HOME AND FARM.

Lawn, Garden and Orchard - Blood in Milk - Tail and Dwarf Peas - Rice Muffins - Prune Pudding.

Lawn Garden and Orchard.—The practice of scattering trees, shrubs and flowers over the lawn and door yard may have been justifiable a generation or two ago, but in this age those who incline to the beautiful, useful and progressive, group ornamental vegetation so as to give prominence to the landscape and so the taste and order may prevail, writes a contributor to the Indiana Farmer. When trees, shrubs, etc., are distributed without design over the lawn, then we have confusion of the whole. The center of the lawn needs to be given absolutely to grass. Groups of shrubby or ornamental trees will find their places on the corners, curves and edges of the lawn while clumps of shade-trees and vines occupy locations to suit the grade of the ground. Flowers we would collect together in masses by themselves. By this arrangement we have a perfect lawn, effective shade and flower garden all complete in themselves and all combining into resting features in the landscape. We would not stop here but would carry over right into the vegetable garden and do away with the ancient system of growing fruit trees, grapes, berry bushes, flower tubs, and all borders disseminated through the vegetable garden. Such tangled masses of varied vegetation not only indicates disorder, but reduces production with an immense amount of labor. Let us have the vegetable ground, the flower garden and the berry bushes, trees and all borders disseminated through the vegetable garden.
