LAW MAKING BY THE INITIATIVE DEMANDS SACRIFICE

Several years ago the people of Washington clamored for government direct from the people. In course of time they got it. Now, the question is, what is going to be done with it—will they play with it like a child does with a rag doll and then toss it aside?

Right now there are three petitions known as initiative measures numbers 31, 32 and 33 that by all means should be on the statutes of Washington. Each of them is of direct interest to the man who labors in any manner whatever for a living and simplifies our form of government.

These petitions must be circulated and forwarded to headquarters by June 1, 1918. Men and women in Stevens county are needed to circulate them. They will be sacrificed by those who circulate them, as the law allows no recompense except the knowledge that duty well done.

A weekly summary of events of interest to Kettle Falls and the Upper Columbia River Valley, the garden spot of the great Northwest

The annual published by the graduating class of the Kettle Falls high school is off the press and ready for sale today. It is said to be the best and most attractive annual published so far by a senior class.

The "Kettles" is dedicated to the senior class by these are pictures of P. F. Schroeder, superintendent, Mrs. J. A. Burke, principal, and Miss Hazel Heald, assistant principal.

The class prophecy is written by Miss Lucille Zirtzmann; the class history by Miss Margaret Llewellyn; the class poem by Miss Marjorie Smith; the class notes by Elmer Zapel.

The graduating class has had the assistance of the faculty, especially that of Mrs. Burke, in compiling the material for the annual and in getting it published. The book is well illustrated and a feature of interest is a page of pictures of the boys in khaki and navy blue who went from Kettle Falls to help in the war for democracy.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

The Kettle Falls patriotic league held a big rally at the Baptist church Monday night. Chairman E. A. Taylor presided and speeches were made by F. Leo Grinstead, H. Wade Bailey and Osee W. Noble of Colville.

"The Need for Service" was Mr. Bailey's subject and he showed how little America had really done in the war as compared with what she had promised to do to help her allies in supplying them with food, munitions, battleships and ships.

The entire program was one which meant a reawakening of spirit in the audience. The issues America is facing stood out clearly. When the chairman called for those who were going to do their part to rise and express themselves, the audience rose as one person and cheered.
