

HAY FEVER

"Having used Peruna for catarrh and hay fever, I can recommend it to all who are suffering with the above diseases. I am happy to be able to say it has helped me wonderfully."
—Mayme E. Smith.

MISS MAYME SMITH.

441 East Mound Street Columbus, Ohio
HAY FEVER is endemic catarrh. It is caused by some irritating substance in the atmosphere during the late summer months. It is generally thought that the pollen of certain weeds and flowers is the cause of it.

Change of locality seems to be the only rational cure. The use of Peruna, however, stimulates the nervous system to resist the effects of the poisonous emanations and sometimes carries the victim through the hay fever season without an attack of the disease.

A large number of people rely upon Peruna for this purpose. Those who do not find it convenient to change their location to avoid Hay Fever would do well to give Peruna a trial. It has proven of priceless value to many people.

Terrible Bermuda Gale.
Hamilton, Bermuda, Sept. 11.—Great damage has been done by a gale that has been raging over the island for the past few days. The wind is blowing at the rate of seventy miles an hour and many buildings on the outskirts of the city have been damaged. Fifty small craft have been wrecked and two lives are reported lost.

ROOSEVELT A POPULAR HERO.

No Foreigner Has Ever So Won the French Heart as Has He. Of our modern Presidents only two—Lincoln and Grant—ever attracted French attention—and the circumstance of war made them known. For Mr. Roosevelt the link has flowed in torrents. Not only do the newspapers relate his exploits—whether he kills a bear or goes down in a submarine boat—but they are also avid of his opinions, and interviews with him (unfortunately, not always true) are displayed with great prominence on the first pages of the big dailies.

Pictures of Mr. Roosevelt as a rough rider, as a cowboy, or talking from the tall end of a Pullman, confront you everywhere in the European press. Nor should I like to say how many books have been written about him. "Roosevelt Intime," a work of three hundred pages, in which the story of his forceful life is graphically told, has reached all the reading homes of France; and his own books—notably "La Vie Intense"—have followed. I know of no other book that has had so wide an influence in latter days. Young France, especially, is interested in the sudden and formidable upbuilding of her sister republic; and the cause of this growth she has sought, wisely enough, in Mr. Roosevelt's books, in those on the Far West, and especially in the one whose title I have quoted in French, "The Strenuous Life." So it comes to pass that two American writers are pretty close to the French schoolboy's heart—Mr. Roosevelt and their old, familiar friend, "Mark Twain." In other words, the President is known in France. It did not require the epoch-making treaty of peace, which the world owes to him, to make him one of the great figures of contemporary history.

When anything goes wrong in French public affairs, the publicists knock the government about the ears with that better President overseas. Here is a good illustration, for example: "If a man such as President Roosevelt came to live among us for three months as a private citizen, having to undergo all those accidental relations with the administration which daily life imposes on us, he would quickly refuse to believe in the existence of a republic in France, and would return to his country convinced that we are incapable of ever possessing real liberty."

In such words Monsieur Emile Danthesse expresses at once his opinion of Mr. Roosevelt and his patriotic discontent. Indeed, these are pleasant words in France for an American; go where he will, he hears a good word of his President, and now and then the complimentary "If we had such a man!" And, when men get together in Paris—for what purpose it does not seem to matter greatly—the first thing they do is to send a message of some sort to the White House. The other day it was a congress of physicians, studying tuberculosis; they telegraphed the "expression of their respectful and cordially sympathetic sentiments," and then they set about their business. A like preliminary opened the Peace Congress at Luzerne.—Success Magazine.

VENISON AND CRANBERRIES.

Nature in Canada Provides Both the Juley Meat and Proper Sauce. "Never had such luck in my life. Got all the deer the law allows the first day. Shot a big moose that night by the light of the campfire within twenty-five yards of the hut. Had all the hares and partridges we wanted to eat, brought home a wolf skin and three minks, and gathered three bags of the nicest cranberries you ever saw."

This was the cheerful statement made by a business man who always takes his holidays in the shooting season, and this year spent his fortnight on the Desert River, above Mont Cerf, Canada.

From all accounts this has been a record season for deer everywhere. In many cases parties have returned from the woods much earlier than they had intended, because they had made their bags of game.

There were not many, though, who had the foresight to pick and take home the berries for sauce. The Indians believed that there was a kind of providence in the connection existing between partridge and beach nuts, wild geese and wild celery, black bear and ripe fruit, and saw that there was a reuniting of these things at meal times.

Some unfortunate men have had the good luck to eat a pot roast of venison prepared by thoroughly cooking it in a tightly covered iron pot and served with a plentiful supply of cranberry sauce boiled with sugar. Those who have gone prepared to make free use of the berry on their hunting expeditions, and occasionally bring home a bagful or two.—Washington Post.

A Budding Genius.

"All the boys are dolls" well, 'cept James," said the old man. "And what's James a-doin' of?" "Well, he's jest a-loafin' round, an' tryin' to be one o' these here incomprehensible geniuses."—Atlanta Constitution.

Something Doing at an Inquest. "It was accidental death evidently, but whether he did it on purpose I don't know." Thus a foreman delivered himself at an inquest at Ashchurch.—London Chronicle.

