He Disagrees

EDITOR THE TIMES: As a simple code of ethics for the new year, Professor Frank Geddings of Columbia offers this: "Honest living means putting back into life as much as you take out of it."

A mighty poor way to look at 1917! Sir, permit me to explain why I do not like Professor Geddings' code.

A child is born and raised in a city slum. Society gives that child to do—what? To promote disease, vice and crime. If that child, growing to manhood, living according to the Geddings code, honestly puts back into the world what he takes out, he puts back into it disease, crime and degeneracy.

I know a bachelor of middle age. He goes through life comfortably, having neither wife nor child to care for. When he passes away, he will put back as much as he has taken—nothing more.

Perhaps I don't know much about this thing called the scheme of life, but I am pretty certain that all animate things are put into this world to propagate and to die, after having done things that will live after them.

The man who, acquiring a desert, leaves a desert, is not doing his duty by society.

Jesus Christ received from the world cold, hunger, homelessness and persecution, and all the great men after Him have been great by reason of having put back into the world, not just what it gave, but more!

The world owes no man anything—save opportunity.

Buying Meat

EDITOR THE TIMES: As a wife who is trying to make dollar meet dollar, I wish to call attention to things which most men fail to notice and why it is so hard for the average wife to make the grocery money hold out.

First notice how the butchers cut and sell the different roasts, steaks and chops. One of the ordinary roasts of beef, which poor people can afford to buy, has at least one-third the weight in bones and leaders, which are of no use.

I bought a three-pound roast. I weighed it and found it had over a pound of bones. I had paid 18 cents per pound for the roast. As there were hardly two pounds of real meat in it, I had paid at the rate of 27 cents per pound for an ordinary roast.

In other words, the butcher had sold the bones at 18 cents per pound, an extra profit of 13 cents, for the average price of bones is 5 cents.

When you want a real bone for stock or soup it is very hard to find one that is fit, because they have left them in the better roasts, where they can get more money for them.

Another thing, the meat is trimmed of nearly all the suet—with which a beef lard is made that is sold at 19 cents a pound—and it is necessary to use butter or lard to cook the meat.

A Bit of Advice

EDITOR THE TIMES: I think, perhaps, it may become a blessing to some one if I relate an experience I had about two weeks ago, coming home from a week-end trip.

On entering the train I sat down with a lady in the first empty seat I came to. She at once began to talk to me upon different subjects, and finally we agreed to exchange addresses, with a view of corresponding later. I found a card upon which I wrote her address and mine, and she handed me a slip, indicating where I should sign my name and address.

While I was writing something told me to look upon the other side. You may know my surprise when I discovered it was a blank check I had signed. I just tore it in two, handing her one part with my name and address and putting the other carefully away in my pocketbook.

When I reached home I took that slip, thinking with some other scraps, thinking to burn them all, when again that little voice whispered: "Do not burn that slip, keep it." I have already signed altogether too many papers for the good of myself and my beloved ones, while I did not realize what I was about. Beware, is my advice to my readers. One can't be too careful, nowadays.

My Job

EDITOR THE TIMES: My job, I sing of thee, Source of prosperity, You're all I see. There's where I toil and sweat; There's where my hope is yet; On thee my heart is set; I dote on thee.

Prices are soaring high; They're making for the sky, But I can't fly. Wages don't levitate; Their's is the same old rate. I can divine my fate, I'll surely die.

But to my job I'll cling, Ever its praises sing, Until I croak. Then I will upward fly; And I'll explore the sky; Then I'll be living high, Altho I'm broke.

FIELD GIVEN HIS DIVORCE

A decree of divorce was granted Wednesday by Judge Clifford to Magnus Field from Amalie Fiel. They were married in Tacoma in July, 1913, and have a two-year-old boy, who is given to the father.

Field charged his wife continually nagged and quarreled with him, that she told him she did not love him and was in love with another man, that she had a copious and ungenerous temper, and that on Jan. 8 she packed up and left him, saying she did not intend to return.

Ballet Is Coming Thursday

Sketch of the Diaghileff Ballet Russe, by Bakst. This famous ballet comes to the Tacoma theater Thursday night. Serge de Diaghileff's famous Ballet Russe, which is making a triumphant coast to coast tour, coming to the Tacoma theater Thursday night, created one of the greatest sensations of many seasons when it appeared last night at the Moore, in Seattle.

Critics declared that the great company of incomparable Russian artists actually lived up to every superlative adjective used in advance description of the performance. The dancing of Nijinsky and Lydia Lopokova particularly enthused the great Seattle audience.

The Ballet Russe travels in a special train. Few of the players speak English. A special Russian orchestra of 50 instruments accompanies the troupe.

LASSEN AGAIN IS CUTTING UP

(United Press Leased Wire.) REDDING, Cal., Jan. 17.—The most spectacular eruption of Mt. Lassen, California's active volcano, since the outbreak of May, 1915, began at 10:15 a. m. today. Observers who have been watching the activities of the mountain for two years declare the entire crater must have opened up.

Inky smoke in tremendous volume rolled out of the crater, taking a general conical shape. The apex of the cone was rapidly driven southwest by the wind and at 11 o'clock smoke clouds had been swept 20 miles away.

"Shed Light"

Rev. D. H. Trimble of the First Methodist church complained to the council today of insufficient street lights on the new church corner, South 5th and K streets.

"If the city will shed a little light on the situation, I believe it will help to drive out those persons who steal automobiles and accessories in the darkness," said the minister.

Vancouver Untroubled By Coal Famine Cloud

(United Press Leased Wire.) VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 17.—The burghers of this burg hear without alarm rumors of an impending fuel famine and cheerfully pile the coal into the furnace these cold days without the least apprehension that when the bottom of the bin is reached they may be unable to fill it up again.

This is because the city council late last fall when reports of trouble at several British Columbia collieries got into circulation decided to be prepared for emergencies and instructed the city purchasing agent to gather in 1000 tons of the best lump, stow it away and forget about it. When the regular dealers get to the end of their reserves the city will go into the coal business and deliver at cost. The civic supply is held to be sufficient to see local consumers through the worst that can possibly happen here.
