A SHOCKING TRAGEDY.

Two Young Women and a Man Are Drowned While Boating.

Everett.—Miss Edna I. Warner, Miss Nina Soloman and T. V. Foster were drowned in the bay here Monday afternoon by the capsizing of their sailboat. There was no witness to the accident. The capsized boat and three hats told the story of a probable tragedy and not until several hours after they were found was it discovered who had gone to a watery grave.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon Foster telephoned the residence of N. J. Lannon, uncle of Miss Soloman, where the young women were calling, inviting the two girls to go for a sail. Both seemed reluctant, but after some coaxing over the telephone accepted the invitation which led to such an untimely fate.

One hour later the capsized boat two girls' hats and the hat of a man were picked up on the Sound. At 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. George W. Soloman identified one of the girl's hats at police headquarters as that of their daughter. Mrs. Soloman became hysterical and is completely distracted with grief. An officer was dispatched to the home of Charles E. Warner, a contractor and builder, and the Warner home was then the scene of grief and sorrow.

Miss Soloman has been employed by the local telephone exchange about two years. She was an exceedingly bright young woman and was best known in Everett as "900," as she held that important position with the telephone company. She was twenty-one years of age and besides her parents leaves one brother. Miss Warner was also one brother. Miss Warner for some time she has been teaching school at Marysville. She recently finished her term and was spending the vacation with her parents.

Foster was an insurance agent. His identity in connection with the tragedy is circumstantial. He did not appear at his boarding place for supper and at midnight had not reached his lodgings at the California house. One of his friends rooming at the same place heard Foster telephone two young ladies, asking them to go sailing, and thinks the man's hat at police headquarters is that of Foster.

Foster, came here four months ago from Marinette, Wis., where he has a wife against whom he began divorce proceedings here last week.

He is also said to have a discovered wife in Green Bay, Wis.

He was 45 years old.

The girls were each 21 years of age.

LABOR EULOGIZED

Fine Meeting Held at Armory Hall Last Night

MINISTERS TALK ON ORGANIZATION

Rev. Austin Rice and Rev. M. H. Marvin Discuss Labor Problem.

The attendance at last night's meeting of union labor at Armory hall although lacking somewhat in numbers, made up for this deficiency by great bunches of enthusiasm distributed at intervals throughout the addresses.

The number of non-union men present was most gratifying to members of the Trades council and the masterly addresses of Rev. Austin Rice and Rev. M. H. Marvin met the approval and commendation of all.

Mr. Rice's subject was "Union Labor, Its Advantages and Objects to the Working Man." As a deep thinker, a logical and clear reasoner Mr. Rice was amply able to prove to his hearers where the capitalist, the public and labor itself were gainers by having the workers organized. In the short time he spoke Mr. Rice handled his topic well. He pictured the growth and spread of labor unions in the United States, and told of the advantages and objects of organized labor to the working man, embodying four things, child labor, minimum wage scale, shorter hours and protection against unfair and unhealthy labor conditions, as some of the advantages now accruing to the working man as the result of organization. In many different ways and trades, he said, labor unions were a guaranty of the good quality of the workmen and their work.

In reference to the locomotive engineers, the speaker paid high tribute to the efficiency of its members and declared that the traveling public feel more safe riding behind a "union" engineer than were the engine driver a "non union" product. Membership in an association which demands thorough technical skill and strict sobriety from its members could not but appeal to all thinking persons.

"What is true of this union," said he, "is true in the main of all national and international organizations."

Referring to the closing of stores at 6 and 7 o'clock Mr. Rice put forth convincing arguments in favor of early closing that went home to the hearts of his hearers. In closing the reverend gentleman paid high tribute to the organized labor forces which secured the closing of barber shops and stores on Sunday. He chided the labor unions for going it alone on this question and not allowing the church and its adherents to lend a helping hand. His closing remark awoke hearty applause.

Rev. Marvin's address was like that of the preceding speaker in logic and concise reasoning. His remarks were interspersed with many humorous illustrations that captured the audience who applauded mightily.

Rev. Marvin's address might have included any phase of union labor, it was so general. In the main, however, he spoke of what organized labor has accomplished and ventured a prediction of the future. He touched the character of the laboring man, saying there was a tendency among the fair sex to regard a man with toil-worn hands as one not fit to associate with. Because certain classes of women regard the laboring man in this light there is a tendency to ignore manual toil. The ennobling qualities of honest labor were touched upon with a master hand and the dignity of labor concisely shown.

Referring to the invitation extended Rev. Rice and himself he said it showed the labor unions believe in religion. Labor unions have contributed a great deal to education in the United States which has greatly increased since organized labor has become an active force. Organized labor is the strongest force educationally in the United States, he added.

Speaking of foreign labor and the effect organized labor had upon it Mr. Marvin said it was the most powerful factor in Americanizing the people of Southern Europe who every year flock to the United States in ever increasing numbers. It is, also, a great total abstinence society.

