Petroleum and the Mosquito.
 It has been quite conclusively proved by the experiments this season that petroleum, either crude or refined, is effective as a means of destroying immature mosquitoes and rendering stagnant pools and like breeding places incapable of sustaining this most dangerous form of insect life.

In some instances, however, the remedy is almost as bad as the disease. Petroleum is an unpleasant thing to handle as well as rather expensive in the large quantities necessary for a vigorous campaign against the mosquito, and after a rural district has been generously sprinkled with oil its appearance and odor are almost enough to make one prefer the malarial pests.

Attention is deserved, therefore, by a letter published in The Medical Record, the author of which, Dr. Richard Waggener, writing from the naval proving ground at Indian Head, Md., says he long ago found that the addition to water of a little lime would quickly rid it of the larvae of mosquitoes. "Recently," the doctor declares, "I accidentally discovered a rain barrel full of water which was alive with the larvae and pupae of mosquitoes, the former being vastly in the majority, and I immediately seized upon this opportunity to watch the effect of lime upon them. As I was not trying to ascertain the minimum quantity of lime necessary to kill the larvae, but only to demonstrate to myself that lime would do the work, I dumped my two hands heaping full of air slaked lime into the barrel. This was done at 2:30 p. m. On inspection the next day at 7:30 a. m. there was not a single live larva in the barrel, but the number of pupae was apparently undiminished. Another inspection at 5 p. m. the same day showed no live pupae or larvae, and the water, which before the introduction of the lime was dark and foul, was clear, and dead larvae were plainly discernible on the bottom." The experiment is certainly worth trying in mosquito infested sections.

It is charged that Cecil Rhodes, the English-South African millionaire mine owner, paid to the Liberal party in England as a "campaign contribution" the sum of £5,000, and in return it was tacitly agreed that the demand for the evacuation of Egypt should not be pressed. This Egyptian question is a monumental one and has been hanging fire for a long time. But what makes it appear remarkable to us is that a transaction of such dimensions can be squelched by the gift of a puny, niggardly $25,000 "contribution." It would require five times that amount to squelch even a garbage contract in this country. It is an old saying that "every man (or party) has his price," but the Liberal party in England appears to be about the cheapest going.

None could ask more beautiful autumn weather than that which the Palouse country has been blessed. Sunshine days and starry nights have been enjoyed throughout the harvest season, now at the close. The farmers' work for the season is almost completed, roads are excellent, and still the sun shines from cloudless skies. Not the melancholy, but the joyous days have come, the happiest of the year.

Palouse wheat stood for a few days of the week at 40 cents a bushel, and sales were large; but at the same time the farmer declares there is no money in it for him. Beef, pork, mutton, poultry, eggs, butter, hay, potatoes and apples are going at good prices, and it almost seems that a portion of the fertile acres could be turned to better use than growing wheat everlastingly.

It may be safely said that nine-tenths of the homeseekers who have flocked to the west during the past two years have been pleased with the country and have settled down to grow up with it. Few indeed are they who have found serious fault, and in the majority of these cases nothing more incurable than homesickness has been at the bottom of their discontent.

At least one ranting anarchist, Johann Most, will have time to reflect upon the shortcomings of a doctrine which preaches red-handed murder. He has been sentenced in New York to one year in the penitentiary for the publication the day after President McKinley was shot of an article advocating murder.

Lessons are gradually being learned by the wheat farmers of the Palouse country, and they are just as gradually turning to diversified products. Five or ten years will make a great difference in the appearance of and revenues from these hills.

The Prospect of Dollar Wheat.
 There is an old agricultural saw that when wheat goes to a dollar a bushel the farmer is in clover, and it need surprise no one if it should go to that figure before the next season's crop is harvested. The shortage in the wheat crop abroad and the shortage in corn here must of necessity force up the price of wheat, but whether it reaches the dollar mark remains to be seen. The deficit abroad is now known to be much greater than the European grain trade and milling journals have heretofore been willing to admit. Late advices indicate that the French crop, all along reported to be light, will be much smaller than was expected, and France will probably have to buy 100,000,000 bushels abroad. Germany, which has faced a shortage of wheat and rye from the first, is no better off than first reported; Hungary, which produces normally a small surplus, has to meet a deficit; the Roumanian crop has been seriously damaged, and in Russia too much rain in one section and drought and hail in others will reduce the exportable surplus considerably.

