RAILROAD EXPERIMENT FARMS

Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railroad Company Establishing Six

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer contains the following account of the work of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railroad company in establishing experimental farms in the state of Washington: "Six experimental farms are to be established and operated in the state of Washington by the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway Company. A similar number of stations will be distributed through the agricultural districts of Idaho and Montana, crossed by the new line of railroad. The farms are to contain ten acres each and be made self-supporting in every respect. The purpose is to demonstrate to settlers, homeseekers, tourists and investors that there are financial possibilities in irrigation, forestry, orcharding and dairying on small farms carved from the tracts heretofore considered worthless because of distance from transportation and lack of soil moisture. "The proposed plan of the railway company is to conduct the farming operations in the most modern manner possible. Every up-to-date method is to be adopted and the work carried on along scientific lines. The stations will demonstrate the best methods of intensified farming, show the benefits of crop rotation and educate the people on the latest approved schemes for conserving of soil moisture. As the country is to be opened through the completion of that road is practically new to agriculturists, the stations will be maintained in sections where the greatest good can be accomplished by exhibiting the various products of the farms and giving practical instructions on how to get profitable results. "Railroads are constructed for commercial purposes and made to pass through sections of country that promise future business. They form the basis of industrial development. Without transportation facilities the farming communities would not become prosperous. Many of the products of diversified agriculture pay profits when the fields of supply are located within the ten-mile limit of a transportation station. The railroads become the pioneers in developing the natural resources. They establish the spirit of co-operation between producers and carriers and enable the growers to get their products on the best markets, at the right time and in proper condition. "There is a demand for more information on how to succeed on small farms. Men and women read of wonderful crops being taken from orchards, gardens and vineyards of small dimensions and doubt the truthfulness of the stories. They have seen old farms abandoned because the land did not produce sufficient income to offer inducements for the young men to remain on the land and attempt to keep up with the requirements of the age. They have noted the failure of many apparently industrious families in harvesting success from large tracts of land. Now comes the story of wealth and independence being attained through the cultivation of one-tenth the area of former unsuccessful farms. The people want to see the object lessons, and the railroad company is doing the proper thing when it proposes to operate those small experimental farms."

Waterproofing Matches.

Perhaps some of your readers would be interested to know that I have found a simple, inexpensive way to waterproof matches, writes a correspondent to the Scientific American. Into some melted paraffin (care being taken that it was as cool as possible) I dipped a few ordinary parlor matches. After withdrawing them and allowing them to cool it was found that they scratched almost as easily as before being coated with the wax. Several were held under water for six or seven hours and all of them lighted as easily as before immersion. When the match is scratched the paraffine is first rubbed off and the match lights in the usual way. Matches treated as above would be very useful on camping or canoeing trips, as they do not absorb moisture. Since more rubbing is required to light them than the ordinary match, it would be practically impossible to set them on fire by accidental dropping.

RAILROAD MAKES BLUNDER

Fails to Provide Excursion Trains To Carry Visitors Home Saturday Night

Through a blunder of some one connected with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company a lot of the visitors to Pullman Saturday were compelled to stay over night. The train for Colfax, which had been advertised to wait until after the lecture, left at 8:15 and a lot of Colfaxites were compelled to remain in town until the next morning, while Professor Barry secured automobiles and carriages and sent others to Colfax about midnight.

Professor Barry had been asked by the railroad people to announce from the lecture platform that the train for Moscow would stop at the foot of the hill and was amazed to see the train whiz by without even hesitating. These people were required to remain in Pullman until Sunday morning on secure livery rigs and automobiles and return to their homes.

Professor Barry, head of the entertainment committee of Washington State College said: "I want the people to understand it was not the fault of the college that this blunder occurred. Mr. Skey, travelling passenger agent of the O. R. & N., advertised that trains would carry visitors to both Moscow and Colfax after the lecture. He requested me to publicly announce that the Moscow people could stop at the foot of the hill and the train would stop for them. I paid the expenses of some of these people at the hotels and paid for automobiles to take some of them home. I do not mind the expense so much so much as I regret the blunder which will be blamed to the college and will interfere in the future with getting people to come here for these entertainments on the promise of having excursion trains to take them home at night.

"I called up the chief train dispatcher at Spokane and he acknowledged the fault lay with the railroad people and that some one had blundered, but that was little comfort after midnight with nearly one hundred people to be cared for. He said he could not bring the train back from Moscow for the crew would have been out more than 16 hours allowed by the law. He could not bring the train back from Colfax, for it was well on the way toward Tekoa. A number of the people including Judge Canfield, of Colfax, whom I sent home in an automobile, offered to assist us in getting back from the railroad company the money expended for caring for the people."

FAILED TO APPRECIATE HONOR.

Uncle Winfield Still Thinks Artist Played Mean Trick.

