Mother Keeps "Prettiest Little Girl" From Becoming Princess

Marie Frances Kiernan, "America's" prettiest little girl, and a modeled group by Prince Troubetzkoi showing her with the prince's favorite dog.

(Special to The Times.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12.—Mother love has prevented "America's" prettiest little girl" from becoming a princess.
The chance for 5-year-old Marie Frances Kiernan to step into royalty came when Prince Troubetzkoi, noted Russian sculptor, and his wife, who have been for some time in this city proposed to adopt her and rear her as their own daughter.
It was the prince who titled her "America's prettiest little girl" after he had seen her dancing in Los Angeles with the Ruth St. Denis troupe and he ought to know, for he has immortalized the grace and beauty of two continents in clay and stone.
When proffers of station failed, Troubetzkoi offered the girl's mother $30,000 as an added consideration. Both were refused with a smile.
"Mother wants me, and I'd rather stay with her than be a little princess and have to leave my very own home," said Marie Frances.
"She's the most beautiful and wonderful little lady I have ever seen," was the famous Troubetzkoi's compliment. "The princess and I were completely captivated by her graces, her good sense, her intelligence and exceptional talents. It was a great disappointment that we could not make her our little daughter."
Marie Frances is now playing juvenile roles in motion pictures.

Washerwoman Wins University of Washington Degree; After Second

From drudge to university graduate while she supported herself and educated her children is the remarkable conquest of adversity by Mrs. Anna Falkoff, whom fate whirled from a comfortable Russian home to the life of washerwoman in America.
But fate was no match for Mrs. Falkoff's ambition and fighting motherhood.
Three years ago she left Russia to escape the terrors of the old regime. Her father fell under the suspicions of the czar's agents because of his liberal thinking, and advised her to take her two children to America.
Graduate of U. of W.
When she landed at Home Colony, near Tacoma, she had her children and nothing else. She was alone in an alien land and practically an exile.
She determined to give her children and herself an American education. School days for the three of them began, and at the same time much heart-breaking, discouraging work for the heroic mother. Mrs. Falkoff washed clothes, worked in gardens, helped at farming and at other hard tasks for money to keep going.
This is her reward:
Last June she was graduated from the University of Washington, having completed the four-year course in three years, besides making up the four-year high school course necessary for university entrance. She did all this and supported herself and family.
Her two children, Emma, 11, and Ernest, 10, are in the eighth grade. In mental tests given out recently by the University of California in coast competitions, Ernest passed with the highest grade among 2,000 children examined.
Mrs. Falkoff is now working for her master's degree in sociology and psychology, which she expects to get next year from the state university. By that time her children will be thru the public school and she hopes to take them back to Russia.
"When I came to America," she said, "I had to find means of support for my children. I had never done anything in my life, but was able to do whatever became necessary. I never tried to push myself forward, and I often did very hard work for that reason, but it was better so.

"I was teaching my children all the time, so that when they entered school they were able to go thru the first and second readers in one year."
Besides working all summer in the university forestry nurseries, Mrs. Falkoff cultivated more than an acre of ground near her home. The university had the land plowed and the city furnished the seeds. Her garden was a big success, providing food for her children and a number of poor families in the district.
She is intensely interested in the education of her children and has evolved a system of her own for juvenile instruction, which she will introduce in New Russia when she returns to her home.

HOW GAS MASK IS TO WEAR

Dear reader, how would you like to walk a mile or two at a stiff gait with a clothes pin on your nose?
That's part of the training that Sammy is getting at Camp Lewis. He is learning the use of the gas mask and the gas mask is a contrivance that suffocates and blinds and deafens until one is used to it.
Just what a gas mask looks like and how it is built are things that the censor won't tell but suffice to say it makes a man look like a monkey and feel according to its victims, like a mummy.
The mask fits tightly over the face and a clip passes over the nose so that the wearer must breathe thru his mouth and draw air thru the chemicals which will neutralize the effect of the deadly gases that Fritz is fond of blowing into the trenches of his enemies.
The French officers who are helping the men here become familiar with the mysteries of trench fighting declare that after a few days at the front the soldier becomes accustomed to the masks and is able to work and walk in them without discomfort.

TROTSKY WAS FROM CANADA

(United Press Leased Wire.)
SASKATOON, Sask., Nov. 12.—Leon Trotsky, one of the leaders of the bolshevik revolt in Russia, lived here two years, spreading propaganda for the social democrats among Russians in western Canada. He caused much worry to government officials, it is stated.
Trotsky was later arrested by immigration authorities at Montreal, but was released at the intercession of Kerensky.

THREE DIE IN TRAIN WRECK

(United Press Leased Wire.)
SALIDA, Col., Nov. 12.—Three members of the 42nd U. S. infantry were killed, two are missing and probably 16 others were injured when a second division of a Denver & Rio Grande troop train crashed into the first division near here today.
Officials of the road declared the wreck was probably due to a mixup of signals, and that there was no indication of a plot.

