAPTER TWO.

SELDOVIA, Alaska, Aug. 25.—"We had started back toward my cabin over the seven-foot snow when the dogs jumped a porcupine," said Paul Buckley, continuing the account of his most desperate Alaskan adventure.

"Reckless with hunger, they did not use ordinary precaution, and the porky whipped his tail across the face of Spot, filling his eyes with barkle."

"Too tortured to share in the first food we had eaten in five days, Spot stumbled after the other two dogs and me on that terrible back track to the cabin at Port Dick."

"Heartbroken over Spot's condition, I, too, became careless, and in musing along a frozen creek stumbled into an airhole. I went completely under and got out with the greatest difficulty."

Stagers Into Cabin

"Minutes would now decide the balance between life and death for me. It was so cold that my hands and feet began freezing at once. Throwing aside rifle and snowshoes, I waddled with my last desperate effort to the door, lunged against it and fell inside."

"Starting a fire with material I had left in readiness, I got warm finally, after thawing my frosted feet and hands in the snow."

"The dogs and I shared a few prunes I had left in the cabin and then I fell upon my bunk and lapsed into unconsciousness for probably 36 hours."

"I was awakened by the pups licking my face and hand, and by the howling of old Spot. Swollen, blinded eyes watering, he sat beside the bunk pleading for relief from his misery."

A Terrible Kindness

"And so I had to kill him after all—a terrible service I could not refuse an old friend and trail companion."

"I had left an old revolver with two cartridges in the cabin, and with that I did the thing that had to be done."

"Goodbye, old man," I said to him. "This is busting my heart, but if there's a future where there are no blizzards and porkies, I'll meet you there. And you'll tell me I did just right, I hope."

"Then I shot him between the blinded, upturned eyes—a friend who had never proved false to any trust."

"For several days the pups and I remained in the cabin, keeping life in us by boiling old flour sacks I had saved and drinking the broth."

"Setting out for Seldovia in a dory around the rocky, storm-swept winter coast, I was caught the first day in a squall, pitched on the reefs and had a hole stove in the boat. I managed to patch it up with a driftwood plank, using pegs for nails, boring the necessary holes with my pocket knife."

Dragged Ashore by Friend

"Two days later I reached Pearl Island, at the southern end of Kenai Peninsula, where I was dragged ashore with the dogs, Doc and Captain, by an old friend, Anderson."

"Hello," he said, dubiously, "where are you from? Pork Dick, eh? And have you by any chance seen anything of my friend Buckley? We're beginning to get worried about him."

"Why, Andy, I muttered, 'don't you know me—I'm Buckley!'"

"No, no—you can't be! My God, Paul, this can't be you!" peering at me closely.

"Yes, I answered, 'this is me, but I haven't eaten for a long time. Have you got a square meal that you'll lead us to—the me and the dogs?'"

First Meal for Weeks

"Anderson bawled like a baby as he hurried us to his cabin and gave us the first real meal we'd had in many weeks."

"And so you see," concluded Buckley, "how unnecessary it would have been to kill and eat my dogs, the way matters turned out. I should have felt like a murderer the rest of my life."

When cynics tell me that all men are brutal beasts, I shall recall the love of Buckley, the seasoned, genial, big Alaskan "sondough," for his dogs—and I shall tell them they lie.
