First Regiment W. S. Corps of Cadets—Largest Flag in the World

The Maker of Big Flag Honored

In appreciation of her efforts at giving the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition the large American flag which was conspicuously displayed over the platform of the natural theater at the opening day exercises of the fair, a large photograph of the flag taken on that day has been sent to Mrs. Pauline Mitchell of Pullman, this state. The photograph is suitably engraved and bears the signature of President J. E. Chilberg, Director-General I. A. Nadeau, Chairman Josiah Collins and Director L. W. Buckley of the ceremonies committee. Mrs. Mitchell, who is the wife of Capt. Harry Mitchell, of the Fourth Field Artillery, U. S. A., military director at the Washington State College, made the big flag especially for use at the opening day ceremonies and later presented it to the state college, where it floats from a great flagstaff over the college campus. Mrs. Mitchell is a native Washingtonian, having been born at Vancouver barracks, while her father, an army officer, was stationed there. The flag is the largest one ever unfurled in this country, being thirty-nine feet wide and 110 feet long.—Seattle Times.

ELEPHANT STOPS TRAIN

Pulls Signal Which Halts Fourteen Passenger Coaches at 3 A. M.

Taking hold of the bell rope on the North Coast Limited train, "Mike," an elephant which spent last week in Tacoma, gave the signal which brought the big train of fourteen coaches to a dead stop this side of Napavine at 3 a. m. this morning.

For a few moments following the stop a wave of excitement passed over the train crew and passengers. The spot was a lonely portion of the road, and as the mystery for the order to stop could not be run down, a fear ran through many that an attempt was on to loot the train. The moment the train stopped a brakeman leaped off with a lantern which he planted several hundred feet behind the train, while Conductor Young stormed from coach to coach to find out what was wrong. Engineer Payne and the firemen both declared three sharp, preemptory pulls of the bell rope had been made.

Finally, while nervous passengers were seeing visions of riding robbers sweeping down upon the train from the dark landscape, three additional jerks were given to the bell rope, and then Engineer Payne demanded an explanation. It was then that the baggageman excitedly leaped to the ground, yelling: "Boys, its this elephant. He's been twiddling with the rope for miles back, but I didn't think he had sense enough to give the signals. But he just now grabbed the rope with his trunk and yanked it to beat the band."

It then developed that there were three elephants in the baggage car. The owner of the trio had taught "Mike" a trick of pulling a string which shot off a gun.

"Mike" saw the rope swinging," said the owner, in explaining, "and I suppose he thought he would do a little rehearsing."

Conductor Young expressed his sentiments in forcible Anglo-Saxon to the keeper of the animals, who promised to watch them until the train arrived at Portland.

"Its all right for elephants and rhinos to stop trains down in Africa," Engineer Payne declared today, "but this is an enlightened, Christian country. No Northern Pacific train has ever before been stopped by an elephant."

FARM LABORER'S UNION

Walla Walla Union Says That Efforts to Form One Are Being Made There Now

Quiet efforts are being made by agitators in Walla Walla to form a "Harvesters' Trust" among the workmen who are on the streets waiting for farmers to appear with the offer of a job.

This scheme is worked here once a year, and never has it been successful, so the farmers are paying no attention to the men who are trying to work up this sentiment. Too many men arrive looking for work, and the "union" usually does not outlast the first three days of harvesting.

The first signs that such a move was contemplated again this year were noticed when a tall, hard-working appearing individual moved down the line talking with the prospective harvesters.

Last year a crew working near Prescott struck for higher wages and the owner of the machine let them strike, filling his crew in a short time after reaching the city. The farmers also formed a company and ran their own employment bureau, in this assisting in disrupting the "union."

The "organizer" today evidently met with little encouragement, for according to the police he soon became tired and left.

IMPOUNDS OWN TEAM

E. T. Nobles, a well-known lumberman of Bellingham, is today in the woods to avoid the friends who want to ask him about a little feat he pulled off yesterday.

