The Chinese are going back to their old style of arms because the new ones didn't enable them to win against the allies. This is about as characteristic a specimen of Oriental reasoning as the world has had for a long time.

Fifty thousand Spaniards have emigrated to Cuba during the past year. They take kindly to a republican form of government, and evidently find nothing so bad as it might be under United States occupation. They seem to have no hard feeling against the American government.

Representative Jones of Washington has introduced a bill in congress, general in character, which provides that where Indians are summoned as witnesses to give testimony in cases where charges are brought against individuals or other parties for selling intoxicating liquors on Indian lands, such Indians shall be entitled to mileage and other costs only when they are in no way incriminated. Such Indians as have purchased liquors under these conditions, or have furnished other Indians with money for making such purchases, will be cut off from this allowance. The bill, however, provides that all Indians, incriminated or not, shall be obliged to give testimony when called upon.

Through United States statistics the fact is well demonstrated that our manufactured goods are becoming more in demand each year among foreign nations. We are turning out greater quantities and are finding better markets as people across the sea find out the merit of our goods. For nine months this year we sent away $338,000,000 worth of manufactured goods and bought over $201,000,000 worth of foreign supplies. Our exports are just three times as great as they were ten years ago, and our imports less. The foreign demand for our meats is also growing rapidly, and though ancient prejudice is hard to overcome, people in foreign countries are bound to see in time that American meat is the best and cheapest.

The career of the late Senator Cushman K. Davis was another illustration of the fact that the prizes in all spheres of endeavor in the United States are open to everybody with energy, character and intelligence. Davis was poor at the outset, and remained poor to the end of his career. Neither fortune nor political "pulls" had anything to do with his success. Ability and character won him his place in the public service. For years past he had been one of the most distinguished men in the senate. As chairman of the committee of foreign relations of his chamber he gained a reputation which has made him known to the rest of the world as well as to his own country. It will not be easy for Minnesota to fill Davis' place acceptably.

The Northern Pacific has decided to centralize all its immense wheat, coal and oriental business at Tacoma. Immediate and extensive improvements are to be made on the newly acquired lands of the road for the purpose of handling this traffic. Warehouses, elevators, coal bunkers and conveyors and new docks will be built as soon as the railroad can complete its plans. This action of the Northern Pacific is final and definitely fixes the Pacific coast terminus of the road for its immense and growing traffic at Tacoma. The improvements for handling the business will be made at that point, and so far as possible the Northern Pacific will divert its trade to that port. It is now able to do so through the acquisition of terminal grounds which give plenty of room for handling the traffic.

Another socialistic scheme will go under the sheriff's hammer some time this month, marking the end of the Christian Commonwealth Colony in Muskego county, Georgia. The assets of this colony include 1000 acres of land, with the joint accumulations in buildings, agricultural implements, stock, etc., of forty men and women during a period of nearly three years, all of which will be required to satisfy the community's creditors. It is the familiar story of communistic effort, summed up in a few words. "At one time the colony seemed in a fair way to succeed, but dissensions arose over members who refused to do their share of the work, and finally a receiver was appointed." The colonists were from Ohio. They pooled their money and bought a fine body of agricultural land, with a good stream flowing across it. A sawmill, a broom factory and other industries were established, yet such is human nature that the colony has gone to pieces in three years, though it was exceptionally prosperous the first year. It is only one of many such failures; and there are others to follow.

Message of the President

That part of President McKinley's message to congress which deals with the external concerns of the country will probably be turned to first by most readers. Naturally a large space is given to the Chinese trouble, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The president, rejecting the extreme claims of most of the other nations for indemnity from China, says that "due compensation may be made in part by increased guarantees of security for foreign rights and immunities, and most important of all, by the opening of China to the equal commerce of the world." Military control of the Philippines, he points out, is imperative until the rebellion is ended. Meanwhile civil government is to be organized by the commission in the larger administrative divisions of the islands, as far as this can be safely done, even before the disturbances cease all over the archipelago, and in the selection of civil officers the natives will be preferred wherever practicable. When the Cubans finish their constitution, the president says, he will submit it to congress for such action as may be deemed advisable at the time.

