

RECESS OF CONGRESS

SENATORS SAY IT'S TAKEN ON ACCOUNT OF DEPEW'S WEDDING.

New York Senator's Advance Notice. The Belmont Collar—Henderson's Frock Coat—Bow and Stern Ornaments For Our Fighting Ships.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—After being in session for a fortnight or so congress takes a recess nominally for the observance of the midwinter holidays, but primarily, it is asserted by staid senators, to allow their distinguished colleague, the junior senator from New York, to go to Paris and bring home a charming young bride. Senator Depew's Christmas wedding has been the subject of many a pleasant jest, which he takes in good part. Indeed he rather seems to like it. It is expected that the senator, who is now on his way to Paris, will bring his bride here after their return to this country, and she is assured of a cordial welcome to Washington society.

That Senator Depew is firmly convinced that nothing on the earth, in the sky above or the waters under the earth can frustrate the consummation of his matrimonial hopes is demonstrated by the fact that in the Congressional Directory, just issued, his autobiography, furnished by himself, contains this piece of advance news, written in the past tense, "Married in December, 1901, to Miss May Palmer." By the senator's friends this is regarded as a thoroughly original and quaint way of officially announcing his marriage, the publication taking the place of ordinary wedding cards. The previousness of the announcement at least indicates that "Our Chauncey" is no laggard in love.

Speaking of weddings in senatorial circles, that of Miss Julia Foraker, the daughter of the senior Ohio senator, to Francis King Wainwright, a wealthy young Philadelphian, is now the talk of Washington society. It will occur on Jan. 9 and will not be, as at first expected, a church ceremony. Miss Foraker has decided in favor of a home wedding. Noon is the hour appointed. The ceremony will take place in the spacious drawing rooms of her parents' residence here, at the corner of Sixteenth and P streets. Comparatively few guests will be asked to the wedding, though it will be followed by a large reception. The engagement was announced during the Easter holidays, together with the engagement of the bride elect's sister to Mr. Matthews, nephew of the late Justice Stanley Matthews of the supreme court. As yet no date has been made public for the latter marriage. The Foraker girls are extremely popular in society. They are handsome, bright, talented and college bred. They have the name of wearing the "smartest" gowns of almost any members of the young society set. Miss Julia's wedding gown will be a very elegant one, of rich ivory satin, with court train and the regulation wedding veil and orange blossoms.

A fruitful source of facetious remark in the galleries of the house has been Congressman Belmont's new collar, and it has even attracted some quiet comment on the floor. It looks as if it had been fashioned upon plans and specifications based on the pictures Harry Furniss used to draw in London Punch of the Gladstone collar. Mr. Belmont's collar is nearly three inches high behind and has two great flaring points that jut out in front, leaving a wide space at the throat. No such piece of haberdashery has been seen in the halls of congress in recent years, though it is very much like the collar worn by Henry Clay and his colleagues in congress way back in the forties. It went with the stock of the period of the first half of the last century. It may as well be termed the Henry Clay as the Gladstone collar, as it is almost a duplicate of the one shown in portraits of "Harry of the West." The new collar, or rather the revival of the old, was inaugurated at the recent horse show in New York, and now that Mr. Belmont has introduced it to congress it will have no trouble in getting into "good society." However, Mr. Belmont may well set the sartorial pace, as he is always faultlessly attired.

Appropos of congressional sartorial adornment, a new story is told of Speaker Henderson and the well fitting frock coat which envelops his stalwart form as he presides over the deliberations of the house. After his return from an extended tour of Europe last fall he attended as one of the spell-binding audience and stood up, as a cheering audience and stood up, as the member tells the story, in the same frock coat that he now wears in the federal chamber.

"I have just returned from Europe," declared the vigorous Iowan, "and I suppose you were expecting I would come here with a broad accent. Perhaps you are thinking that this coat," and he held up one of the skirts of the garment, "was made in London. I want to assure you that I did not cross the ocean this summer until I had visited every state and territory in this Union. This coat," here he shook the skirt of it, held in his hand, "and all this suit I wear were made in Keokuk. And, further, I will say," asserted the speaker in the ringing tones which characterize his public speeches, "that I am now convinced we have longer rivers than there are in Europe, we have higher mountains, we do everything over here better than they do elsewhere in all the world, and this is the only country on the globe where ten pound babies grow."

