GOOD ROADS BOOSTERS LIVE ON AUTO TRUCKS

The "ship by truck" slogan took on added significance in the recent international good roads tour conducted by the Michigan Pikes Association through Ontario and Michigan. The 250 or more advocates of better highways who made the tour not only shipped their baggage by truck. They ate by truck, slept by truck, and one might almost say they lived by truck.

Preceding the tourist division of the expedition was a train of 17 trucks, piloted by Ray McNamara, well known road engineer and pace maker. These trucks made it possible for the tourists to live independently of hotels. They were equipped with everything necessary for the pitching of a camp.

Following directly behind McNamara's pilot car were three one-and-one-half ton Maxwell trucks outfitted as kitchens. Each carried a six-burner hard coal stove, table and sink. They furnished hot and cold running water, by means of pipe connections with a water supply truck. A chief of commissary, chef and 12 cooks were in charge of the kitchens, and during the 1,700 mile tour over all kinds of highways, this crew worked and served a total of 4,456 meals from the trucks.

Other trucks carried camp equipment and commissary supplies. There were service trucks, a fire truck, an office truck, and one which carried a self-generating electric lighting outfit for camp illumination. McNamara had to bring his kitchens to camp sites far in advance of the main body of the tour. Some days he had to jump them along at an average of 20 miles an hour, and he explains this by saying he didn't want to "spill the beans." Beans and soup were being cooked while the trucks were traveling over a stretch of rough Northern Ontario highway.

As pilot of the commercial car division, McNamara had to put in some strenuous hours at bridge building. Some of the heavier trucks went through three different bridges. Fourteen camps were pitched during the tour, 60 army tents being used. The tourists erected their own shelters each night, packing them up in the morning, and moved on to the next town.

G. R. Jessee of Marcus, Maxwell dealer, has received a report from McNamara, who is road engineer for the Maxwell-Chalmers organization, stating that the kitchen trucks went through the entire run without mechanical or tire trouble. They went through the greater part of the tour at passenger car clip, he reports, being constantly "on the tail" of the 1920 Maxwell touring car which served as pilot car.—adv.