In closing his address Mr. Marvin spoke of the ethical side of the labor union and the reforms it has forced upon the country. He said the Franco-Prussian war and the Civil war would never have happened if the labor unions had been listened to and the time is coming when organized labor will become such a gigantic brotherhood that it will bring about universal peace. Mr. Marvin ended by paying glowing tributes to President John Mitchell and President Theodore Roosevelt.

POOR PREACHERS SHOULD QUIT

That is the Advice Given by a Noted Divine of Chicago in Address to Students.

Chicago.—"If you cannot make a good living in the ministry—quit!" This is the advice which the Rev. L. A. Crandall, pastor of the Memorial Baptist church, gave to divinity students at the University of Chicago last week in the course of a lecture on "The Minister's Personal Qualities."

Some of the young ministers who believe that they should "continue" to preach all their lives, even if they starved to death in doing so, were shocked at Dr. Crandall's practical way of looking at the matter.

Dr. Crandall also told the students that if they would be successful ministers they must be good mixers, dress well all the time, and have "gumption" enough not to turn their spiritual souls wrong side out for the inspection of the public.

Eight things were enumerated by Dr. Crandall as going to make up the personal characteristics of the successful minister, as follows:

1. The good minister is not a lazy man.
2. Avoidance of egotism.
3. Shunning of dictation and bossism.
4. Plenty of grit.
5. Good clothes.
6. A good "mixer."
7. Care in meeting financial obligations.
8. Possession of what is known as "gumption."

In explaining what he meant by these things, Dr. Crandall said, in part:

"The minister has a great temptation to shirk, because his time is practically his own. If we were compelled to fill out ministerial death certificates of many men who molder in the great ante-mortem graveyard, they would necessarily read: 'Died of that tired feeling.' The successful minister is not a lazy man."

"Many ministers fail to fill out the full measure of usefulness because of a tendency to lie down. I do not mean laziness, but a lack of grit."

"The matter of personal appearance is a delicate one, but it needs serious consideration. A certain neatness of apparel is absolutely essential to success in the ministry. A farmer has a right to look like a farmer; he would be a fool if he tried to look like a minister. But a minister has no right to look like a man who earns his living by day labor."

"When a man has 'gumption' it means that he has not been turned out half-baked, that he does not deal in slop and gush, that he does not turn his soul wrong side out for the inspection of the public while he is describing the spiritual experiences through which he has passed—or imagines he has."

Dr. Crandall said that the personal qualities of ministers could be improved by an increase of the number of men on the faculties of the theological seminaries, which would make it possible for each student to come in personal contact with men of strong character and wide experience in the ministry.

WILL NOT BE HELD.

Washington National Guard Will Not Unite With Regular Army This Year.

Olympia.—Adjutant General Drain has received advices from the war department conveying the information that the plan for a joint encampment could not be carried out this year. General Drain has accordingly set September 13 to 23 inclusive as the time for holding the state encampment. The state encampment will be held at Camp Weisenberger, near American lake the same place as last year. An officer of the army will be detailed as inspector at this camp. Some of the regular troops will possibly be encamped at or near Camp Weisenberger at this time.

Cooking in the camp will, as heretofore, be done only by enlisted men of the command. Each company commander must have present one enlisted cook and this cook will be allowed $3 a day.

STRIKES IN A FOG.

The North Pacific Goes On Craven Rock.

Port Townsend.—At 2 o'clock Sunday morning the steamer North Pacific, bound with passengers from Seattle for Vancouver, B. C., lost her bearings and brought up on Craven Rock, a small menace to navigation near Marrowstone Point.

At first it was thought the accident was of slight consequence, but investigation by Capt. Sederson and his crew developed the fact that the old side-wheeler was in imminent danger of going to the bottom with all on board, the contact with the rocks having made a bad hole in the forward part of the ship, into which the water rushed in torrents.

Distress signals were sounded and brought prompt response from the Everett tug C. B. Smith, Capt. Smith, which was at the time picking her way along in the fog. By the time the Smith swung alongside the North Pacific two of the boats of that craft had been launched.

The two ladies, the only ones of the gentler sex among the fourteen cabin passengers the vessel was carrying, were given first place in the boats. The passengers who remained on the North Pacific were, with the crew, transferred to the Smith, and the tug then bent a tow line, with which she started at once for the beach, in the hope of grounding the side-wheeler before she went down.

Effort Is Fruitless.

It was but a few moments, however, before the Smith herself grounded, and it became a case of self-preservation. Capt. Smith called to the North Pacific to cast off the hawser and anchor and had this instruction promptly carried out, it is probable that the North Pacific would have been beached in shallow water. Instead, however, before the anchor was finally put over, the vessel had drifted out again in the tide and was in deep water where her short chain availed but little. The last seen of the North Pacific by the Smith was when she disappeared in the fog, apparently settling by the head.