The firm bought a team of horses Saturday and sent an employ to find a pasture for them over Sunday. He located Noble's pasture, where his fine blooded milkers are kept, and turned in the horses. Noble discovered the animals and wrathfully led them off to the pound, knowing nothing of the firm's buy or that the horses were one-third his property.

He later learned of the true state of affairs, bought a box of cigars and went to the woods until such time as his friends shall forget the incident. Before going to the tall uncut he bailed out the horses and restored them to the green pastures.

SQUAW SAVES WHITES

Indian Maggie Leads Lost People Out of Death Valley to Water and Life

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 4.—Although abandoned to share the fate of her husband, Panamint Joe, an Indian guide, who died while piloting a party of men and women through death valley, Maggie, an Indian squaw, saved the lives of the panic-stricken whites by leading them to water. The story of the rescue was brought here yesterday by Dr. R. A. McDonald, who returned from a trip to the Skidoo mines.

The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. J. Parks, of Beatty, their grown daughter and two men named Worden and Zemki. After the death of Joe, they became frightened, and after deciding to abandon Maggie, for whom there was no room on the horses, started to find a way out of the burning waste. They soon became lost, their water gave out, and the night following made a desolate camp. They were most helpless when Maggie, gaunt and silent, came stalking in among them in the desolate night. She pointed the way to Emigrant Springs, and the men started to get water. They became lost again and the second time Maggie rescued the party. When the men were searching about in a dazed condition, the Indian woman led her exhausted white sisters to the springs, and filling canteens, brought them to the men, who were riding aimlessly about in circles among the trackless sand dunes. Then she put them on the trail leading out of the desert and guided them to safety.

THOMAS F. RYAN TO FARM

Thomas F. Ryan is going in for horse-breeding and dairy farming on his big preserve at Oak Ridge, Va. Mr. Ryan has contracted to spend $40,000 for the purpose of building a large stable, with an exercise track, and a dairy barn which will comfortably house fifty head of cattle. The stable will be a modern one and will have accommodations for fifty thoroughbreds.

Burglars entered the general store and postoffice conducted by Frank Schaffer at Moclipis last week, but secured no valuables, Mr. Schaffer having taken the cash and stamps home with him that evening.

Riggs & Whitehorn, Pasco general merchants, whose store was recently destroyed by fire, are erecting a one-story concrete building on Lewis street, which will be ready for occupancy about July 10.

The Queets Trading Company, doing business at Queets River, in Chehalis and Jefferson counties, has dissolved, W. C. Read retiring, and M. Erickson and H. D. Thompson continuing under the same firm name.

W. C. Coddington & Co., dry goods merchants, have leased the lower floor of the new Masonic Temple building, at Sedro-Woolley, the contract for which was recently awarded. It will cost $10,000, and is to be completed by September 1.

F. W. Ruebenbach is closing out his tailoring establishment at Snohomish, where he has been in business for the past 17 years, and will remove to Kootenai, Idaho, where he will erect a building and open a furnishings store.

The new brick store building being erected by C. I. Hubbard and P. C. Hanson at Cheney is nearly completed. It cost $10,000. The corner room will be occupied by Mr. Hubbard with his stock of groceries and hardware and the other store-room by P. Monk, men's furnishings.

A general removal of stores and other places of business is reported as about to take place at Kiona. The townsite company has platted a new town on the line of the North Coast road about a mile north of the present business center, and many of the merchants have signified their intention of moving as soon as the preparations are completed.

Klamath Falls Herald says: The farmers can now sell their products on the streets of Klamath Falls, the peddlers from Ashland can peddle their fruit and the auctioneers and hawkers can ply their trade undisturbed or without paying a license into the city treasury, for the city council has repealed the hawkers' and peddlers' license ordinance. It was a question whether the ordinance could be enforced if anyone desired to fight it, and, besides, a number of the members of the council were opposed to making the farmers pay a license to come here to dispose of their farm products, and the result was that the whole ordinance was wiped out and the city thrown open for everyone to do business.
