FLUNG UP FROM THE SEA.

Birth of the Bogoslof Group of the Aleutian Islands.
The first of the Bogoslof group of the Aleutian Islands was born in the year 1790.
There was a great convulsion in the Berling sea about twenty-five miles north of Unalaska, and an island appeared above the surface of the stormy waters. This islet, which rose to a height of nearly 3,000 feet above sea level, was christened Bogoslof by the Russians, who then owned Alaska. It remained solitary and alone until 1882 when another volcanic eruption in the sea was followed by the birth of another island near the first.

For two years the new island was the scene of an active eruption. Then it cooled gradually, and, like the first islet, became the home of seals and sea lions and the breeding grounds for sea birds.

The third of the Bogoslof group was born in 1906. The "baby" was smaller than its elder sister, being about a third of a mile in diameter and with an altitude of some 600 feet, but the following year another convulsion of nature resulted in nearly doubling its area.
Since then several other islands have been born in various parts of the Aleutian chain.—Chicago Journal.

An Author's Odd Aversion.
The "stole" meal had attractions for Edward Fitzgerald, who, among his other peculiarities, hated to see people enjoying their food. On one occasion, after a man had finished a glass of wine in his company and gone out of the room, Fitzgerald remarked with disgust: "Did you notice how he took up his glass? I am sure he likes it. Bah!" Fitzgerald himself, according to his biographer, A. C. Benson, "lived practically on bread and fruit, mostly apples and pears, even a turnip, with sometimes cheese or butter and milk puddings. But he was not a bigoted vegetarian. To avoid an appearance of singularity he would eat meat at other houses and provided it in plenty for his guests. But the only social meal he cared to join in was "tea, pure and simple, with bread and butter."

LIKE AN ANCIENT FORT.

Mexico's Spiked Mountain a Curious Geological Freak.

One of the most remarkable geological freaks in Mexico is a mountain situated near Pachuca, which presents the appearance at a distance of being covered with spikes. The sides of the mountain are closely studded with stone columns or pilasters. These columns are five feet to twelve feet long and as large around as an average man's body.

It is a remarkable uplift of nature, which has the appearance, however, of being the handiwork of human beings. One side of the mountain is almost perpendicular, and the stone columns protrude from the surface at right angles, forming an impressive picture.

Pachuca is one of the most noted mining districts in Mexico, and it is said by geologists that this remarkable spiked mountain is out of keeping with the remainder of the formation of the mineralized region.

The stone is as hard as flint and has withstood the elements for ages. The spikes form a natural battlement that makes the mountain appear from a distance like some ancient fort.

The mines of the Pachuca district are situated not far from this wonderful freak of nature, but the formation encountered in their respective underground workings is of an entirely different kind from that of the pilsade.—Pearson's Weekly.

Genius and Appetite.

Sir Francis Galton held that a good appetite is one of the attributes of genius. "Most notabilities have been great eaters and excellent digesters on the same principle that the furnace which can raise more steam than is usual for one of its size must burn more freely and well than is common." Scott was of the same opinion.

In a letter to Candling respecting an article promised to the Quarterly Review he advises him to break the neck of it after a hearty meal, "preferably of boiled chicken." And he practiced what he preached, for, like Tennyson, Dickens, Thackeray and many other nineteenth century authors, Scott was an excellent trencherman.—London Opinion.

The Romans Dressed For Dinner.

A sartorial authority says that the custom of dressing for dinner began with the Romans. It was a simpler procedure than at present. A loose robe of fine material was donned for the evening meal, preferably at home but in cases where guests came from a distance to the home of the host he kept a supply of dinner clothes on hand for the use of his guests who came in provided.

Lawyers' Way.

"I can't understand why those two lawyers call it a deed of trust."
"Why not?"
"From the care with which they are drawing it up it is quite evident that they don't trust each other."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Wholesale.

"Your husband is worse? Did you forget the medicine?"
"So as not to forget it I gave him the whole bottle at once."—Browning's Magazine.

Knew the Scheme.

Spenditt—I, say, old chap, if you would lend me $50 I could make $75. Smart—How would you make the other twenty-five?—Boston Transcript.

Greeting the King.

King Alfonso of Spain is given to the habit of mingling with his people unexpectedly and unannounced.

Some little time ago he visited a small town near Madrid and walked about the streets. But the rumor of his presence somehow got abroad, and

"HAVE A LOOK AT ME." he suddenly found himself among an excited throng, all of whom were "looking for Alfonso."

One excited old lady began to exclaim shrilly when he was near her: "Get out of the way!" she cried.

"How can I see what the king is like if you will crowd me so!"

Trotting, with a smile, to the excited old lady, King Alfonso whispered: "Have a look at me—I am the king."

"King?" she exclaimed scornfully. "You the king! Don't tell me that, you blackguard. Why, you're more like some one who has come to blow the poor boy up!"
