In Everybody's magazine under the caption, "Putting a New Movie in the Movies," this is a part of what James Shelley Hamilton has to say:

"One can get some idea of the work from the fact that Mr. Griffith, the producer, used 200,000 feet of film in taking the pictures, which, for an evening's entertainment of respectable length, had to be cut down to less than 12,000. The performance lasts three hours."

During the last fourteen weeks of its showing in New York, 300,000 people saw it at $2 a seat.

Chauncey St. Clair has a novel attraction in his show window. A man has a mule hitched to a cart and is urging him to move by twisting his tail, but every time the driver makes a turn with the tail, all the stubborn brute will do is to shake his head and make considerable noise with a cowbell fastened around his neck. The man is sweating in his efforts to make the mule move, but the noble animal won't budge an inch. The driver represents Poindexter endeavoring to drive the democratic mule out of the country, and is making a lot of noise and fuss about it, without chance of success.

Judge and Mrs. Jesse Arthur were in Colville Thursday, after an absence of many years, and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Slater. Judge Arthur was the second judge in this county, serving 1893-96, following Judge Blake and being succeeded by Judge Richardson. After search for health in several places he went to Battle Creek, Mich., where he now lives, and where he has for years been counsel for the Battle Creek Sanitarium. He was one of the incorporators of the Kellogg Corn Flakes Company, wrote the charter, and for years was its general counsel. The Stannus-Keller hardware store has an attractive mill scene in their north window. The mill is the work of Jim Hendricks. The mill and yards are lighted with electricity, and the yards are full of the mill's product. In front of the mill is a large pond. The Great Northern's crooked track passes around the mill, and close by are two corrals, one with thoroughbred horses and one with deer, with Farmer John looking after the stock. A modern house belonging to the mill's proprietor is a handy distance from the mill, and two Indians are passing by, having purchased some lumber for a new kind of a wigwam. On a mountain to the north lies all kinds of samples of Stevens county ore. A large 5x8 painting by Mrs. M. B. Fisk offers a background, and a faithful farm dog on guard completes the scene.

Newton of the Bear Mountain mine, in which he is interested, walked to town Thursday, a distance of 16 miles, making it in 3 1/2 hours, and thus lowered the record of any hardened pioneer miner in the last 12 years. Mr. Birely received his training in walking while in the U. S. army, where he served 5 years, and made the fastest record in his regiment.

Joe Reynolds of near Meyers Falls has enjoyed a visit the last week with two brothers from New York. His brother John Reynolds lived at Kettle Falls for two years about 23 years ago.

The south show window at Leo Gordon's harness store is graced with samples of all kinds of mineral mined in Stevens county, including marble. There are also piles of ties and cedar poles, and some splendid exhibits of wheat, oats, corn, clover and alfalfa. In the background is hung a large painting of a farm scene by Mrs. M. B. Fisk. Dozens of photographs of Stevens county farms also form a part of the decoration. The photos were furnished by Treadwell, the Face Man. ARTIFICIAL LIMBS.

Perfection to Which the Mechanical Arm Has Been Brought. They are making artificial limbs with such perfection today that a technical observer who is also an enthusiastic baseball "fan" declares that he would not be surprised to see in the not far distant future some wooden armed pitcher making a good record. What is known as "glass arm" would be effectively superseded by "wooden arm."

Though this is a daring leap of the imagination, which, however, need not worry the perfectly good armed pitchers of the big leagues, still some of the things that can be done with artificial arms are simply amazing. Here you see a man lighting a cigar and with a naturalness of action and pose which would deceive the casual observer.

The mechanism is controlled by certain motions of the stump of the flesh and blood arm, and no little knack is necessary to the successful working of the artificial member, and yet withal it is not very difficult to acquire.

It is said that the man who is lighting his big cigar can pick a pin from the floor without difficulty, but it is not on record that he can give the "pep" to a ball so that it will speed by the batter like a projectile from a high powered gun. As a matter of fact, he is thoroughly satisfied with the many very necessary things that can be done with the mechanical arm without venturing afar into the luxuries and excitement of outdoor sport.—Buffalo News.

WOMEN OF EUROPE.

An Italian Critic Says Those of Spain Are the Most Beautiful.

A celebrated Italian writer of Florence has been favoring the world with his opinion of some of the women of Europe. He considers only four nations, and of these he selects Spain as most worthy of the crown for feminine beauty. He says:

"The Spanish woman is bewitchingly beautiful. She has small hands and feet and large eyes like the open windows of a sunburnt marble palace, a figure full of grace and life and long, dark, wavy hair. She is very religious, very ignorant, very jealous, very sensitive and very proud."

Of the British woman he says: "Her hair is like gold. She has heavenly eyes, a peachlike complexion, a delicately formed nose and good teeth. She is reserved, very active and generally a slave to etiquette."

As to the Frenchwoman he is less complimentary. It is thus that he describes her: "She is a cat and a serpent, a palm and a violet, and when she is not pretty she is charming. She is amiable, a dreadful coquette and generally false."

