The action of the democratic convention has proven conclusively that the leaders of that party no longer consider the silver question a live issue. The silver plank was inserted only after the hardest kind of a battle, and will be used to attempt to hold the west in line as against the anti-expansion argument in the east. The democrats of the west are expansionists, and those of the east are opposed to the "16 to 1" propoganda. The result is as inevitable as it will be disastrous to Bryan's hopes.

The question of the variety of wheat to make the best and surest yield is one in which the Palouse farmer is vitally interested, and one upon which depends much of the future prosperity of this region. Two years ago David Clark sent to Michigan for a small quantity of seed wheat, getting a cross of the Mediterranean and Diehl. From this small start Mr. Clark now has his third crop, consisting of about fifty acres, of the handsomest stand of wheat we have ever seen, east or west. It stands thickly and evenly on the ground, and will undoubtedly make a magnificent yield, as it has done the previous two seasons. The wheat grows equally well on the high hills or the low flats, making a good crop on the latter where other wheat was an entire failure. It also has the advantage of being very early, and not being affected by rust. The berry greatly resembles Blue Stem, and is highly commended by the millers. We believe Mr. Clark has struck the proper thing in this wheat, and its harvest will be watched with deep interest.

China's Future.
The capture of the Taku forts, at the mouth of the Pei Ho river, and the impending occupation of Peking, no more necessarily implies the partition of China than did the taking of the Taku forts and the occupation of Peking by an army of English and French troops in 1860, says the Oregonian. So far as the maintenance of order in China and the fulfillment of treaties and concessions are concerned, the interests of all the western powers, including those of Russia, are to-day identical. Until the Trans-Siberian Railway shall have been completed, Russia cannot possibly become the preponderant military power in the far east, with the railway needing three years for completion, Russia will not attempt the premature accomplishment of its alleged designs by an exclusive military occupation of Peking, for such a course would be sure to provoke the opposition of Germany, Great Britain the United States and Japan. Russia needs every man and every available ship at her disposal to defend herself against a probable invasion by the Japanese of Corea and Manchuria. She will not commit the blunder under these circumstances of doing anything to estrange all the western powers, but will content herself with co-operating with all the foreign powers interested in China, including Japan, to compel the court of Peking to protect Christian missionaries, to pay damages for injuries already wrought, and to repress at once the outrages committed by the Boxers. Should the powers find the Empress Dowager either unable or unwilling to restore order, measures will be taken to establish a more efficient government at Peking. This could be easily done by forcing the Empress Dowager into retirement, and reinstating the Emperor in full authority as the head of the progressive party of China.

Great Britain really to-day governs Egypt under the Khedive, and the powers could easily govern China under some imperial puppet. After the war with Japan, there sprang up a "young China" reform party, whose leader, Kang Yu Wei, established a Chinese reform paper. The young Emperor, Kwang Su, became a convert to the ideas of this reform party, and in 1898 issued a series of imperial edicts embodying a number of important reforms. Then the Empress Dowager, who had ruled China during Kwang Su's minority, emerged from her retirement and seized the reins of power. The reform edicts were annulled, and Kang Yu Wei fled to save his life, while some of his companions were beheaded. Last January it was reported that a 9-year-old boy, son of Prince Tuan, the present head of the foreign office, had been made heir-apparent to the throne, and that Kwang Su would formally abdicate the throne. Kwang Su is alive, and so far as is known has never formally abdicated his throne, while his old tutor, Wong Tung Ho, has sent a message to the powers urging them to overthrow the Empress Dowager and reinstate the Emperor, to declare a joint protectorate over China, and rule the country through Kwang Su. With the Emperor again in power at the head of the Chinese reform party, and supported by the powers, China might be Europeanized and taught how to save herself, even as Japan was saved.
