ORGANIZED IN YEAR 1810

AMERICAN BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS OLDEST IN THE UNITED STATES.

Has Now 20 Missions Established in Different Parts of the World—Delegates Here Today.

The American board of commissioners for foreign missions of the Congregational church, 185 delegates of which will arrive in Walla Walla tonight en route to Seattle, is the oldest foreign missionary society in America. The society was organized in 1810 and now has 25 missions, three in Africa, four in Turkey, three in India and Ceylon, four in China and one each in Japan, Mexico, Spain, Austria, Micronesia and the Philippine Islands.

In these 20 missions there are 97 stations where missionaries reside, and 1281 out-stations, where work is maintained by native laborers, under the supervision of the missionaries.

Present Missionary Force.
The present missionary force of the board consists of 570 American missionaries. Of the total number 44 are physicians. The native force of workers numbers 4185.

The churches of the board in foreign lands number 557, with 63,178 communicants. Of these 5649 were added by confession last year.

Schools of all grades connected with the missions of the board number 1429, with 70,484 students. In the higher grade schools are more than 6500 pupils and from there will come hundreds of Christian laborers, clergymen, teachers and helpers.

The board has in its employ 44 medical missionaries, 42 dispensaries and 28 hospitals. Two hundred and fifty thousand patients are reached annually.

Industrial training is now being carried on in many of the schools, thus assisting the pupils to support themselves in connection with their manifold work, the missionaries of the board are engaged in giving to the people of different lands a pure Christian literature. Millions of copies are published each year in the languages of the different countries for distribution.

Prudential Committee.
A prudential committee composed of 12 members, of which G. Henry Whitcomb, is now chairman, conducts the work of the board at home. The headquarters are in the Congregational house, Boston. Three corresponding secretaries, an editorial secretary, a treasurer and an assistant secretary, in charge of the young people's department, make up the board's executive officers. These executive officers are present for council at the weekly meetings of the prudential committee, but have no vote in its proceedings. Outside of New England there are three district offices, at New York for the middle states, at Chicago for the interior, and at San Francisco for the Pacific states.

Connected with the American board in the support and conduct of missions are three women's boards. The total receipts of the board last year, including the women's boards was $725,315.90. Of this amount $674,944, or over 90 per cent, went directly to the mission fields, while only 9 1-2 per cent was spent in carrying on the work at the central and district offices, including administration, collecting funds, correspondence, agencies, publications and miscellaneous charges. The board recently has been increasing the efficiency of its young people's department. It has a large field among 3552 Christian Endeavor societies and 671,292 members of Congregational Sunday schools. More than 120 mission study classes have been organized among young people. About 28 per cent of the Christian Endeavor societies and 30 per cent of the Sunday schools now contribute as such to foreign missions.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Girl From Kays."
"The Girl From Kays" will be introduced at the Walla Walla theatre on the opening night. The young woman and her hosts of companions come here under the direction of the Miller-Kilpatrick company, and that she will be warmly welcomed is more than likely. Of all the musical comedies of recent years, "The Girl From Kay's" seems built upon the most enduring lines. For over two years it ran in London and in New York heaps of favors were shown it throughout the nine months that it was on view. The biggest hit in the piece has been scored by Bobby North, who, strange as it may seem, has laid aside his broad methods of burlesque and gives a straight and artistic portrayal of a very rich, but vulgar individual with amatory propensities. The characterization is brimful of humor and the claim is made that nothing funnier than it has been seen on the stage in years. Following closely after Mr. North comes Miss Lila Blow. The young comedienne is seen as the "girl," Kay's being a millinery establishment and she one of its young women. Miss Blow has several catchy songs and contributes greatly to the brightness and jollity of the entertainment.

Cozad's Wonderful Aggregation.
Several years have now passed since a complete dog and pony circus has exhibited in this state. Since the Nor-& Rowe shows have been turned into a large circus organization, we have had no entertainment of this kind. However, the present season will mark a change, for the field has been entered by Cozad's California Dog, Pony, Monkey and Goat circus, which will be in Walla Walla Friday night, Sept. 15. The show will be given on a large scale a site aggregation travels in its own special train and carries immense waterproof circus tents; reserved seats, etc., and every care will be taken of the large numbers of ladies and children who are always interested in an entertainment of this nature. A special feature is the arrangement by the management to allow the little folks to ride the ponies free of charge after the exhibition is over.

Great Organist to Play at Whitman.
One of the greatest American organists, Mr. Wm. C. Carl, organist of the Second Presbyterian church at Fifth Avenue and Tenth street, is coming to this city to give a concert at Whitman college on next week Thursday night, the twenty-first instant. Mr. Carl is known throughout the land as the director of the Gullmant Organ School of New York, and a friend and pupil of the great French organist and composer, Alexander Gullmant.

Mr. Carl has been spending the summer in Japan and China, and is fortunately able to visit Walla Walla on his way to New York.

We bespeak for Mr. Carl a warm welcome on behalf of the music lovers of this city.

GRAIN STANDARD UNCHANGED

STATE GRAIN COMMISSION TO LEAVE WASHINGTON GRAIN
AT 58 POUNDS.

Inspector Arrasmith Says a Change
Now Would Result in a Loss to Washington Growers.

It was officially announced yesterday by the state grain commission, which is in annual session at Tacoma, that there will be no change in the standard weight of Washington wheat along the lines requested by the Portland chamber of commerce. The standard weight of 58 pounds a bushel will remain in force, at least for another year. The statement that there would be no change was made by State Grain Inspector Arrasmith, and his decision was approved by the other two members of the commission, W. H. Reed and D. F. Anderson.

The request of the Portland chamber of commerce for a 50 pound standard for No. 1 wheat in Washington, to conform with the standards of Oregon and California, has been widely discussed recently and is considered of much importance to the growers in this state. Members of the state grain commission say the growers in Washington would suffer by the change and that it will not be made. It is a change, they say, that would possibly help the exporters, but after a thorough discussion of the matter it was stated that the change asked by the Portland people would not be made.

Would Result in a Loss.
J. W. Arrasmith, chief inspector, says a change to the 50 pound standard would mean that all wheat which could not show a test of 59 pounds or better would be classed as No. 2, while under the present standard 58 pound wheat is classed as No. 1. He does not think the advantage to be gained would be sufficient to offset the loss.

The board is undecided as to what action it will take regarding the request from the millers of the state for a fixed price for cleaning wheat. From what could be learned, however, it is almost certain that the board will assume that it has authority under the law to fix the dockage and that it will do so, since the question of dockage has caused much friction between the growers and dealers for many years. In some quarters doubt is expressed as to the commission's authority to fix such charges, but it is probable that the commission will assume such authority and act in accordance with the request of the millers.

All wheat that comes into the market contains more or less foreign matter, such as wild oats, or smut, and the dealers exact a charge for cleaning it. The sellers complain that this charge amounts to as much as 5 cents per bushel in some instances, and that the buyers have the right, under the present system, of charging as much as 20 cents. Members of the commission, however, say that the dockage amounts to about 2 cents per bushel.

Business College Notes.
The fall term of the Business College starts off with a class of earnest young people who will succeed, if present indications count for anything. One young man who registered would like to find a place to work out of school hours for his board. One of the best positions obtained for a student recently was secured by F. R. Jansen, who is now bookkeeper for the Seattle Grain Co., at Lind, Washington.

The following letter from the Remington Typewriter Co. explains itself:

Berg, Empire Business College, Walla Walla, Wash.: It affords us great pleasure to inform you that we have just recently placed five of your graduates in paying positions, and that all of them are proving entirely satisfactory to their employers. With best wishes for your success and that of your school, we remain,
Very truly yours,