His summary of the Russian woman is that she is "of an oriental type which had been prematurely transported into Europe." In her are combined the extraordinary charms of a savage and the civilized woman.—Pearson's.

Vicissitudes of Warsaw.

No city in Europe has known so many changes of masters as Warsaw. Founded about the year 850, it was capital of the independent dukedom of Mazovia until the fifteenth century, when it was annexed by Poland. In the seventeenth century by its possession was contended for by Sweden, Russia, Austria and Brandenburg, until, in 1794 Russia practically annexed it. In 1705 the city was handed over to Prussia, but Napoleon occupied it in 1806, and at the peace of Tilsit Warsaw was proclaimed an independent duchy. In 1809 the Austrians seized the city, but lost it again, and after another brief spell of independence the city passed finally to Russia in 1813.—London Chronicle.

Some Valuable Pearls.

Of all the articles of luxury known to the Romans pearls were most valued. They were worn by all classes. The famous pearl earrings which belonged to Cleopatra are said to have been worth $800,000, and Julius Caesar presented the mother of Brutus with a pearl for which he paid $240,000. It has been said that one of the reasons why Julius Caesar invaded Britain was the wish to become master of the pearls which were supposed to abound there, a surmise incorrect, for few pearls of value have been found in Great Britain.

Why They Settle.

Wife—Who can doubt the power of woman's love! Think of the thousands of wild youths who have settled down into staid and respectable citizens as soon as they married.

Husband—They couldn't afford to be anything else after they got married.—New York Weekly.

Turned Down.

"Miss Dulcie," a young doctor whispered, "will you take me for better or worse?"

"If I were ill, doctor, I might take you for better," answered she. "But, being quite well, I'll let well alone!"—London Telegraph.

The Colville ball team will go to Rossland today to play a twilight game this evening. Tomorrow morning they will auto to Trail to play the smelter town aggregation, returning to Rossland in the afternoon to finish their Sunday's engagement. Rogers, DeGrief and Battiste will pitch for the Colville tribe.

POLITICAL DOPE

By The Interested Observer

Former acting governor Hay has set the wagging tongues of the republican politicians of the state at rest for a day by declaring that he will not be a candidate for gubernatorial honors next year. The former governor's wisdom is more apparent by the fact that the litter of prospective governors born to the knowledge of the public was the product of the near-do-well, rather than the well cooked variety. The big fellows do not care to carry the load of the last legislature as a handicap in the contest with Governor Lister who will doubtless be candidate to succeed himself.

And the wise ones are just as chary about bumping into and running against congressman C. C. Dill, who is said to have done more for his district in the six months of his membership in Congress than has been done by the generation of has-beens furnished by parties opposed to him.

Some effort has been made by desirous office holders to get Judge J. Stanley Webster to run for congress, in the hope that his popularity would land him in congress, and indirectly land some of his supporters in offices which are now being filled by an admirable array of democrats. But the judge some time ago stated that if his aspiration should ever lead him to seek a higher office than the one he is now filling, it would probably be in the line with his life work, and that the supreme court was the highest honor the voters of this state could give a lawyer.

I have it from a socialist local that there is going to be a shakeup at the poorfarm. It is said that indigent sick are being turned away from the county farm and boarded and lodged and treated at hospitals, instead. Why the socialists should intrude themselves upon such arrangements is not clear because they never elect anybody to office, and should have no say about where the poor go for their medicine and shelter! Let the good work go on, and on and on.

I walked out to the water works this week and found that they are really doing some business out there. Pumping water out of an artesian well is a process not usually adopted by municipal water works, and I never before fully gathered the analogy of the process as compared with pumping the long green out of the public till at the rate of $6000 per annum; but I guess, now that I have witnessed the effect of the manner of the thing, it is all right. I was told that a concrete tank is now being figured upon by the city engineer, and that as soon as it could be finished the city council would have it sent out in an automobile to replace the lilypads.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Waller returned Thursday to their home at Opportunity, having visited the last two weeks with Mrs. Waller's parents Mr. and Mrs. H. Y. Dorman.

C. W. Miller, living southeast of town, has one of the best fields of corn ever grown in Stevens county. He has seven acres in Yellow Dent that averages over eight feet high. Some samples of this corn are exhibited in the south window at the R. E. Lee store. Among the vegetables on display at this store are some Early Rose potatoes about half grown that weigh a pound apiece. They were grown by J. C. Noctor near Meyers Falls.

The Stenger-Graham drug store has made some noticeable improvements in the show window. Posts painted white have been placed and dark blue curtains drawn to form a background. The floor of the window is covered with light blue crepe paper which blends splendidly with the rest of the color scheme. The window is filled with beautiful bouquets of sweet peas.

Some samples of the fancy work done by Mrs. Thomas Kirk are displayed in the window at Hayward O. Bair's furniture store. The work shows the skillful ability of Mrs. Kirk in this line of work.