PERSHING PRAISES NAVIES' GOOD WORK

(United Press Leased Wire.)
AMERICAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS, France, Nov. 12.—America's industrial generals and captains now aiding the army in France were today molded into a separate and distinct force in a new transportation department by order of Gen. Pershing.
Maj. Gen. W. W. Atterbury, who was formerly operating head of the Pennsylvania railway lines, was named as commander-in-chief of the new suit.
"The new organization is already achieving excellent results," Gen. Pershing declared. "Thus, thru the industrial generals and captains, American organizing ability is supporting the generals and captains of fighting forces."
The transportation department will handle all transportation of troops and material from vessels to rail heads.
It will likewise have charge of construction work for transportation, thus relieving American army engineers of a big portion of their present task.
"Thanks to the efficiency of the British, French and American naval protection," said Gen. Pershing, "German submarines have not claimed a single life of an American soldier on a troop ship bound for France. Troops and supplies are arriving in increasing numbers."
Gen. Pershing was also enthusiastic over the types of officers now arriving after graduation from American training camps.
"We have every reason to be proud of them," he said. "Their character, intelligence and eagerness prove the thoroughness of the training camp methods."

Woman House Expert Raises Kitchen Sink!

(Special to The Times.)
NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—For the first time in history woman, whose place is said to be in the home, is to have a full and free opportunity to say how the home shall be built.
A woman architect, Miss Marcia Mead, first woman architect to graduate from Columbia university, and whose firm has already achieved fame in designing model homes, is in consultation with government committees studying the big problems of how to house the workers crowding the industrial centers where Uncle Sam's munitions and supplies must be made.
Miss Mead believes women will have to take hold of the housing question if houses are ever to be made into "homes."
"If woman's place is in the home, then a house has to be made a home and not a place," she told me.
Proves Ability.
Miss Mead has already proved she can design houses housewives will bless. She designed the model homes the Bridgeport Housing company is erecting now.
"I went into architecture because I was interested in city planning and community housing. I believe it is the principal business of the world's governments to see that people have comfortable and BEAUTIFUL places to live—even if they are cheap. I have never found a house without something the matter with it from the woman's point of view. So I decided women ought to take a hand in house planning."
Miss Mead has uprooted the most sacred ideas of men architects and builders in her plans for Bridgeport's new houses. THE SINKS IN THE KITCHENS ARE ACTUALLY 36 INCHES FROM THE FLOOR, instead of the usual back-breaking 34 inches. There are two washtubs in all these houses, instead of one that the mere man builders insisted was enough.
No Inner Court.
"From time immemorial men have built kitchen sinks and wash trays too low. In consequence hundreds of thousands of women have bent their backs and shortened their lives needlessly," declared Miss Mead.
"I had a terrible time inducing the Bridgeport Housing Co. to put in high sinks. And imagine a woman trying to do the washing in one tub!"
"The men working with me would not hear of raising the washtubs to the proper height," she said. "I had to take a piece of board to represent a washboard and show how I would have to bend over to do the washing to make my point."

Miss Mead shattered other time-worn man-made institutions. The houses she designed have no inner courts. Every room—even the bathroom must have an outside window.
Higher Sills.
Window sills of the second-story windows are much higher than ordinary.
"So many children fall out of second-story windows," said Miss Mead.
"Women, too, fall out and are accused of suicide, when the builder really ought to be indicted for manslaughter. All our apartment house sills are too low. A child will climb a low window sill.
"There is another thing every house, even the smallest, should have—a backyard marked off from all the other backyards."
Consult Women.
"Every family should have a piece of ground that is its own. Low fences or hedge will do. I never have known a family which did not want its own front door and its own backyard."
"The federal government will undoubtedly have to go into the business of housing the hundreds of thousands of workers and their families crowding our industrial cities to produce the things the government must have to win the war. But this housing effort—a billion dollars is little enough to start it—shall be carefully carried out. The house that will do for New England is not the kind for the Middle West. People, city, climate, everything must be studied."
"And WOMEN, who have to live in houses more than men—ought to be consulted."

When Dreams Come True' at the Tacoma Wednesday

"When Dreams Come True," the fascinating musical comedy of romance and youth, which will be the attraction at the Tacoma theater Wednesday night, is from the pen of Philip Bartholomae, the composer of "Little Miss Brown," "Over Night," "Very Good, Eddie," and many notable successes; the music is by Silvio Hein, who is too well known to need any introduction.
This is the fourth season of success for this musical comedy. It seems to improve with age. "When Dreams Come True" is in three acts, the first showing the deck of an ocean liner at sea, the second the living room in the home of an American millionaire, and the third the ballroom in the same home.
The company is a large one of exceptionally clever singers and dancers.
Klaw and Erlanger will present their musical comedy success, "Miss Springtime," which was the reigning favorite of Boston and New York last season at the Tacoma theater Friday and Saturday and Saturday matinee.
The musical comedy is on tour with the notable cast, chorus and production which characterized its presentation in Boston and New York last season.
