

SIR THOMAS, LIFE SAVER

How Lipton Rescued Imperiled Spectators of Yacht Race.

HIS OWN LAUNCH NEARLY LOST.

In the Teeth of a Terrific Gale the Baronet Takes Four Women From Disabled Pleasure Boat—Assumes Command of the Craft, Whose Master Was Dazed by Accident.

Black skies streaked with flashes of lightning, a seething squall tearing boats from their moorings and sending a fleet of yachts, both steam and sail, driving to leeward until there were a crashing and splintering of spars and bulwarks, and in all of this Sir Thomas Lipton in a half swamped launch hastening to the rescue of imperiled women, was the scene of Sandy Hook following the second of the series of races for the America's cup, says the New York Herald.

In a terrific squall from the northwest that broke over the Sandy Hook anchorage the brigantine rigged steam yacht Allita, belonging to John H. Flagler, vice commodore of the Atlantic Yacht club, with Mrs. Mandelick, mother of Mrs. Flagler, and Miss McClenahan and two maids on board, was driven on to the big steam yacht Giralda, flagship of the Philadelphia Yacht club.

Bearing true to the whipping hurricane, the bowsprit of the Philadelphia yacht impaled the Allita at the bulwarks just aft the starboard gangway. There was a terrific crash as a huge hole was torn in the bulwarks, and the bowsprit of the Giralda was broken short off at the stem. Then as the yachts ground against each other like upper and lower millstones the rigging was torn from its fastening until the Giralda was decapitated and the starboard main rigging of the Allita threatened to go at any moment.

It was at this time that Sir Thomas appeared with his friends Jack Wilson and Colonel Nell to effect a needed rescue. There was no opportunity to get between the yachts, and minutes before the starboard companionway of the Allita had gone overboard the baronet shouted, "Come here, ladies," and Mrs. Mandelick and Miss McClenahan hastened to the footrail, where the willing hands of Sir Thomas and friends were uplifted to receive them. There was no gangway or side ladder, and in the vicious sea the women were helped one by one to seats safe though uncomfortable, because the launch had well nigh swamped before its arrival.

Safely back to the Erin the launch sped on, but Sir Thomas' practiced eye had noticed still more work to do. Signaling his big tug, the Cruiser, to up anchors and steam alongside, another launch, the Smoker, as she is nicknamed, was quickly filled with a dozen picked sailors, and, with the baronet, Colonel Nell and Mr. Wilson, went again to the entangled yachts.

Sir Thomas, seeing the panic of those on board, assumed command of the Allita, as Captain Ludlow, the aged sailing master, seemed dazed by the turn of affairs. The wreckage was cleared away, and in the teeth of the driving storm the big Cruiser sent a line aboard the yachts. After the Erin's crew had weighed the Allita's anchor the tug towed her stern first to a safe anchorage a quarter of a mile away.

This done, and well done, Sir Thomas hastened to the Giralda, which, besides losing her head gear, was tangled in a fish net which extended out far from the shore.

"Are you looking?" called out Sir Thomas from his launch. "What can I do to help you? Come on board of the Erin."

Before Commodore English of the Giralda or his party could answer Sir Thomas was alongside and on deck.

"I thought you were both going down at one time," he said. "My, but you are scored up!" as he gazed at the damage forward.

Commodore English asked only that the Cruiser stand by until they had sufficient steam to get away.

From Sir Thomas' own lips, when seen on board the Erin later, came a modest recital of his chivalry.

"I saw the Allita driving broadside down upon the Giralda, and as they came together," said he, "I feared that the bowsprit of the Philadelphia yacht would tear away the main rigging of Mr. Flagler's boat and the mainmast and maybe the foremast, with its heavy yards, would fall. Why, it might have killed the ladies!"

During the excitement the Earl and Countess of Shaftesbury, with the Hon. Charles Russell and other members of the Lipton party on the Erin, watched the exciting incident from the bridge of the big yacht. Commodore English, whose sentiments were assented to by his friends, said:

"Sir Thomas came on board and in the midst of the job made us forget our troubles. When the races are over he ought to be kept in this country. He is a wonder!" Mrs. Mandelick, with Miss McClenahan, said: "Yes, we had a very narrow escape. We owe everything to Sir Thomas. No one was injured."

Blesses Crowd in Railway Station. Fully 2,000 people gathered at the Grand Central station to say farewell to Right Rev. Bishop Colton upon his departure for Buffalo, says the New York Times. The crowd became so enthusiastic that at times the police were forced to keep it back. The young bishop yielded to the demands of the crowd as he stepped on the special car of the Empire State express and raised his hand in final benediction. The crowds knelt on the platform of the station and on the pavement, and scarcely a dry eye could be seen when the train pulled out.

THE LITERARY WORLD.

Mark Twain and His Namesake—Gossip About Authors.

(Special Correspondence.) Chicago, Sept. 1.—Mark Twain is going abroad for his wife's health, he says. This is a subterfuge. The real reason is explained by a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. He is trying to get away from "Mark Twain," his namesake.

When the St. Louis harbor boat was named Mark Twain as a compliment it was not foreseen that references to the boat in the daily papers from time to time would be cause for smiles. But when we read the headline, "Mark Twain In Need of Repairs," we comprehend at once the possibilities of future references to the harbor boat. We shall expect to see further startling statements in the St. Louis papers as long as the harbor boat floats upon our waters, such as "Mark Twain's boilers being blown out," "Accident to Mark Twain's pilot house," "Thanksgiving dinner on Mark Twain" or maybe a "Champagne supper on Mark Twain" and "Mark Twain jammed in ice," though we hope not.

