Does the Work of Six Men

"Sounds improbable—you say! Well it's true nevertheless. This is a motor of one horse power and it can, at a pinch, do more than one horse power of work."

"And it is a well proven fact that one able bodied man, working continuously, can exert a force equal to one-sixth of a horse power."

"Therefore I repeat, that this little ninety pound G-E Motor can do the work of at least six men."

"But how about the cost?"

"Only about five cents an hour for electric current—six men at fifteen cents an hour cost ninety cents."

"If you want some more information on the economy and advantages of electric motors and electric power, come and have a chat with our Power Men."

Lost Motion.

"Pa, where does the rain come from?"

"From the clouds, my son."

"And where do the clouds get it?"

"It rises in the form of vapor from the ocean and the lakes and rivers."

"Where does it go after it falls upon the ground?"

"Eventually it gets back to the ocean."

"Well, why couldn't it stay in one place all the time and save all that trouble?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Natural Curiosity.

Joe had been working in Baltimore. On the day before Christmas he received his pay and planned to go home to Washington, but first he started out to buy presents for all his family. He did this with more generosity than foresight, and when evening came he found himself at the railway station loaded with bundles, but with no money for his fare to Washington.

Somehow he got through the gate and approached the conductor. He laid the case before him and ended with a plea that he might ride to Washington on the platform of the baggage car. The conductor, his heart warmed by the spirit of the season said, "All right; go ahead."

So Joe climbed on the platform of the car next to the engine. It was a cold night, and it was on a road where the engine takes up water from a track reservoir as it goes along.

When the train reached Washington the conductor saw Joe approaching covered with ice from head to foot bundles and all. He came up to the conductor and said: "I sure does thank you, boss, for mah ride. You's ver kind to allow mah to ride up with you but there's jus' one question I wants t'ax. Kin yuh tell me the name ob thar rlyuh we run through back there?"—Youth's Companion.

Not His Fault.

Little Augustus Johnson had learned some things about the face of a clock but not quite all there is to know.

"What time is it, Gustus?" asked his employer one night to test him.

"It's jes' 8 o'clock," said the boy after a careful survey of the clock.

"No, you're wrong," said his employer. "It won't be 8 for quite awhile yet—not for twenty minutes."

"Bofe hands is p'intin' to 8 jes' as straight as dey can p'int," said the boy stubbornly. "If dey ain' tellin' de truf I c'ant help it."—Youth's Companion
