Hughes Lacked Nerve

(Special to The Times.)
NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Richard Olney, attorney general and secretary of state in the second Cleveland administration, in a signed statement made public today issues a sweeping challenge to the sincerity of Charles E. Hughes in attacking the administration's action in averting a general railroad strike.
"What the opposition campaigners object to, including republican senators and candidate Hughes himself, is not at all averted strike but the mode of its accomplishment, by the threat of a strike within a time too short for due consideration of necessary legislation," says Olney.
"But twenty-eight republican senators voted against it; there is no cloture in the senate and a filibuster against objectionable legislation is a recognized senatorial weapon."
"Why did not the republican senators resort to it and get all the time for deliberation they wanted. What was Candidate Hughes doing that he did not make the wires hot with messages to Washington, warning against the law the seventy-four republican representatives who voted for it, and urging the 28 republican senators to filibuster to the last ditch?"
"Neither he nor the republican leaders generally had the nerve to face the situation."

Mobilize Greek Army?

(United Press Leased Wire)
LONDON, Sept. 28.—Greece's army of 300,000 men will be mobilized immediately to join the armies of the allies, said an unconfirmed Athens dispatch today.
King Constantine was expected to sign the mobilization decree within 48 hours, Athens reported. The government will then issue a proclamation denouncing Bulgaria's occupation of Kavala and other Greek ports following this with a declaration of war.
The Greek legation today had no confirmation of these reports. The Greek battleship Hydra and the cruiser Psara are known to have joined the allied fleet in the Mediterranean under control of the revolutionists, said an Athens dispatch.

Harper Chairman

SEATTLE, Sept. 28.—Fred C. Harper of this city, former U. S. collector of customs, was the unanimous choice for chairman of the republican state central committee yesterday afternoon. Harper immediately appointed Senator Dan Landon, recent candidate for congress, and former progressive leader, as secretary.
James McNeely and Swan Sampson of Tacoma were appointed members of the executive committee.
Harper was a supporter of Henry McBride during the primary campaign, and was McBride's choice for chairman. He is known as a pronounced advocate of keeping the "dry" law "dry."

Local Man Moderator

Rev. D. O. Ghormley of Tacoma is the new moderator of the Olympia Presbytery, which closed its session Wednesday in the First Presbyterian church at Kapowsin. He succeeds Elder James A. Hays of Tacoma, who opened the sessions with an address Tuesday.
One of the committee reports on the Presbytery ministers to urge their congregations to use all possible efforts against initiative measures 18 and 24, known as the liquor measures.

"GREAT ADVENTURER," IN UPHILL BATTLE, CARRIES SINGLE TAX TO AN ISSUE

Editor Times:
Noting your editorial reference to the fact that California is this year to vote upon a constitutional amendment which directly and specifically puts in force the single tax, unlimited, I would like to have you note also how this remarkable forward step came to be taken.
It is a most notable example of what one man with courage can do. For it is literally the result of the efforts of one man, by name, James H. Griffes, who writes under and is better known by the name Luke North.
He is the publisher of a little monthly magazine, "Everyman," which has for a slogan "Against all that limits man."
Fights Single Handed
The single tax propaganda has always been more or less active in California but the effort at practical application has been limited to an endeavor to secure local option—the right of community legislation in taxation.
These efforts have been unsuccessful. Out of his impatience Luke North, less than a year ago, in face of the active opposition (at first) of leading single taxers who doubted its expediency, without a dollar to back it up and no agency by which to make his appeal save the little monthly of limited circulation, proposed an initiative state constitutional amendment, that "public revenues shall be raised by taxation of land values exclusive of improvements."
Believes Time Is Ripe
That there shall be no misunderstanding whatever the proposed amendment definitely states that "the intent of this provision is to take for public use the rental and site values of land and to reduce land holding to those only who live on or make productive use of it."
In a word this man thought that the time had come for actually realizing that of which men had talked and written so much and for so long—the wonderful dream of liberty given to this present age by Henry George.
The result indicates that he was right and the conservative single taxers (remarkable term) were wrong. It would not be at all surprising now if the thing carried and the single tax were actually put into effect in the state of Henry George in the same general way as the first read "Progress and Poverty."
Certainly it makes an issue in that state beside which the contest between Mr. Hughes and Mr. Wilson is a mere matter of the moment.
"The Great Adventure"
Griffes put forward his appeal under the designation: "The Great Adventure." It was an inspiration—or rather it was born of the inspiration that induced the proposal itself, for that slogan fired the blood and brought every phase of radicalism together for this one undertaking.
Money was called for to secure signatures to the petition and it came. Henry Bool, Somerset, England, sent $1,000 early in the campaign and later $900 more.
One hundred and thirty thousand signatures were secured, out of which, after rigid checking, over 88,000 were validated, a net excess of 14,000. The whole undertaking cost $7000—contributed from all over the world.
Big Fight Is On
And now the great fight is on to carry this amendment to the constitution—to put forward the "Great Adventure"—"to secure to every adult, power to own his home and direct his life and work; to abolish landlordism, pauperism and disemployment" from the state of California.
The call is now out for funds to carry the election in November.
Issues Last Call
In the appeal of the "Great Adventure" I am indicating to every man who reads it an opportunity to lay up for himself an unctious which may hug to his soul forever to its great comfort. To the years, that opportunity will come again and again until

