Growing Sheep For Wool and Mutton

The future of the sheep business in the west will be changed in a few years, says the Intermountain Farmer. In the range country in the past few years the sheep business has been one full of trouble for the sheep owners. They have had to run the gamut of all sorts of evils, from winter storms to the depredations of enemies who have killed both sheep and herders. The time is not far distant when all the large flocks of the plains will be known only to history. There are many reasons for this. A large number of settlers are coming in, such as small farmers and ranchmen from the country east of them, where the land is getting too high for them; water rights are being taken up, the two mile limit law is being put in force, and great tracts are being broken up and put to alfalfa and beets, and the already overcrowded condition of the range is becoming apparent through the lack of feed for the stock already there; the timber reserve laws have become a great menace to the open range sheep business, and all these, with the spread of irrigation, have a tendency to change the situation, and it is contended that it will be only a few years until sheep will be pastured instead of trailed, as is now the case. There is room for improvement in the western sheep husbandry, and with a change will come better sheep, and we believe the profits will not be cut down much in consequence of the change.

Veteran Sheepman.

The accompanying portrait, reproduced from American Sheep Breeder, presents an excellent likeness of Hon. Jesse M. Smith of Salt Lake City, Utah. Mr. Smith is the western vice president of the National Woolgrowers' association. He has been called "the father of the wool industry in Utah." Mr. Smith has been in the forefront of every advance movement for the upbuilding of the sheep and wool industry in Utah from the pioneer stock building period in the intermountain state down to the present time, always and everywhere a wise, conservative, able and courageous leader of the shepherd forces of his state.

HON. JESSE M. SMITH.

This year a new experiment has been tried by the farmers in the vicinity of Iowa City, says an Iowa City (Ia.) special to the Chicago Record-Herald. Several of them have shipped in what are called the Mexican sheep and have had them on feed during the winter months. The sheep that are usually fed in Iowa are taken off the ranches in Montana, Idaho and other northwestern states.

These western sheep after a three or six months' feed make a substantial gain and give a fair return for the money and time invested. But the Mexican sheep have one great advantage over these westerners which enables them to make for their owners a vastly greater profit.

The yearling Mexicans can be shipped in here, put on a six months' feed, and, being shipped into Chicago, will sell for lamb. The reason for this is that the Mexican sheep is the most delicately built of all the sheep family. Its bones are very small and finely formed and the flesh very tender. On the careful feed of corn, crushed coals and oat straw, which has been tried here during the last season, the sheep have made satisfactory gains, and the feeders have been well pleased with the result of their work.

Australian Wool Conditions.

Australian sheep growers say that all indications point to the London market being lightly supplied with wool in 1904. They claim that Australian markets are selling more wool direct to continental representatives than heretofore. Australian dock masters have made tremendous strides in increasing their average wool output within the past forty years. In 1861 the average fleece was only 3.74 pounds compared with 7.17 pounds in 1902. According to government figures, the number of sheep in Australia in 1891 was 106,419,751 and in 1902 had been cut down to 54,065,276 by reason of unfavorable climatic conditions covering a period of several years.

Wean Lambs Early.

The earlier the lambs are weaned, provided their systems are capable of digesting vegetable food, the more rapid is their progress. To allow the lamb to harass the ewe when it is well able to take care of itself is wrong. As soon as the pastures get hard and dry the lambs should be put on rape or second growth clover. The ewes will keep in good enough condition on less luxuriant pasturage.

Double Eggs.

Hens cannot lay two perfect eggs in one day because the hen's body is not capable of releasing sufficient carbonate of lime to furnish two perfect shells. The first growth of the egg in the hen is the yolk. When this reaches maturity it drops into a long membranous canal, known as the oviduct. As it travels through this canal it receives a coating of albumen, which is the white of the egg. As it approaches the mouth of the oviduct it receives a coating of lime, which constitutes the shell. With a full laying hen this operation occurs only every twenty-four hours. Once in awhile, however, due probably to stimulation and overfeeding, the ova, or yolks, are produced so rapidly that two of them drop into the oviduct together. These ova travel together along the passage and receive the white separately, but become inclosed in one shell, and when laid are commonly known as double yolked eggs. Such an egg is in reality a double egg, the white being duplicated as well as the yolk.

Sensitive Eggs.

