REDUCE THE LEVIES

a note. If he'd ever had a baby himself.

We know that it will be extremely hard for the county commissioners to cut the budget to the bone next Monday. They are the doctors that the people have employed for the operation, and they know the attitude of the county in general. It may hurt at the time, but we'll all feel better when it's over.

Taxes must be reduced!

Don't get all purified up; keep your head out of the water. Remember what happened to the ZR-2?

GOOD EYES NEEDED

Father, father put on your glasses. Governor Hart and the state equalization committee have cut the state taxes. The 1922 levy will be lower than 1921 by $1-one thousandths of a mill!

A spike was driven in the concrete to celebrate the completion of the scenic Waterfront Road. Now it will just like some fool motorist to carry off this historic spike in a tire.

A BOOST FOR THE FAIR

From the Bellingham Herald

Whatcom county's annual fair will open at the fair grounds in Lynden tomorrow. It is a boast of Whatcom county that it annually puts on the best county fair in the state of Washington. That is no idle boast. It is made possible by the whole force of the county, united in support of the project. This county ranks high in the production of all those things which go to make a fair success—farm and garden products, livestock, poultry, school handicraft. The annual assembly at Lynden brings together from all parts of the community the fruits of the season's labor. It serves to stimulate pride in the county's produce; it fosters rivalry among the growers and thus tends to improve the qualities of exhibits from year to year; it brings together the people of the community in common interest, and leads to the solution of their common problems. The fair is evidently worth while. It deserves the encouragement and support of all the people of the county—and will get it.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD

Vine covered, moss covered,
Bumblod old homestead,
Shaded by willows, each knotted by
time;
Peter grazed by beewood,
Lane where big rocks stood,
Garden with hollyhocks blooming sublime.

Long gabled, steep gabled,
Bumblod old homestead,
Close to the turn where a crooked road
wound;
Brook swiftly flowing,
Crisp grasses growing,
Deep silent forest that darkened the ground.

Old fashioned, quaint fashioned,
Gate with big hinges,
Fence with high pickets where sweet
berries grew;
Well deep, inviting,
Cow drooping delighted,
And old rusty cup that all wayfarers knew.

Wide spreading, green spreading,
Meadow where daisies
Bounded in the breezes and where a small pond
Many times waded.
The brook that I bathed,
And caught yellow perch for the home-
road beyond.

Sun.