A parody of Elinor Glyn's clever story, "The Reflections of Ambrosine" (Harper's), is appearing in the London Tatler under the title "The Conclusions of Bandoline." Here is a paragraph from the parody:

"A wonderful thing has happened. I am affianced to Mr. Menelaus Bung. He is very rich; he makes pigs of iron. Ah, what a talent! Who but an Englishman could make pigs of iron? It is a wonderful profession. This morning Great-Great called me to her and said 'Thou wilt do as I wish, my Bandoline, and wed this Bung?' 'Yes, madame,' I replied. 'I am not as the English miss, who is indelicate and thinks of loving her husband.'"

American travelers in England will be gainers by a new arrangement which makes it possible for the first time to visit Milton's cottage at Chalfont St. Giles and the graves of William Penn and Gray, the poet, all in one day. These three celebrated literary shrines are in picturesque Buckinghamshire, and quite near at hand, too, are the Burnham beeches, the quaint remains of the ancient forest which once covered this part of England and which are included in the newly arranged day trip.

First, Americans who take it will be carried to Stoke Poges, the quiet village near Windsor, in whose churchyard Gray wrote his "Elegy" and in whose place of worship he lies buried.

Stoke Poges churchyard, where Gray's "Elegy" was written.

and has his memorial. Milton's cottage at Chalfont St. Giles is that which the author of "Paradise Lost" got his Quaker friend, Ellwood, who lived near by, to rent for him so that he might be able to leave London, where the great plague was raging just then. When the poet came to St. Giles he brought with him the manuscript of his famous epic, which he asked Ellwood to take home, read and pass judgment upon. Of course the Quaker went into ecstasies over the work, but he remarked, "Thou hast said much here of 'Paradise Lost,' but what hast thou to say of 'Paradise Found?'" That little observation led to the composition of Milton's greatest work but one, for right there in the rustic cottage the poet sat him down and began work on "Paradise Regained," which he finished about a year afterward, though not at St. Giles.

Uncle Sam, though a prolific publisher, is not a painstaking one. He is careless about the indexing and arrangement of his volumes. Some idea of the work necessary to be done in compiling a history from any of his inchoate governmental reports may be gained from a statement made by Mr. Gilbert Holland Montague in connection with his "The Rise and Progress of the Standard Oil Company."

In order to gather data from one official report alone—the Hepburn report, made in 1879 by a committee of the New York legislature—Mr. Montague was obliged to read over 8,000 pages of closely printed questions and answers which make up the evidence taken by this committee. In several instances Mr. Montague was obliged to index hundreds of pages of a report before he could digest the evidence, counter evidence and refutation scattered throughout the examinations of witnesses before a committee. The first investigating committee which has carefully indexed, summarized and digested its findings was the industrial commission appointed in 1898 by the president, which investigated and reported on the Standard Oil company in 1900.

To Stop Feather Eating.

When the fowls get to picking the feathers of each other's neck, I take a piece of raw, fat salt pork—a piece with a good mind, so it will not come down in the dirt—and driving a nail through the rind, nail it to some part of the building in easy reach of the hens and let them work at it all they please. When this is gone, if they still continue to pick off the feathers, I give them another piece. There is something lacking in their food when they pick off and eat each other's feathers, and the raw, fat salt pork supplies the deficiency and stops feather eating. Josephine M. Davis in American Agriculturist.

Geographic Sculpture.

The idea of the Ordnance survey maps is to be improved upon by a piece of "geographic sculpture." Rail way lines, swamps, forests, everything will be shown in this model, which will be in sections, to admit of easy alteration when required. Duplicates of these sections will be sold at a cheap rate, so that professional and business men can have maps.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by Elk Drug Store.

Abscess.

W. H. Harrison, Cleveland, Miss., writes, Aug. 15, 1902: "I want to say a word of praise for Ballard's Snow Liniment. I stepped on a nail, which caused the cords in my leg to contract and an abscess to rise in my knee, and the doctor told me that I would have a stiff leg, so one day I went to J. F. Lord's drug store (who is now in Denver, Colo.) He recommended a bottle of Snow Liniment; I got a 50c size, and it cured my leg. It is the best liniment in the world.

Abscesses, with a few exceptions, are indicative of constipation or debility. They may, however, result from blows or from foreign bodies, introduced into the skin or flesh, such as splinters, thorns, etc. Elk Drug Store, Colfax.

A WORD TO FARM TOILERS.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

The Home Friend of the Farmer and His Family.

After the labors and toils of the summer time, and harvesting of crops in the early autumn, many of our farmers, their wives, daughters, and sons, find themselves in a condition of health demanding careful attention if suffering is to be avoided later on. Many experience kidney trouble in some form; with some the liver is torpid; there is liddleness, nausea, and vomiting, with loss of appetite and depression of spirits. Thousands who have been exposed to cold, damp winds and rains while toiling in the harvest fields, now feel the twinges of terrible rheumatism; others run down by worry, overwork, and irregular dieting, are tormented with the pangs of dyspepsia.

To the thousands of run down, sickly, and half dead men and women in farm homes we recommend with all honesty and confidence the worker's friend, Paine's Celery Compound, the only medicine that can quickly and fully restore strength to the weak body and vigor to the muscles. Paine's Celery Compound tones the stomach; it removes poisonous acids from the blood which cause rheumatism; it feeds the weak and diseased nerves and banishes neuralgic tortures; it purifies the blood and gives true vitality and life. The use of Paine's Celery Compound in autumn means the establishing of a perfect physical vigor to withstand the rigors of a severe winter.