The question of army reorganization, of course, is given a prominent place in the message. As a permanent establishment 60,000 soldiers, he says, will be needed, and while the unsettled conditions in Cuba and the Philippines last authority should be given to him to increase the army to the 100,000 mark, as at present. An increase in the ships and the men in the navy is urged. The necessity for the early construction of an interoceanic canal is dwelt upon, and the senate is urged to give attention to the convention with England designed to remove any obstruction which may be put in the way of the building of a canal by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Congress is asked to provide whatever legislation it may deem necessary to strengthen the gold standard act of March 14, 1900, though no specific recommendation is presented. Encouragement for American shipping is recommended; a reduction of the war taxes of 1898 is suggested, to the extent of $30,000,000; legislation to curb the trusts is asked; rural mail deliveries are favored, and jurisdiction for the federal courts in cases of outrages on foreigners in this country is again insisted upon.

It is a long message, but the country is growing larger and its concerns, at home and abroad, naturally keep pace with this expansion. The president's recommendations will, in most cases, find favor from congress, it is safe to predict. The message is broad, sane and thoroughly American. The courage and humanity shown by the administration in dealing with the Chinese issue will be applauded by the country. No reasonable person will find fault with the policy which is outlined for the government of the Philippines. The country, thanks to the administration, is keeping its promise to Cuba, in letter and spirit. Porto Rico is prospering under the treatment accorded by the United States, and further advances are certain when the new regime in the island gets fully in operation. Measures are recommended to strengthen the ties between the United States and the principal nations of Europe that will appeal to Americans of all shades of political opinion. The injunction of the constitution that the president "shall, from time to time, give to the congress information of the state of the union and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient" is observed by Mr. McKinley with comprehensiveness and intelligence.

LACK OF GOOD ROADS. Our Miserable Country Highways Are a National Disgrace.

The chief obstacle to the general use of the automobile in this country is the disgraceful lack of good roads, says the New York World. Such an event as the Paris-Bordeaux automobile race in France or the English excursion from London to Edinburgh and return would be impossible in this country simply because we have not got 500 continuous miles of road fit for the automobile or for any other vehicle. But the movement in favor of good roads which gained such re-enforcement from the bicycle is being strengthened by the introduction of the automobile. A project has been started among a colony of wealthy summer residents of New Hampshire to improve a tourists' roadway of 500 miles from Boston to Dublin, N. H., thence up the Connecticut valley, through the White mountains, down to the Maine coast and back to Boston.

The disastrous failure of a recent attempt to travel by automobile from New York to Buffalo demonstrated the disgraceful condition of the ordinary roads in the Empire State. If the New England project results in giving us 500 continuous miles of good road, it will be a valuable and much needed object lesson.

English Country Roads. The English have reason to love their country roads. There is nothing lovelier in their rural scenery. Let there be an exquisitely proportioned cathedral at one end of the drive and an archaeological marvel at the other, it is still the road that inspires unceasing delight every mile of the way. There are no ragged footpaths at the sides, there is no litter of underbrush and refuse, there is nothing unsightly at any turn. The road menders might almost be landscape gardeners, so neatly trimmed are the hedges, so even are the borders of turf and so lovely are the varied roadside effects. Americans can never have such country roads until, like the English, they have learned to love them better than their houses or their lawns. Then they will insist upon having them well made and systematically cared for.

GANGER

Sufferers from this horrible malady nearly always inherit it—not necessarily from the parents, but may be from some remote ancestor, for Cancer often runs through several generations. This deadly poison may lay dormant in the blood for years, or until you reach middle life, then the first little sore or ulcer makes its appearance—or a swollen gland in the breast, or some other part of the body, gives the first warning.

To cure Cancer thoroughly and permanently all the poisonous virus must be eliminated from the blood—every vestige of it driven out. This S. S. does, and is the only medicine that can reach deep-seated, obstinate blood troubles like this. When all the poison has been forced out of the system the Cancer heals, and the disease never returns.

Cancer begins often in a small way, as the following letter from Mrs. Shirer shows: A small pimple came on my jaw about an inch below the ear on the left side of my face. It gave me no pain or itching, but a few bottles disappeared, and I should have forgotten about it had it not begun to inflame and swell, and would not heal. This continued for some time, and when my jaw began to swell, becoming very painful. The Cancer began to eat and spread, until it was as large as a half dollar when I heard of S. S. S. and determined to give it a fair trial, and it was remarkable what a wonderful effect it had from the very beginning; the sore began to heal and after taking a few bottles disappeared entirely. This was two years ago; there are still no signs of the Cancer, and my general health continues good.—Mrs. R. Shirer, La Plata, Mo.

S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and the only one guaranteed purely vegetable. Send for our free book on Cancer, containing valuable and interesting information about this disease, and write our physicians about your case. We make no charge for medical advice.