Even bald-headed barbers insist on telling hair-raising stories.

Consideration for others is a good brand of charity.

A MODEST ARTIST.

The art of photography as practiced with a small camera by amateurs was late in coming to Berryville, and for more than a year young "Gid" Sawyer was the only person in the village who had a camera. When his first film was sent to the nearest city to be developed and a set of prints made from it, Berryville was deeply stirred, for the dozen snap shots had been made with a view of obtaining an impression of the landmarks of Berryville, human and otherwise.

When the package arrived, Gid was obliged to open it in the presence of half the inhabitants, as word spread from the postoffice that "Gid's pictures" had come, and he happened to be a few minutes late for the mail.

Mr. Warren was in the best position, close to Gid, and he afterward described the result to his wife. "I guess there aren't many that have much better luck than Gid the first try," he said, loyally. "There were only three blanks in that dozen, and they wa'n't his fault. It was something the matter with the sun. He explained to me just how the sun acted, but I can't exactly tell it off to you.

"Then there were a couple that were sort of blurry, owing to his having neglected to turn some kind of a crank; but he says the machine ought not to be arranged that way, and I could see myself that one o' these automatic turners would be a great improvement. Gid says they'll come to 'em in time, when folks really demand 'em.

"Well, now, the other seven were as interesting as anything you ever saw. There was the one he took of Deacon Marston. He got every bit of him excepting just the very top of his head, and that's bald, anyway; and the Orthodox church he got from halfway up the steeple down to the middle o' the front door, and I tell you it's complete—looks exactly the way it does in real life.

"Then the three he took of the minister's family are remarkable. Excepting for a find of a whitish spot that comes over Mr. Becket's nose and upper lip, he looks just as if he was in the pulpit; and the one of Miss Becket, taken side view against the end of the house, is fine; you can see every shingle plain as day. The one of little Eddy is a perfect likeness. He was looking down, so you can't actually see his features, but his hair's there, and his little jumper and all. I hear they're real gratified to have it.

"The one of the monument was a perfect success, now I tell you. Gid got all the lettering on the bottom of it, so you can read it with a magnifying glass, and he got a splendid copy of the grass, taken so it looks as tall as rushes. As John Maryin and I said, coming home, we've got to see to having it cut pretty soon.

"The whole of the monument? Oh, no! Gid says he didn't lay out to take that, as he remarked we all know just how tall it is.

"Then the one he took of the corner from the Baptist steps—that's an interesting view as ever I saw. Every roof is there, and you'd never know there was a house under one o' 'em, just roofs and the top of squire's telephone pole and the flagstaff. I never supposed things looked like that from the Baptist steps before, and they don't seem to, but photography shows things up just as they are, without regard, Gid says.

"He's going to take the next dozen all interiors, he says, with a few portraits, and he spoke of wanting ours, mother. I guess if he gets to it we shall have something to send our boy out West that'll remind him of home! And with it all Gid is jest as modest as anybody need wish to see him."

WONDERFUL GERANIUMS.

Why California Should Beat the World on Common Flowers. It is a singular fact that we Californians neglect the geranium, says a writer in the Garden Magazine. Easterners envy us because the geraniums grow up to the second story of a house and visitors say that a five-foot hedge of red geraniums is one of the most brilliant sights on earth. Why don't we have more hedges like this? And why don't we have more and better geraniums everywhere instead of coddling rare plants that are not adapted to our conditions? No other plant, native or foreign, seems to be so perfectly at home with us as the much-neglected geranium.

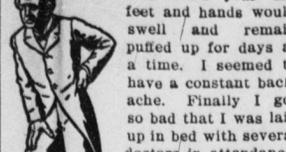

Any one who explores our foothills and canyons may find deserted cabins around which are growing many varieties of geraniums, in nearly all shades of color, from white to carmine, with no hand near to till, with no moisture except the annual rainfall, yet seeming to thrive fully as well as the average native plant.

The geranium is valuable for its foliage effect alone for massing in our drier and more barren spots—yet the geranium with us, as everywhere, is distinctly a flowering plant, more so by far than the canna and a host of other well-known "bedders." This neglect is due, no doubt, to the ease with which it can be grown.

The novelty of being able to grow geraniums out of doors every month of the year appeals very strongly to the newcomer, who has known it only as a much-coddled pot plant, after he sees the possibilities of our climate, something less common—something impossible of successful growth in his eastern home—claims his attention to the complete neglect of the geranium.

SICK FOR TEN YEARS.

Constant Backache, Dropsy, and Severe Bladder Trouble. Fred W. Harris, of Chestnut St., Jefferson, Ohio, says: "For over ten years I suffered from kidney disease.

The third year my feet and hands would swell and remain puffed up for days at a time. I seemed to have a constant backache. Finally I got so bad that I was laid up in bed with several doctors in attendance. I thought surely I would die. I changed medicine and began using Doan's Kidney Pills when I was still in bed. The relief I found was so great that I kept on until I had taken about ten boxes. The kidney secretions became natural and after years of misery I was cured. I have increased in weight, and show no symptoms of my former trouble."

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. F. Gerald Blattner, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "Your Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, always obtaining the desired results."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."
