

THOMAS NEILL, Publisher. WILL ALLEN, Associate Editor. TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION: ONE YEAR $2.00 SIX MONTHS ONLY $1.00

Letter From Washington, D. C. Special Correspondence to the Herald. WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10.—Senator Quay, who has returned from Pennsylvania, said today: "Yes, the democrats are claiming a great deal in Pennsylvania this year but they will be woefully disappointed when the returns are all in. My confidence in republican success is unshaken; it is founded on a rock, and when you have sand in addition to the necessary rock you are pretty well fixed, and that is just the condition of the republican party of Pennsylvania."

There is not a word of truth in the statements made in democratic papers that the republican senators had made a bargain with the democrats by which the federal election bill was to be shelved for the session in return for democratic promises of not obstructing or delaying the passage of the McKinley tariff bill. No such bargain has been made, and no such bargain will be made. The republicans have a large majority in the senate, and to intimate that they would allow the minority to dictate what should or should not be done by that body is simply to insult some of the brainiest members of the republican party. The tariff bill will certainly pass before adjournment, but no determination has yet been reached upon the federal election bill. It is thought another republican caucus will be called before it is finally decided what shall be done with it. One was held last night and several senators who had been credited as opposing it stated that they favored it.

The silver bill reported from the conference, and which is certain to become a law, like all other compromise measures fails to please the extreme gold standard men or the free coinage silver men, but it seems to suit the average man pretty well. It provides for the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver each month, which is said to be slightly in excess of the entire out put of all the mines in the United States.

Notwithstanding the extreme warm weather the president, since his return from Cape May Point Tuesday afternoon, has been working like a beaver.

After many delays Wyoming is a state, although the forty-fourth star will not be placed on the flag until the fourth of next July.

The senate by a majority of 3, refused to open the debate on the tariff bill this week. Five republicans voted with the democrats in this, because they were opposed to taking up the tariff bill until the silver question had been finally disposed of.

Representative Perkins, of Kansas, has introduced a bill in the House to establish public schools in the territory of New Mexico.

The House committee on invalid pensions has made a favorable report on the bill to pension army nurses. The bill only affects about 900 women, and it seems but tardy justice that these women, many of whom are destitute and in bad health, should be provided for by the government for the rest of their lives.

There is an ugly report floating around here to the effect that Representatives Hooker and Catchings, sitting members from Mississippi, had retained their seats by obtaining the influence of ex-Senator Bruce and Auditor Lynch, two Mississippi colored men now in office here. This may or may not be true, but certain it is that the House committee on elections has made a report against the republican contestants of Messrs. Hooker and Catchings' seats.

More than one hundred members of the House are absent from the city, and Speaker Reed has the hardest kind of a time to keep a quorum present, in fact he doesn't do it; the unimportant business is allowed to go through without having the question of "no quorum" raised, and when anything of importance is to be acted upon the members are drummed up until there is a quorum present.

The "original package" bill was, according to the programme of the committee on rules, to have been disposed of by the House this week, but the House got contrary and refused to adopt the resolution submitted to it by the committee on rules. This is the first time this session that the House has refused to follow the programme adopted by that committee.

Chairman Belden of the republican congressional campaign committee has sent an appeal to the republican editors of the country asking their aid in arousing public sentiment to the necessity of a federal election law.

The House has passed a bill containing the regulations adopted by the recent international maritime conference to prevent collisions at sea.

A Prominent Colfax Citizen Dead. COLFAX, July 15.—William J. Bramwell died this morning at his home in this city after an illness of three years. Mr. Bramwell was well known throughout the country and a highly respected citizen.

South Dakota Dislikes Cheyennes. WASHINGTON CITY, July 12.—Senator Pettigrew, who does not want the Cheyennes removed to his state, and Representative Carter, who wants to get them out of Montana, have had a conference, and have decided that they will compromise, join forces and remove the redskins to the Indian territory. There is philanthropy in this action, as the gentlemen claim that the Indians will receive the much-needed instruction immediately that they cannot get in Montana or South Dakota.

Suing A Railroad. SAN FRANCISCO, July 11.—A suit was filed in the superior court today against the Southern Pacific Railroad company by William W. Craig, who demands $50,000 for injuries which he received on April 30, while brakeman upon one of the defendant's trains which was thrown off the track near Castroville, in Monterey county, by reason of a misplaced switch.

Louis Ohnims and Elizabeth Ohnims sue to recover $50,000 for the death of their son Henry, who was employed as fireman on the same train and was killed in the wreck.

Louis Silberg, one of the passengers upon the Southern Pacific coast train which on May 30 was wrecked at the estuary on Oakland creek, has sued the company for $10,211 for injuries received.