Uncle Winfield, the worthy old sexton of the brick church on the corner, and one of the most amiable and lovable of men, came home from a stroll one day in a high state of pleasurable excitement. "A little while ago," he said, "a slim, long-haired fellow stopped me on the street, and asked me if I had any objection to his sketching me. He said he was an artist, and was illustrating a story for a pictorial publication, and my face had so much 'character' in it that he'd like to make what he called a 'study' of it, and use it in the story. "I told him to go ahead. He opened up a little camp-stool, stuck up a three-cornered frame in front of him, put a sheet of cardboard on it, and in five minutes he made a picture that looked exactly like me. I saw it." "Did he try to get you to buy it?" asked Uncle Winfield's wife, suspiciously. "No, no," he answered. "He thanked me, and more than that, he gave me a silver dollar. Said it was worth that to him. Here's the dollar. It's the best pay I ever got for five minutes of my time." But his wife was still unconvinced. "It may be all right," she said, "but he'll come back at you in some way, at least $250 from her while he had charge of her business at Lewiston."

It is thought that Haggard will soon be captured. He does not seem to have sense enough to keep out of trouble or to escape after committing a crime. Although he has a criminal record in the three northwestern states of the nation, he prefers to remain here and appears to make little effort to escape after committing a crime. When he was in jail at Colfax he was wanted in half a dozen places in Oregon for various crimes and it was shown that he had served jail sentences in Portland and a short term in the Oregon penitentiary. If he is caught again he will probably get a life sentence under the confirmed criminal law, which makes a second conviction on a felony charge a life sentence if the judge so sees fit. Haggard is a good printer, a splendid waiter and a general "handyman," but his criminal propensities seem to control him and he will probably spend the greater part of his remaining years behind prison walls.

OAT STRAW GOOD FEED

B. T. Byrns Asserts it is Too Valuable to Waste

B. T. Byrns gives it as his opinion that oat straw is far too valuable to be wasted. In addition to his large farm south of town Mr. Byrns has wintered 25 young horses, feeding them silage and oat straw. To begin with Mr. Byrns erected a large barn, 68x80, and made a straw bin inside 28x40. The barn is so constructed that the machine put the oat straw in the barn. To this straw the horses had free access. In addition to oat straw Mr. Byrns gave each horse 40 pounds of corn silage, divided into two feeds each day. On the farm is a silo with a capacity of 75 tons. One hundred acres were planted to oats that averaged from 65 to 70 bushels per acre, and at least half of this straw is yet unused. The silo on the farm is 14x30, and the estimated cost of filling it with corn silage was last year was about $1 per ton. Altogether Mr. Byrns put up on his various farms last season 175 tons of silage.—Moscow Mirror.

Washington State College Trails Idaho's Banner in the Dust, Edmundson Beaten

Saturday, May 1, was a glorious day for Washington State College athletes and the big school, which has led the northwest in almost everything else, has advanced to the head of the column in athletics. For the first time in its history the college holds northwest records in athletics and the wonderful record of making three new records and tying two old records in two hours, will probably never be equalled. W. S. C. has developed two stars who will shine in the sporting firmament of college athletics for many seasons, it is believed. Clarence Cool, the great distance runner of Pullman, made two new northwest college records and J. W. Nelson, the new wonder short distance runner, made one new record for the northwest and tied another. Edmundson, Idaho's idol, who was thought to be invincible was defeated overwhelmingly by Nelson in a special quarter mile sprint, in which Nelson made a new northwest record, lowering the time of Williams, the Oregon wonder, by two-fifths of a second.

Moscow people lost heavily on this race. So confident were the Moscow people that Edmundson was invincible that they offered big odds, some of the more enthusiastic offering five to one on Edmundson. A considerable amount of this money was taken by Pullman people, but there were but few who had enough nerve or confidence in Nelson, who is admittedly a star, but his ability was not generally realized. Nelson also tied the northwest record for the 100-yard dash, equaling the records held by Dan Kelly, the "One Year's Wonder" and Will Martin, the great Whitman sprinter, of 9 4/5 seconds.

Clarence Cool, the great distance runner of whom Pullman people are justly proud, made two new records for the northwest, making the mile in four minutes, 31 and 2-5 seconds, beating the best previous record by 3-5 of a second. He broke the northwest record for two miles by the remarkable time of 10.22, the best previous record being 10.32.

Good Place to Be Born In.

In the German town of Klingenberg, near Aschaffenberg (Bavaria), in addition to having no rates to pay for the upkeep of the town, those actually born in the parish receive from the municipality a sum of $60. This sum is invested regularly at say 3 per cent, would entitle the owner to receive about $7,300 at the age of 60—a very handsome old age pension. Were it not necessary that the inhabitants should prove birth in the parish before becoming entitled to this payment the popularity of Klingenberg as a place of residence would doubtless be enormous.—Westminster Gazette.
