W. R. C. NOTES

Saturday, Sept. 16, a very small attendance was present. We strongly urge members to be more punctual in attendance. Considerable business matters were discussed which should be of interest to every member. It was decided to entertain the old comrades and families on Friday, Sep. 29, with a dinner and program. The ladies must not forget these baskets full of good things to eat which are always welcomed by the old comrades. A little improvement is noticeable at the hall. The steps have been moved from the front to the east end of the porch where they are connected to the main sidewalk by cement, with a railing around the porch to avoid accidents.

GARRICK DISOWNED.

To Tell the Truth, Though, His Appearance Was Against Him.

Garrick's brother Peter lived at Lichfield. On the occasion of some townsmen going to London Peter Garrick addressed a letter to his brother David in Southampton street, where he lives then, requesting him to show the lions of London to their townsmen, with whatever facilities he could confer. The man of Lichfield arrived in the great city, proceeded to Southampton street and, on knocking at the door was told that Mr. Garrick was not at home, being engaged to attend the rehearsal at Drury Lane theater that morning, as he must play Abdel Drugger in "The Alchemist" that evening when he would be sure to see him if he did not find him before.

John of Lichfield, acting agreeably to this information, went to the theater and then went back to Lichfield, where he attended his own business and took no notice of Peter Garrick.

The latter, surprised at this neglect questioned him why he did not bring an answer to his letter.

"Because your brother did not give any," was the conclusive reply.

"Indeed," said Peter, "that is very extraordinary. What did he say to you?"

John of Lichfield exclaimed: "Well, Master Garrick, as you will have an answer, you shall have it. Take it as you please. I went to Southampton street. David was not at home. They said I might go to him at the play house. Well, they made me pay 3 shillings to go in, which I thought a strange proceeding. However, that was nothing. When he did show himself on the stage he was the nastiest, dirtiest, shuffling little blackguard that I ever set my eyes upon. I would not speak to him nor see him or own him as a townsman, though he is your brother. So I came away and left him to play his dirty tricks by himself."—Pearson's.

Chance and Purpose.

"Chance" drifts ever downward with the current. "Purpose" with "hard work" at its elbow goes upstream by force fighting.

Eugenie's Manner.

Of the visit to London of Napoleon III, and the Empress Eugenie, Disraeli wrote:

I was greatly disappointed with the empress. For me she had not a charm. She has Chinese eyes and a perpetual smile or simper which I detest. I understand that she is very natural and natural for a sovereign—and that Napoleon looks sometimes as if he would be pleased with more reserve and dignity. She was always playing with the royal children, who doted on her, and was sometimes found sitting on the edge of a table. What do you think of that? The courtiers were horrified. "Life of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield."

Quick Action.

A father remonstrated with his son, an Oxford undergraduate, for wasting his time in writing for local papers, and cited Dr. Johnson as saying that a man who wrote except for money was a fool.

The son wrote back immediately: "I shall follow Dr. Johnson's advice and write for money. Please send me £20."—London Telegraph.