Stole His Employer's Wife. CENTRALIA, July 12.—The particulars of a domestic scandal have just been brought to light, affecting Mr. G. W. Hamilton and his wife. Mr. Hamilton was the keeper of the Palace restaurant and had in his employ a young man named Evans, who acted in the dual capacity of clerk and head waiter. For a long time it had been noticed by the habitués of the house that there appeared to be an intimacy between the clerk and the mistress of the house, which boded no good to the peace of mind of too confiding husband. Mr. Hamilton discovered that the receipts of his establishment were gradually growing "small by degrees and beautifully less." At last his suspicions were aroused. About this time Mrs. Hamilton was suddenly seized with a desire to visit a sick friend in Kalama, and took the south-bound train, being furnished with the money by her husband. Shortly after this Evans also left. Then it was that bills began to pour in, and Hamilton discovered that he had been systematically robbed and dishonored by his wife. Recently he received a letter from her dated at Whatcom, saying that she would not return. She leaves three small children.

A Repulsive Sight. PORTLAND, Or., July 11.—The most affecting execution ever seen in the Northwest was witnessed in the hanging of Edward Gallagher at Vancouver this afternoon. The execution took place in a temporary courtyard, and was witnessed by fully 500 people. Such a scramble to see a man swung into eternity has seldom been seen. The enclosure was crowded, and the fence, sled on one side, windmill at the other end, and the roof over the scaffold fairly groaned with the weight of human freight. Not only men, but women and small boys and girls jostled each other to get a place of vantage, from which they could see. After the 200 tickets were collected the door was thrown open, and a promiscuous crowd thronged in. Gallagher believed he would be saved up to the last minute. He was led into the yard by the sheriff and deputy sheriff shortly before 1 o'clock, and with a little assistance ascended the scaffold. He refused spiritual consolation from the priest, saying he was not going to die, and he did not take any stock in church affairs, anyhow. "The soldiers will keep me," said he. The sight of the crowd seemed to daze him, and when he spoke his voice was scarcely above a whisper. He apologized for appearing before them in that form, and promised to do better some other time, an imbecile smile playing about his mouth when he spoke. Everything went smoothly until it came to fastening his hands and feet, and then he fought like a madman. He struck out with his arms, and kicked like a maniac, knocking down the sheriff and several of his assistants, and it required the combined efforts of seven men to overpower him.

A feeling of horror crept over the crowd, for such a struggle on the scaffold had never been seen by any present before. It was harrowing in the extreme. He was finally manacled and the cap and noose were adjusted, and, as the trap was sprung, he hissed the words, "I don't give a damn."

His neck was broken by the fall. Gallagher was hung for the murder of Louis Moran, an aged farmer who lived near the Cascade Locks, last November. He denied his guilt, claiming that a man by the name of "Snowball" did the shooting. "Snowball" has never been found, and it is believed that Gallagher killed him also. While he was not insane, he was a moral idiot. As Gallagher was well acquainted with the soldiers of the barracks, it was believed that a conspiracy was on foot to rescue him, but the sheriff was well prepared.

Stolen Money Recovered. JAMESTOWN, N. D., July 12.—On the night of June 13 last, a Northern Pacific train was boarded near New Salem, N. D., by two masked men, who terrorized the men and got away with several pouches of registered mail matter. One of the robbers was afterwards captured. The postal authorities probably know by this time the amount they secured. The published estimate of $5,000 or $6,000 as the amount is but a rude guess. It is believed that the robbers got away with about $5,000. The postal inspectors have searched over the ground where they caught the robber. They found in torn bits and ragged pieces a large amount of currency, including one bill of $1,000. There were found a number of $10 and $20 bills, more or less mutilated. A whole bundle had been dropped in one place, and in the robbers' haste was not securely tied. Coyotes or gophers had torn and separated the money, and the wind had scattered it. The amount recovered the inspector will not disclose, but it runs into the thousands.

Almost A Calamity. JANESVILLE, Wis., July 12.—One hundred passengers thundered toward death on the Chicago & Northwestern through express north of this city today over switches shut barely in time to keep the train from destruction. Along the track the train flew, while other trains were rushed into sidetracks and out of danger by the frightened train men. On the floor of the locomotive cab lay Engineer Steve Hotelling, a man of massive build, powerless in the grasp of the maniac. The insane man brandished a wrench, which he had clutched from the engineer's tool box. Both his arms were in the grasp of the almost despairing man beneath him, but the men on the depot platform at Climax, one of the towns through which the train passed, could see that he had nearly freed himself, and within another moment, unless help came, the murderous blow of the wrench would fall. The maniac was Engineer Hotelling's fireman, C. L. Hastings. Near Watertown he stepped from the cab to the tender to coal up. He did not return, and Engineer Hotelling reached back from his seat, pulled aside the cab curtain and looked out. As the curtain moved aside Hastings bounded in from the tender, clutched the engineer about the neck and threw him headlong to the swaying foot board. There the two struggled as the train dashed on under a full head of steam. At one time the engineer all but dropped to the rail beneath the engine, which left without fresh fuel, was slowly losing steam, but still rushed on at a rate that could mean nothing less than a fearful tragedy at the first switch left unturned. As the train swept past Climax without stopping the passengers and train crew realized that something was wrong and a party hurried forward. Writting and struggling among the blocks of coal on the tender they saw a maniac and engineer. Hastings was overpowered and taken to the baggage car. A moment afterward he fainted. Consciousness did not return till two hours later. The intensely hot weather, made more trying by the temperature of the cab, is given as the cause of his insanity, and there are fears that he cannot recover.

