METEMPSYCHOSIS.

If I were a poor little tippet mink,
I think
That of all kind fates it would seem the best
To rest
Round the slender white throat of sweet Marie,
Ah, me!
I would bend caressingly to her will Until
She'd lean her cheek tenderly on me.
You'd waste such joy on a poor little mink,
I think.
—M. D. Hatch in New York Sun.

WE WERE DECEIVED.

A wild Juanita, black and tan,
Rode into Wingo on a mule;
Met a Chicago traveling man,
Who told her, as a drummer can,
That she was wildly beautiful.
She smiled, she hoped, she lived. Alas!
She looked into a looking glass.
"You are a poet," my friend said;
"Your fame has reached from coast to coast."
You will be read when Riley's dead,
And Field has faded. "Yes," he said,
"If not before. You're Shakespeare's ghost."
But now I sympathize with her,
The maid. —C. V. Warner in New York Sun.

As From His Cyclone Pit.

It was a tempestuous night on the Atlantic, and the great steamer with its precious freight of human lives was tossed about like a cockleshell. The tremendous waves hurled themselves against the walls of steel, and dashing in impotent fury over the decks shook the leviathan from bowsprit to rudder post. No one was visible about the ship, except such of the crew as necessity compelled to face the storm, and they were in imminent danger every moment. The passengers, in mortal terror, were huddled together in the cabin below. Just as a frightful blast had almost thrown the ship on her beam ends, the officer of the deck saw a passenger stick his forehead up through a hatchway.

"Get back there!" yelled the officer.
"Say, say," came an answering yell.
"Is the roof gone yet?"
"No. Get back there!"
"Have any of the walls give in yet?"
"No. Get back, I tell you!"
"Has the old woman or the children been blown out of the second story window yet?"
"Get back, I tell you. No."
"None of the neighbors been blown in through the shed roof yet?"
"No, no. I tell you get back down that hatchway, you blamed fool!" and the officer started for the passenger.
"Tain't so bad as I thought it was!" came a final yell as the passenger dodged into the depths below and disappeared.
"Well, who in thunder was that?" asked the officer of the purser, who stood by.
"He's all right!" howled the purser.
"He comes from the cyclone belt in Kansas." —Detroit Free Press.

Had to Do It.

She—Why, there's Charley Van Beet. Don't you remember his going to California some time ago with his fiancée?
He—I should say I did. He wrote me he didn't have money enough to get back. How do you suppose he managed it?
She—Why, he married her out there.—Life.

A Sure Thing.

Blinkers—This life insurance idea is good enough if a man dies young, but suppose I should live 30 or 40 years longer—I'd be terribly out of pocket.
Agent—No danger of that, sir. You'll soon kill yourself working to pay the premiums.—New York Weekly.

The Height of Neighborly Consideration.

"Of course you believe in the millennium," said the irritable man's friend.
"To be sure."
"What is your idea of it?"
"It'll be a time when every lawn mower will have a music box attachment." —Washington Star.

Appropriate.

Sculptor—I'm getting up a new statue of Franklin, and I want to indicate his discovery of electricity.
Friend—Why not represent him with one leg the other having been taken off by a trolley car? —New York World.

Knew Him Too Well.

The Suitor (bitterly)—You reject me? Why, some months ago I consented to wait until you could learn to know me better!
The Girl—Yes. That's where you made your mistake.—Chicago Record.

Thoughtful For Each Other.

Ada—I've been wondering all day why you weren't invited to the Bigdows.
Kitty (sweetly)—And I've been wondering why you were.—Life.

The Need of Caution.

The need of caution in the use of certain remedies is underestimated. Indeed, they who warn are often ridiculed. Yet no less a man than the eminent scientist Tyndall died from an overdose of chloral.—Huntsheimer.

THE DEHORNING OF CATTLE.

If the Horns on Our Cattle Were Not Frequently Used for Doing Injury to Both Man and Beast, Very Few Would Advocate Their Removal.

This is the way F. L. Gaston, Normal, Ill., dishes up "horns" in a recent Jersey Bulletin:
"In regard to the discussions about dehorning, there seems to be no more chance for all to agree than in the matter of prohibiting the sale of 'horns' that make brutes of men. The greater the nuisance the more so will argue that we have no right to deprive the others of their natural privileges. Were it not that even lower than brutes, there would be no occasion for us to try to prohibit their exercising their natural privileges. And if the horns on our cattle were not frequently used for doing injury to both man and beast, very few would advocate their removal."

For several years past our State and nation have been licensing the sale of "horns" that make brutes of men; now why not allow owners of bulls, by paying a license fee, to retain their horns, so if the bull feels like killing his master or his master's horse, or his master's neighbor, he shall have the blessed privilege if his owner is only willing to pay the license fee, no matter whether it is high or low. For myself, I am satisfied men should be prohibited from buying or taking "horns" which make them go home and kill their wife, or child, or neighbor, and so far as my cattle are concerned, I wish they had them both with and without horns and know they are much easier handled and do less harm to each other without horns. Have obtained the consent of my better-half to dehorn all the male calves dropped on our place by using caustic potash on the little horn when the calf is only eight or ten days old, and I find it gives excellent satisfaction to purchasers. I hope soon to obtain the consent of my better-half to also dehorn all the heifer calves dropped on our place; then we shall have Jerseys without horns.