AFTER ALL, U. OF W. IS JUST ABOUT SAME OLD PLACE

By D'Loss Sutherland
The great battle of warping a bonehead into a polished and educated citizen is nearly two weeks old at the state university, and the view of the disinterested bystander is the same as it was in the good old days when the university consisted of an old white building.
Of course, there are a few more students gambling over the green, and a new building or two, but the general idea is the same. It's easy to get into college, for the innocent bystander sneaked into the middle of "them dear old college days" without a single coed suspecting or a long-haired prof scowling.
Percy Dearle, who has flattened more purses of promising mental ventures than the College Inn did in its palmy days, still holds sway in the Co'od book store.
"A book is a handy thing, at that," Joe Blunt explained, "around examination day, but, of course, that is a long time off."
Wending one's way through the crowds of young fellows wearing white stars, the old front stoop of Denny hall offered a treat from the feminine-strewn hall of Denny.
Red Graham's dog, Mickie Milwaukee, the college tramp, and several other tramps were there smoking. Glenn Hoover, who argued considerable when he attended the university several years ago, and still more considerable after he left, sauntered by. He is back for more education.
"String Bean," champion tall man of the Sigma Chi house, stood idly by a newly-cut trench streaking across the campus, pensively pondering just why it was.
"Doc" Byers, loved by all chemistry students, and fresh from Plattsburg with a fine crop on his chin, explained that he did not bring his horse with him, but that he did bring his tail, whereupon he tittered and wiggled the half-matured Van Dyke, and all the campus marveled at his humor.
Lee White, who heads the journalism department since Frank Kane left, looked worried when he started a youth towards stravention by signing his card admitting him in journalism classes.
Phil Weiss, a member of the ill-fated Lane-Borden Arctic expedition, was another co-ed dodger, who opined that it was pretty good to get back to school.
Prof. J. Allen Smith still looks at the pavement when he walks, while Rusty Kumm, college politician, wears a pair of tortoise shell glasses.
Barrett Herrick says the army of the Grey will be led by Carl Draves as colonel this year, and that none other than himself will be the lieutenant-colonel.
Everett McRae, pen, paper and ink specialist, has taken unto himself a wife since last semester.
The fraternities are rushing oggle-eyed boys from up-state, and the sorority women are looking wild-eyed at their Pan-Hellenic sisters.
Registrar Stone's "zit" is still on his chin and he is as communicative as ever.
The law school gang still think they are a "cocky lot," and the fusers still mess around the girls at the library.
In fact the University of Washington is no different than it was when Prof. Meany was "boning" for his credits instead of "sapping" some poor senior with a bunch of outside reading.
There are more students than ever before, and the life on the 355 acres means a lot to the lives of those who pass to their "eight o'clocks," but after all, they still do the same old things as they did long ago.
Another college year has started, that is all.