A Torch In the Sea. PORT TOWNSEND, July 12.—The report that Mount Bogoslov, Alaska, is in a state of eruption is verified by officers and passengers on the steamer Arago. The steamer left Umanaska July 3, and at that time huge volumes of steam and smoke could be seen issuing from the volcano, while at night a pillar of fire thousands of feet in height was discernible for miles.

Bogoslov is on Oumnak island, and according to Indian tradition rose from the sea in 1796. Government surveyors give the height of the mountain at 1,169 feet, but recent surveys show that the mountain peak is but 884 feet above the water line. The volcano first began to emit fire and smoke about two months ago, the eruption following a violent earthquake. Bogoslov has been in a state of activity ever since, and Professor Elliott of the Smithsonian Institution, now at Umanaska, so it is said by those on the Arago, has personally visited the island on which the volcano is situated and made an investigation.

Oumnak is about forty miles distant from the volcano, and Oumnak island is nearly twelve miles from the nearest point of Umanaska island, and snow on the mountains in the neighborhood has been turned gray by ashes. In walking through the grass a pedestrian gets covered with ashes believed to come from the volcano. As the island upon which the volcano is situated is uninhabited, do damage will result. The sight is a grand one, and mariners hope that the activity will continue, as it serves as a lighthouse in guiding vessels through Oumnak pass. Mount Shishaldin, on Anhalgo island, was beginning to show signs of approaching activity when the Arago sailed. Steam and smoke have been seen to issue from the center, and fire and lava were daily expected to be seen issuing from the mouth. Shishaldin is 5,952 feet in height and rises gradually to the summit. It is perpetually covered with snow, and with the peak can be seen at sea for a distance of ninety miles. If this volcano should become active the sight would be one of unequal grandeur, and the eruption would be a fine subject for scientific investigation.

Arid Lands. WASHINGTON, July 14.—Judge Carey, delegate from Wyoming, has introduced, at the request of his constituents, a bill providing for the segregation of irrigable lands of the arid region and granting them to the several states and territories. The bill has in its aim the settlement of the much discussed question. In its provisions the secretary of the interior is directed by means of geological surveys to make examinations and surveys of that portion of the United States where agriculture is carried on by means of irrigation sufficient to enable him to designate most suitable areas for irrigation and to determine the location of reservoirs, ditches and canals, by means of which reclamation is to be accomplished. The director of geological surveys is to begin his examination of areas where irrigation has the greatest importance. He is to make a report each year. When the secretary of the interior receives the report of the director he is to transmit to the governor of each state where a survey is being prosecuted an accurate description of the lands located for irrigation within the boundary of the state, and at the request of a governor the president is to cause a patent to be issued to the state, on the issue of which title to the lands is to be vested in the state, subject to the disposal of its legislature, under certain conditions. These conditions are that the land shall be disposed of to actual settlers and cultivators, and not to exceed 160 acres to each individual, the maximum price to be $10 per acre. The proceeds of the sale of the lands are to constitute a fund to pay the expenses of the supervisor of the irrigation system of the state, for the construction of works, to be built and owned by the state. Land is not to be sold or disposed of until the proper state authorities shall have provided for the construction of suitable reservoirs, ditches or other works necessary for complete and proper reclamation by the issue of bonds or by contract. The state is to hold title to the lands until canals and other works for supplying water have been satisfactorily completed and the land subjected to cultivation. Any failure to comply with the provisions of the act governing the disposal is to cause the lands to revert to the United States, and all lands not reclaimed within twenty years from the date of the grant from the United States to the state are to revert to the federal government.

Sued The Northern Pacific. SEATTLE, Wash., July 17.—In the superior court today Louis Garat, Charles H. Florida and George R. Clark brought three suits against the Northern Pacific railroad company, each for $25,000 damages for ejectment from a train. The complaint in each case alleges that the plaintiff purchased in Seattle on July 14 a ticket to Pasco, and that the conductor took up their tickets and afterward put them off the train within forty miles of Seattle. The plaintiffs allege that they had important business at Pasco, and were damaged to the amounts sued for by the failure to meet them. The tickets were not stamped by the agent who sold them.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself. It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number. Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form, and pay for one dollar to one dollar and a half for. Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel. The ringing blarney which has been struck on the gateway of popular favor, has resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read and best-published of its kind in the world. For full descriptive circulars, address LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, Philadelphia $3.00 per year. 25 cts. single number. The publisher of this paper will receive your subscription.