"An egg in the process of hatching is remarkably sensitive to vibration," says an expert in the breeding of fowls in the Poultry Record. "The rumble of a train or the passage of a wagon along the street will spoil a whole incubator full of eggs if the faintest vibratory wave reaches the apparatus. Even such a little thing as the banging of a door in some other part of the house will destroy the chances of hatching out a brood where care has not been taken to place the incubator beyond the reach of such disturbances. A thunderstorm always gives breeders a scare, as thousands of eggs may be spoiled by a sudden heavy thunderclap. To sneeze or cough in the vicinity of the incubators will sometimes work a disastrous result."

How to Make a Good Face Wash.
A prominent beauty expert recommends women whose skin is fine in texture and easily roughened and irritated to use the following wash in place of soap and water on the face: Tincture of myrrh, five grams; rose water, 500 grams; tincture of benzoin, five grams; tincture of quillaia, sufficient for emulsion. This, he says, should be applied to the face with a piece of fine linen. The face should be dried with a circular, upward movement with a piece of fine, dry linen.

POPULAR OCEAN BEACH.

Many from the Interior Planning to Spend Their Vacation at the Sea Shore.

Hundreds from Eastern Oregon and Washington spent their vacation at North (Long) Beach, Washington, last summer, and it is safe to say that this popular resort of the North Pacific Coast will be visited by many more this year than ever within its history. The change from a high and dry interior altitude to the sea level is most beneficial.

The trip on the Willamette and Columbia rivers, out of Portland, is one long to be remembered, the usual heat of a summer afternoon being tempered by a gentle breeze freighted with the aroma of pine trees and seasoned with salt sea air. The scenery includes much that is beautiful. Leaving Portland on one of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's palatial river steamers, (the T. J. Porter being queen of river flyers) the excursionist is carried through its harbor where fly the flags of many nations. The miles on the Willamette river are quickly made, and, after saluting the government light-house, marking the junction of the two rivers, the boat swings into the Columbia for the trip down stream. The morning is clear (generally so from June until September), and a magnificent and inspiring sight meets the eye as the sweep around the bend is made—five snow-capped peaks, Mount Hood, Mount Adams, Mount Saint Helen, Mount Rainier and Mount Jefferson, looming into view—a sight worth traveling thousands of miles to see. On down the picturesque river, past villages, sawmills, fishing fleets, salmon canneries, perpendicular basaltic bluffs, and pretty side-hill farms, the boat pursues its way. The majestic sweep of the river is awe inspiring. Gradually the shores grow further apart and, scarcely realizing that the five hours have been consumed in making the trip, the boat steams alongside the wharf at Astoria.

One hour from Astoria, through the famous fishing waters of the Columbia, past scores of salmon traps and nets and as many white-winged fish boats, lands the passengers at Ilwaco, on Baker's Bay, where connection for beach points is made with trains of the Ilwaco Railway & Navigation Company, whose cars stand on the wharf awaiting the steamer. North Beach, where the surf bathing is unexcelled, at low tide is from 200 to 400 feet wide, twenty-three miles long and so compact that a carriage or wagon scarcely leaves a trace upon it. Scattered along the beach are hundreds of cottages and hotels in which summer life is an unceasing round of pleasure from the opening until the closing of the season. The much dreaded "Resort Mosquito" is unknown and no venomous snakes or insects are found. The thermometer rarely goes above 80 degrees in July or August, but light overcoats, fires morning and evening and blankets at night are comfortable during the season.

Rates for accommodations at North Beach points are reasonable and vary to suit the pocket. At European hotels and lodging houses rooms range from twenty-five cents to one dollar a day; at restaurants, meals run from twenty-five to fifty cents; and at the American-plan hotels, the charges range from one dollar a day to two dollars and upward.

Dozens of delightful side trips may be taken from the beach into a country of wild and picturesque beauty, quiet and secluded among hills and forest, with hunting and fishing in native haunts; to the United States Life Saving stations and lighthouses, cranberry farms, oyster beds, salmon fishing grounds and canneries.

For particulars about the trip to North Beach ask the nearest O. R. & N. agent, or send two cents in stamps to A. L. Craig, general passenger agent, Portland, or "Restful Recreation Reports," which tells all about the Columbia river summering places.

That Tired Feeling!

If you are languid, depressed and incapable for work, it indicates that your liver is out of order. Herbine will assist nature to throw off headaches, rheumatism and ailments akin to nervousness and restore the energies and vitality of sound and perfect health. J. J. Hubbard, Temple, Texas, writes, March 22, 1902: "I have used Herbine for the past two years. It has done me more good than all the doctors. When I feel bad and have that tired feeling, I take a dose of Herbine. It is the best medicine ever made for chills and fever." 50 cts a bottle. Sold by Elk Drug Store, Colfax.