So far as this year's crop is concerned Europe is probably worse off than it was in 1897. But the statistical position of wheat was much stronger in that year than it is now because stocks were at a low ebb all over the world at the opening of the crop year and the American crop was about 100,000,000 bushels short of this year's probable total. The low state of uncommitted stocks in 1897 was indicated by the fact that the visible supply in the United States on Sept. 1, which as a rule marks the ebb, was only 15,000,000 bushels, the lowest point reached during the decade except in 1898, when the heavy European demand had reduced our visible supply to less than 6,000,000 bushels. This year on Aug. 3 our visible supply of wheat was 30,400,000 bushels. This is the lowest "visible" by many bushels since 1897 or 1898.

While the world's visible supply is perhaps not now enough to warrant a prediction of an experience like that of 1897-8, which culminated in the Letter corner and a top price of $1.85, the situation of the wheat market is very much the same as it was at that time. Our wheat harvest this year is abundant, estimated at 650,000,000 bushels, but wheat is already going out of the country at record breaking rate, indicating a large void abroad to be filled. Moreover, scarcity and comparatively high prices of corn and of nearly all market garden products, which form a large proportion of the food of the American people, will be likely to result in a much larger domestic consumption of wheat. Dollar wheat, therefore, is not beyond the possibilities.

During the siege of Ladysmith, after the Tugela river disaster, while all England was waiting, with its heart in its mouth, for official news of the battle, the British war office received a dispatch from General Buller beginning, "It is always darkest before the dawn." There was nothing definite about this, but it is not likely that any one failed to correctly guess what was to follow. During the civil war in this country a correspondent of the New York Tribune on the occasion of a victory for the Union forces prefaced his dispatch with a verse from a popular hymn which in a letter perhaps would have been very appropriate. Horace Greeley, who was at that time conducting The Tribune, in his next communication to the correspondent made the characteristic request that in future he give the number of the hymn and save telegraph expenses.

There are some queer communities in Indiana. Here, for instance, is a place where a baseball player who knocked the umpire down with a bat was clapped into jail and fined for assault instead of having bouquets thrown at him, as is the case in towns where there exists a proper appreciation of the national game.

The Chicago board of review has been informing many of the capitalists and corporations of that city they are really much richer than they thought themselves when the assessors called. Strangely enough, they do not receive the news of their increased wealth with any demonstrations of joy.

An American syndicate has been formed to corner the pulp industry of Labrador. Pretty soon we may expect some American ice company will get possession of the north pole and saw it into chunks of convenient size for the family refrigerator.

Tom L. Johnson has had a 5 cent cigar named after him, and he is angry about it. He ought to have thought of the penalties of fame before he started out to do things that would make him famous.

Bob Fitzsimmons has taken to lecturing as a side line. We may now expect a series of joint debates announced between the Hon. James J. Corbett and the Hon. Robert Fitzsimmons.

It is in order now for the humorous writers of the country to begin to refer to Santos-Dumont, the inventor of the so called "practical airship," as a light flier.

WINNERS AT THE FAIR
First and Second Premiums
Awarded To Exhibitors.

None Were Allowed On Fruits Or Fine Arts—Finances Even After County Helps.

The county commissioners have agreed to reimburse the Whitman County Sale Fair Association to the amount of $300 for money advanced by the association in defraying the expenses of Rev. T. W. Walters in his recent trip east for the purpose of interesting buyers in the fruit and vegetable products of the county, in which he was quite successful, and which it is expected by fruit-growers will result in much benefit to them, through expansion of their markets.

This action of the commissioners enables the association to bring out the financial affairs of the association barely even.

Following are the premiums awarded by the judges for exhibits at the recent meeting of the Whitman County Sale Fair Association. By mutual consent, no prizes in money were awarded for winners in fruits and the fine arts:
