No. 19

COUNTY TAXES GO DOWN FOUR MILLS

The Whatcom County tax levy will be four mills lower than last year, according to the budget finally approved by the county commissioners. The commissioners made slight reductions in the amounts asked by the various departments, so that $131,500 will be the amount that must be raised by taxation for the current expense fund. The following allowances were also made: Interest on bonds, $6,665; county bond redemption, $20,000; soldiers' relief, $1,000; construction, maintenance and repairs of roads and bridges, $89,525.33 (3.4 mills); general road indebtedness, $39,496.47 (1.5 ml), which will entirely wipe out this debt.

The reduction of the state tax by one mill and the wiping out of the general road and bridge indebtedness by the extra tax last year, reduced the levy this year. The expenses of the county for maintenance continue to mount, as shown by the increase of four tenths mill in the road and bridge fund, and the same increase in the current expense levy.

ANTI-BILLBOARD LAW IS FAVORED

The suggestion to protect Lynden's residence district by the passage of an ordinance prohibiting billboards, is meeting with general approval. Hardly a citizen but what favors the move to keep the huge signs out of the many beautiful home centers.

The council will be asked at their meeting Friday, Nov. 5, to take up the matter, and vote favorably on an anti-billboard law.

"The fact that the city is still comparatively free of big gawdy signs gives us a chance to keep them out altogether," said one citizen today. "We don't want the town littered up with signs. The best thing to do is to limit them now."
