James E. Nessly, manager of the local correspondence of the Spokesman-Review, was in Colville on Wednesday looking after the interests of the paper. In conversation with local correspondents here, Mr. Nessly admitted that Colville was one of the very best out-of-town points for the Spokesman-Review in the state. But notwithstanding this fact, Colville is not fairly represented in the columns of the big daily. Mr. Nessly further admitted that this was to some degree the fault of the management of the paper and would use his best efforts to see that Colville would get more space.

A sleighing party of seven couples went to Addy Christmas night to attend the Christmas ball given by the Modern Woodmen of that place. The party reported a good time and an elegant supper served by the Royal Neighbors. Although the thermometer was below zero no one suffered from the cold, and all agreed that Nick Carter, the driver, knew just how to handle four big horses going at a nine-mile pace.

N. Jeanneret has purchased 40 acres adjoining his ranch near Addy, from Mrs. Elberts of Spokane, for $1700.

D. L. Crowder, special U. S. officer for the Indian service, left for his work Wednesday after a short vacation here. For some months he worked on liquor cases on different reservations, and cleaned up the law-breakers on the Cheyenne reservation in such shape as to bring him high compliments for his work. He secured seven indictments there, and then went to the Standing Rock agency, where he took up matters that had bothered the government for four years. In 30 days he had the band of cattle thieves rounded up, and secured a confession.

County Clerk W. Lon Johnson, with his family, went to Chewelah last week Friday where he spent a most enjoyable Christmas season, ragaling himself on the many good things disclosed to his pleasing fancy by the "old folks." The zero weather disporting outside had no terrors for Lon while he centered his thoughts on the feast, and swept from his memories all thoughts of his home in Colville, his native land of Missouri, and all the cares that filter through his experiences from year to year. But the happy Christmas day fitted into history, and Lon returned to his domicile to find that while the saints of the day had been crowning his benign countenance with a wreath of smiles, the imp of the aforesaid season had been busy freezing the very marrow out of the water pipes in his residence, flooding the floors of his otherwise pleasant home until it looked like a skating rink, rather than the abode of a happy family. "Yea verily," quoth the county clerk, "It was the coldest reception on the map for me."

J. H. M., the well known baudry horse, died in his stall Wednesday night. This venerable animal was brought to Colville from Bellingham about 12 years ago, and when a four-year-old was tracked and developed great speed as a trotter. For the next six years J. H. M. became well known among racing men, winning in many free-for-all races in Colville, Davenport, Wilbur and Spokane. He was then purchased by Hugh Waddell and for two years was used as a family carriage horse. For the past two years old J. H. M. has been on the delivery wagon for the Colville steam laundry. At the Stevens County Fair last fall he was entered in a colt race to set the pace. And when the old-timer found himself hooked to a bike he stepped the mile in 2:40, leading the colts by several lengths.

The following letters remain in the Colville postoffice uncalled for: Mr. Frank DeHaven, Mr. Eldridge Hitchcock, Mr. B. K. Owen, Mr. Gordon R. Seaver.

The Northport F. & A. M. have elected the following officers: W. F. Case, W. M.; G. V. Scully, S. W.; L. P. Mills, J. W.; T. T. Richardson, Treas.; H. W. Sterrett, Sec.

The five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Boring living one mile east of town was lost in the woods for several hours last Sunday. It appears that the child went to the spring for water several hundred yards from the house and on returning lost her way. When it was found that the child was missing a party of a dozen was organized and for four hours searched the woods, fields and hills in a radius of five miles. About eight o'clock Tom Graham overtook the baby in the road in the vicinity of White lake. The child had walked at least seven miles on a snow road without overshoes or coat, bare headed, with the thermometer nearly at zero, and when picked up by Mr. Graham was nearly exhausted.

NOW, that the baby carriage is laid up, would be a good time to have that new set of tires put on, or get new wheels, at Willett Bros.

The father could not find his umbrella, so he asked the small boy if he knew where it was. "I'm not sure, but I think sis's beau took it." "Why son, what makes you think so?" "I heard him say in the hall, 'I'll just steal one.'"

A young man about to be married very nervously asked: "Is it kiss-tomary to cuss the bride?"
Judge—"What is your name?"
Swede—"Yon Yonson."
Judge—"Married?"
Swede—"Ya."
Judge—"Whom did you marry?"
Swede—"I married a woman."
Judge—"Well, you fool, did you ever know anyone that didn't marry a woman?"
Swede—"Ya, ma sister, she married a man."
