If the old saying regarding the dean of weather prophets, the groundhog, holds good in this neck of the woods we can look for an early spring. Last Tuesday was groundhog day and if the little porker stuck his nose above the surface of the earth in anticipation of seeing his shadow in order that he might sneak back and take another snooze of six weeks he certainly must have been disappointed. According to the old superstition, although there are many people who believe it cannot be classed as such, and there are thousands who still have faith in the little animal, six more weeks of cold and blustery weather will invariably follow the groundhog's appearance if he sees his shadow.

Mrs. Sargent's representation of a porker received "honorable mention" from the judges, who were Mrs. O. H. Culver, Mrs. Newhall and Mrs. Jones. Those present were: Mrs. J. L. Blair, Mrs. R. V.