If my neighbor prefers to have stock with horns on and is willing to pay an enormous license sufficient to cover all damage done by these same horns, perhaps he should have the privilege; and if human beings will see that which makes a man kill his family or his neighbor and our State and nation have a controlling interest in the cursed business, why not make the whole business responsible for the damage caused thereby? Let us dehorn our cattle and let us feed the young America on pure, unadulterated Jersey milk instead of soaking them in beer and see how much better they behave.

Soil for Olives.
As to the kind of soil in which the olive succeeds, Ellwood Cooper of Santa Barbara says that he has trees growing without irrigation in black adobe, on stony hillsides, on table land with clay subsoil, in shady lands made from the wash of the mountains, with no difference in the bearing of the trees or the oil made. They are known to succeed where peach, apricot and nectarine trees have been destroyed by the black alkali, and also in land so rocky and steep that it cannot be plowed. Our virgin soils of California are rich in lime and potash, two of the chief constituents required by the olive tree. Prof. Hilgard has stated that the substance of olive oil is taken entirely from the air, and that if the crop is made into oil, and pomice and all other oil returns to the land from the outset, it needs no other manure if the soil is a fairly good one; it does not wear out the soil, but if the fruit is pickled returns should be made to the soil, and then potash and nitrogen are especially called for. The olive tree flourishes under varied climatic conditions; it will withstand a temperature of 14 degrees above zero; it succeeds in the dry, interior valleys of the State, where the mercury during the summer often ranges from 100 to 120 degrees in the shade along our coast and on the high foothills of our mountain ranges. In Algeria, latitude 35, it thrives at an elevation of 4,800 feet above the level of the sea; in Italy at a height of 3,200 feet and there is a bearing orchard in about 3,000 feet of elevation situated at an elevation of 3,000 feet above the sea.—California Cultivator.

New Way of Curing Lemons.

Theodore Pickens of La Cuyada suggests a plan for curing lemons which he calls "the poor man's method." He cuts his lemons from the trees, using all the ordinary precautions in handling, puts them in regular fruit boxes, having openings at each end for the purpose of circulating air, and places the boxes on the north side of the house or in some shady place where the sun will not reach them, and packs five or six boxes high, putting a sack over the top of each and letting the ends come down over the openings at the end, so as to exclude the air and light. About once a week he gives the lemons a shower bath of cold water by inserting the end of a hose in the openings at the end of boxes. He repeats this operation about once a week, or if the weather is cloudy, not so often. He produced some really fine specimens cured in this way, and he says he has kept them six or eight months. His Pearmain apples are kept by this method until the first of May. This is, to say the least, a new and unique plan, and it might not be amiss for others to try it in a small way. We would advise, however, not using this method extensively until better acquainted with the results.—Los Angeles Journal.

POULTRY NOTES.

It requires twenty-three to twenty-six days to hatch pheasant eggs.
A hen in her prime, when properly fed and cared for, should yearly furnish three times her weight in eggs.

A chick of one the larger breeds hatched in the incubator until the twenty-second day indicates that the temperature of the egg drawer was a trifle too low.

Eggs from hens not in company with cocks have been found to keep very much longer than those from hens mated with cocks. In summer, after hatching is over, remove the males, as the hens will lay as well without them.

A MILD FISH STORY TELLER.

And the Alderman Was So Startled That He Had Nothing to Say.

"Let's see," mused the drummer at a Detroit hotel the other evening, "but isn't there a place around here somewhere called Lake St. Clair flats?"
"Yes, sir," replied the alderman in the group.

"Great place for fishing!"
"The best in the world."
"Always sure of getting fish at the flats?"
"Always, if in season."
"I've read and heard a great deal of the place, and I know several Cincinnati people who have been up there. One of 'em told me he caught four perch up there between sunrise and sunset."
"Only four?" gasped the alderman.

"Why, my dear sir, what could your friend be fishing for perch?"
"Fishing for perch. He didn't even stop for dinner. Another one told me that he caught three black bass during the week he made a business of fishing, but of course—"

"Only three black bass in a week! I'd like to know what sort of a fisherman your friend calls himself?"
"He is rated an Al man, but I am sorry to say I noticed any confidence in his word. His story wasn't quite as bad as that of his brother, though. Say! There was a man who stood right up at the bar of the Lake House and gave us his solemn word that he caught a pike up there which weighed two full pounds. He wouldn't take off a fraction of an ounce. They expelled him from a club for lying, but I have often wondered if he didn't really believe what he was telling."

"He didn't claim but two pounds for his pike?" demanded the alderman as he turned pale.
"Only two pounds. There was a Covington man in the party, and when he got back home he went around telling every body that he hooked a fish so large that it broke his line. They were going to run him for mayor of the town, but that killed him dead. People argued that if he would lie about one thing he would about another, and that it wasn't a safe thing to put a lie in the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to care. There is more asthma in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure the local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven asthma to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. CHEENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure known to medicine. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J.