The Keokuk made frock coat and the allusion to embryo American citizens, so says the narrator of the story, took the Buckeye audience completely off their feet. While the recommendations of the president and the secretary of the navy for the building of more war vessels are quite generally approved by congress, there is a movement well under way in the navy department for a more elaborate and artistic decoration of some of the ships already in commission. This takes the form of providing allegorical figureheads and ornamental sternpieces for battleships and cruisers. Hitherto the "bow ornaments," as they are called in naval parlance, of our fighting craft consisted of nothing more than the coat of arms of the United States and a bit of scrollwork usually supplied by the contractors in whose yards the vessels were built.

The first of the warships to receive this decorative treatment was the cruiser Cincinnati. Some months ago an artistic figurehead was attached to the prow and an ornamental design bearing the ship's name to the stern. They were designed by a New York art firm. The headpiece consisted of a large winged figure representing Liberty holding aloft an eagle, the bird being in such attitude as to suggest the idea that it was about to take flight.

Subsequently it was decided to ornament Admiral Dewey's famous flagship, the Olympia, with similar bow and stern decorations. Contract was let to the same firm that made the Cincinnati figurehead, and the commission has now been executed. The center design of the Olympia's bow ornament is an accurate reproduction of the classic statue, "The Winged Victory." The life sized figure of a heroic young woman in flowing draperies rests on a shield of dolphins, while she holds over her head an eagle about to take flight. The wings of Victory are thrown back against the side of the bow. Scrollwork, festooning the national coat of arms in a wreath and then running back in graceful lines under the bawse holes, a distance of a dozen feet, ornaments the sides of the prow. From the dolphin base to the head of the eagle's head the height of the figurehead is just seven feet. More than 3,000 pounds of bronze were used in casting the figurehead and design.

The stern ornament of the Olympia is less ornate, but almost equally beautiful, being cast from the same metal as the figurehead and bow design. It is a big shield with an open space in a scroll frame for the name Olympia, surmounted by the national shield, with an eagle perched on it, and on either side, running forward about six feet to the after six pounder gun sponsons, scrollwork, dolphins and figures emblematic of war.

The construction bureau of the navy department is said to be very much pleased with the ornamentation of the Olympia as well as the Cincinnati and proposes to extend the treatment to other battleships and cruisers. The navy men say that besides the artistic improvement such heroic allegorical bow ornaments possess substantial usefulness, giving encouragement to the warlike enthusiasm of the fighting men on board.

Some years ago, when the battleships Indiana and Massachusetts were built, it was decided to provide these and certain other vessels with the busts of historic personages for figureheads, and sculptures of Washington and Jefferson were selected. But there was so much dispute as to which other Americans of distinction should be selected that the plan was finally abandoned.

The idea is not a bad one and might well be revived, though it would perhaps be better to confine the list to naval heroes who have passed away. There are enough of these to supply a goodly number of vessels, and what could be more fitting or inspiring to the jacksies than the busts of such undaunted sea fighters as Paul Jones, Lawrence, Perry and Farragut on the prows of our fighting ships? "Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while paints and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use. Seed Time and Harvest.

A good time to think most seriously of the harvest is seed time. The decision you make then will determine the value of your crops later. The growing competition in seed selling is an increasing temptation to unscrupulous dealers to make extravagant claims for their seeds, both in price and producing quality. The wisest farmers are those who are influenced most by what experience has proven to be good and true. Thousands of seed sowers in all sections of the country sow Ferry's famous seeds year after year, and have the satisfaction of good harvests to justify their continued faith in the Ferry firm. They pay a few cents more at seed time, but realize many dollars in better crops at the harvest. The natural consequence of this confidence is ever increasing business. D. M. Ferry & Co. sent out last year more seeds than any other seed house in the world. The 1902 catalogue of this house is now ready and will be found a useful guide in selecting the choicest seeds for the farmer, the truck gardener and the flower gardener. It is sent free on request. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while paints and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. Seed Time and Harvest.

A good time to think most seriously of the harvest is seed time. The decision you make then will determine the value of your crops later. The growing competition in seed selling is an increasing temptation to unscrupulous dealers to make extravagant claims for their seeds, both in price and producing quality. The wisest farmers are those who are influenced most by what experience has proven to be good and true. Thousands of seed sowers in all sections of the country sow Ferry's famous seeds year after year, and have the satisfaction of good harvests to justify their continued faith in the Ferry firm. They pay a few cents more at seed time, but realize many dollars in better crops at the harvest. The natural consequence of this confidence is ever increasing business. D. M. Ferry & Co. sent out last year more seeds than any other seed house in the world. The 1902 catalogue of this house is now ready and will be found a useful guide in selecting the choicest seeds for the farmer, the truck gardener and the flower gardener. It is sent free on request.
