The Lynden Gimlet

Ike Elenbaas fixed things at the city caucus Monday night. He received one vote for the council.

He would undoubtedly have also received one vote for city treasurer, had not the balloting been called off by the withdrawal of J. W. Stearns.

And Ike marked his ballot right up in front of the room.

Mrs. Leslie Frasier had a high compliment paid to her culinary ability last week. Two particular thieves stole forty quarts of her canned fruit.

Here's a little advice a subscriber sent in on how to become beautiful without the aid of cosmetics:

To make the eyes sparkle, remove the skin of an onion.

To arrest dandruff, call Jake.

If you want curly hair, buy a wig.

To enlarge a small nose, balance a bumble bee on the end of it.

If you're bothered at all about the results of the election, just remember that probably ninety years from now, you won't care whether New York went Democratic or not.

Well, well, well—after eight years of peace at the city elections, we're going to have a red-headed candidate for city treasurer.

Robert Bowles, the local hiring of the Stone and Webster corporation, is appearing with a new Ford automobile.
