ROADS OF SAND-CLAY.
 They Prove to Be Very Popular Where They Are Practicable.
 The following is from the latest report of the Virginia highway commissioner:
 It has been the object of this department in determining the class of road to build in the various counties to utilize as far as possible local material and to construct roads most suitable to the needs of the several communities, taking into consideration the available material, the travel on the road and the financial condition of the counties. The sand-clay construction has proved very popular in the localities where it is practicable, and I hope that the roads built in this manner in the eastern and southern portions of the state will demonstrate that the roads in those sections may be greatly improved at moderate cost.
 It is very important that some definite and positive legislation should be taken with reference to the maintenance of roads which are being constructed with state aid. It is certainly not understood by the people generally that gravel and macadam roads have to be maintained.
 Therefore proper attention has not been given to this subject by the county authorities. There should be a law requiring the board of supervisors or road boards to make special provision for the maintenance or upkeep of the roads which have been improved by state aid, which should be so framed that this department can require the counties applying for state aid to provide the necessary funds for maintenance.

TOWNSPEOPLE INTERESTED.
 Concerned in Condition of Roads as Much as Farmers.
 Not a few people make the mistake of supposing that the good roads question is one for farmers mainly. "The people who live in towns," declared the Illinois state engineer recently in a goods road speech at Peoria, "are concerned in the general condition of the roads as much as the people who live out of the towns on the highways." This is very true.
 While the farmers reap directly the most benefit, pleasure and convenience from good roads, the condition of the roads affects the towns vitally. The average community finds business extremely dull when the rural population is bottled up by mud.
 There are times in the United States in this dawning twentieth century when conditions obtain that existed in England 500 years ago; when produce needed in town for food rots a few miles out in the country because the farmer can't haul it.

THIS IS CERTAIN
 The Proof That Colfax Readers Cannot Deny.
 What could furnish stronger evidence of the efficiency of any remedy than the test of time? Thousands of people testify that Doan's Kidney Pills cure permanently.
 Home endorsement should prove undoubtedly the merit of this remedy. Years ago your friends and neighbors testified to the relief they had derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. They now confirm their testimonials. They say time has completed the test.
 J. Roberts, 312 Main street, Colfax, Wash., says: "I do not believe Doan's Kidney Pills can be equaled in curing kidney complaint. We have given this remedy a thorough trial and have found that it can be relied upon" (Statement given November 18, 1907.)
A WILLING CORROBORATION:
 Mr. Roberts was interviewed on April 19, 1910, and he said: "We still hold Doan's Kidney Pills in high esteem. The benefit this remedy brought in our family some years ago has been permanent."

A WORD TO THE WISE.
 When considering where to insure your grain remember:
 That the Northwestern Mutual Fire Association of Seattle has reduced the cost of insurance to the farmer almost one-half.
 That every loss sustained has been paid in cash without discount within 24 hours after adjustment.
 That it has eliminated the exorbitant short rate charge.
 That you pay nothing until the grain is ripe enough to burn, no matter how early you insure.
 That all policies cover until December 31st, unless grain is sold and insurance cancelled before.
 That upon sale of grain you surrender policy and receive equitable rebate.
 That all policies are non-assessable.
